A: You take one handful of water to do Istinshaq and Madmadah. A person can rinse his mouth and wash his nose with the same handful of water. This should be repeated three times. It is narrated on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Zayd that the Prophet (peace be upon him), \(performed Wudu' \(ablution\); he made Madmadah and Istinshaq three times using one handful of water.\) and it is also narrated on the authority of `Aly that he (peace be upon him), \(made Madmadah and Istinshaq three times with three handfuls of water.\) There is no harm if he uses only one or two handfuls. However, it is better to use three handfuls of water due to the two reports mentioned above and the other Hadith to the same effect.

The second and third questions of Fatwa no. 20049

Q 2: Is there an authentically reported Hadith about Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) and Istinshaq (inhaling and exhaling water nasally) during Wudu' (ablution)? If not, what is the ruling on performing Wudu' without doing them?

A: madmadah and Istinshaq were authentically reported by the Prophet's (peace be upon him) statements and deeds, and are included in washing the face. If a person omits one or both of them, their Wudu' is invalid. It is better not to separate them, as this was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q3: With regards to madmadah (rinsing the mouth) and Istinshaq (sniffing water into the nose), is it a prerequisite of ablution to do them in order or is this optional?

A: Making Madmadah and Istinshaq in order is not a prerequisite for 'Wudu' but it is a commendable act.

Fatwa no. 20184

Q: All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Messenger of Allah, his family and Companions.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter that was sent to His Eminence the Mufti from His Honor the Chairman of Damad Council. The letter was transferred to the Committee by the Secretariat-General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 824 dated 24/01/1419 A.H. The question was as follows:

A person contacted our Center and said that he had pulled out some of his teeth because they were decayed as a result of not being regularly cleaned. He fixed nine artificial removable teeth which are not made of gold or silver. The doctor told him that he must remove the artificial teeth and wash them after eating so that they do not emit a foul odor. The question is whether this man must remove the artificial teeth when performing Wudu' (ablution). It may be worth mentioning that it is not difficult for him to remove then install them again after Wudu'. Please enlighten us with your beneficial answer so that we may inform the questioner. May Allah guide you to the best of this world and the Hereafter.

A: After the Committee studied the question, it answered as follows:

The concerned man does not have to remove his artificial teeth for Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) during Wudu'. Rather, he may perform Wudu' while they are in their place. This is because such artificial teeth are just like normal ones; they do not invalidate Madmadah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20336

Q 1: What is the ruling on one who performs Wudu' (ablution) and washes what is obligatory in Wudu' i.e., the face, arms, wipes the head and washes the feet to the ankles, but omitted the Sunnah of Wudu' such as, sniffing, rinsing the mouth and wiping the ears (with wet fingers)?

A: Rinsing the mouth and sniffing the water are obligatory because they are part of the face and because the Prophet (peace be upon him) instructed the Companions to do so. `Abdullah ibn Zayd narrated in the description of how to perform Wudu': \(then the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) entered his hand \(in the container\) and rinsed his mouth and inhaled from one handful \(thrice\)\) Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. It is obligatory to wipe the ears because they are part of the head and because the Prophet (peace be upon him) did so. `Abdullah ibn `Amr (may Allah be pleased with them) narrated describing the Wudu' of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(then he wiped his head and put the \(tip of his\) index fingers

(Part No. 4; Page No. 81)

in both his ears and wiped with his thumbs the outward of his ears\) Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Khuzaymah ranked it as Sahih (authentic). Whoever does not rinse or sniff, then his Wudu' is not valid, and whoever does not wipe the inside and outside of the ears, the Wudu' is not valid.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20617

Q 1: I usually make Wudu' (ceremonial ablution) in accordance with what is related from the Prophet (peace be upon him), washing the bodily parts of ablution thrice except for the head and ears which I wash once. Recently, I was afflicted with an allergy which necessitates that I sniff water more than five times after I complete Wudu' because it relieves the severe inflammation in my nose caused by the allergy. I know that adding to ablution is impermissible, but with regard to my case what should I do? Please reply, May Allah reward you!

A: Sniffing water up the nose many times after finishing Wudu'

in order to relieve the inflammation in your nose, taking into consideration that this is not from Wudu', is not a problem. However, if you are fasting, do not exaggerate by sniffing water all the way up into your nose for this is not permitted for the fasting person. Moreover, it is an act of Sunnah not to exaggerate in sniffing water into the nose for the fasting person, lest water may enter into the throat. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(And sniff with water strongly except if you are fasting\) Related by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah and Al-Tirmidhi. Al-Tirmidhi said: This Hadith is Hasan (good) and Sahih (authentic).

The second question of Fatwa no. 20628

Q 2: while performing wudu' (ablution), my mother does not make Istinshaq (inhaling and exhaling water nasally) and Madmadah (rinsing the mouth), and does not wash her two hands up to the elbows or wipe her head properly. Are istinshaq and Madmadah obligatory during performing Wudu'? What is the ruling on the way my mother performs Wudu'? It should be known that I have tried to show her how to perform Wudu', but she is not convinced. Please advise and tell whether her Salah (Prayer) is valid or not and substantiate your answer with sufficient proofs.

A: Making Istinshaq and Madmadah, washing the hands up to the elbows, and wiping the whole head from the tip of the forehead until all the way back up to the neck are obligatory for Wudu' to be valid. None of these parts should be overlooked intentionally or forgetfully, otherwise the Wudu' is nullified. You have to teach your mother how to perform Wudu' properly, advise her kindly, and explain the reports mentioned in this regard. You should also urge her to make sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for performing Wudu' the wrong way and not to return to this act. May Allah pardon what she did previously due to her ignorance.

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 20769

Q 1: While talking about Wudu' (ablution), you have said that it is sufficient to wash the thick beard with water, while the light beard should be combed from underneath with wet fingers. I hope Your Eminence could point out the ruling in this regard.

A: If the beard is thick so that the complexion behind it could not be seen, it is sufficient to wash it from outside even though it is better to comb it from underneath with wet fingers and make water reach the roots of the hair. However, if the beard is light so that the complexion behind it could be seen, the water should be admitted to the roots of the hair.

Q2: Is it permissible for one to use a towel to dry oneself after performing ablution? Does this depend on weather conditions, or is it a general ruling?

A: the use of a towel to dry oneself after performing ablution or Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity) or not using one are both permissible. The scope of permissibility is broad in this regard, praise be to Allah. However, it is best not to use a towel after Ghusl to be in keeping with the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 2: My hand was amputated from the elbow and an artificial hand made of nylon was fastened to my forearm. Because unfastening this artificial hand requires much effort, must I unfasten it every time I perform Wudu' (ablution), or is it sufficient to wipe it with water? Kindly give me a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A: If there is a part of the elbow still uncut, you must wash it, as the elbow has to be washed along with the hand, which applies to its remaining part.

Allah (Exalted be He) stated: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) It is not enough to wash the artificially fastened limb unless it is difficult to unfasten it, in which case, you may wipe it to avoid hardship and difficulty.

However, if the elbow is entirely cut, you will have to do nothing as the limb is totally inexistent.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17783

Q 2: During Wudu' (ablution) we observed that some people wipe their head once while others wipe it three times; which is correct?

A: It is prescribed to wipe the head once, because of the Hadith of `Uthman ibn `Affan, `Aly and `Abdullah ibn Zayd (may Allah be pleased with them). They mentioned in the Hadith that the Prophet (peace be upon him) rinsed his mouth, sniffed water into his nostrils and then out, and then washed his face, arms and feet three times each and did not mention a certain number for wiping the head. In some narrations it is confirmed that he (peace be upon him) wiped his head once. As for the narration stating that the head is to be wiped with water three times, it is Shadh (a Hadith narrated by a trustworthy narrator, not in line with the narration of other trustworthy narrators in terms of wording, chain of narrators, or both) and in contradiction to the relevant Sahih (authentic) Hadith.

Q: Allah decreed that I have an accident which resulted in the loss of my left hand and part of the arm. Your Honor, my problem began after I got a prosthesis arm which covers the amputated part of my arm. Since the nature of my work as a doctor requires that I spend almost ten hours a day at work, I perform Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in the hospital. When I perform ablution, I find great difficulty in removing the artificial limb and the clothes that cover it because the prosthesis arm is fixed with bands under the clothes on the right side of my body.

Is it permissible for me to wipe over the artificial limb instead of washing the remaining part of my left elbow that is inside the prosthesis as I find great difficulty in removing the hand? We appreciate your advice, may Allah reward you!

A: if part of the amputated limb that has to be washed in ablution remains, it must be washed. It is not sufficient to wipe over the artificial limb even if it covers all the remaining part of the hand. It must be removed when performing ablution or Ghusl. However, if you feel great difficulty in removing it to perform ablution, it is permissible to wipe over it just as you wipe over a cast. You should show patience and place your trust in Allah. May Allah reward you greatly for endurance of this affliction.

Third question of Fatwa no. 19405

Q 3: on performing Wudu' (ablution), is it sufficient that I wipe my scarf, or must I remove it and wipe my head, i.e. my hair? May Allah reward you with the best.

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) for a Muslim to wipe the head along with the ears with water other than the remnant of what was used for washing the hands. One must wet the hands then wipe the entire head along with their ears. A proof for this is Allah's (Exalted be He) statement regarding the obligatory acts of Wudu': \(rub \(by passing wet hands over\) your heads\) The ears are part of the head as the Ba' (B) letter in Allah's statement Biru'usikum: \(\(by passing wet hands over\) your heads\) is for Ilsaq (combining). Consequently, it is not sufficient to wipe the head while it

Q 3: Is it permissible to perform Wudu' (ablution) without washing the ears from inside for fear of harm? If it is not permissible, what is the ruling on a person who performed Salah (Prayer) with this Wudu' without knowing the number of times he performed it?

A: wiping the ears with water from both inside and outside is one of the obligatory acts of Wudu'. However, if a person thinks that it is more likely that wiping their ears will cause them harm, they are permitted not to wipe their ears and to perform Tayammum (dry ablution) instead after finishing Wudu'.

Q 1: My left leg was amputated to the knee and I fixed an artificial limb in its place. When I perform Wudu' (ablution), I wipe over the shoe which is fixed to my foot, but not covering the ankle. Is it permissible for me to wipe over the artificial limb although it does not cover both ankles, or should I wipe over the leg after taking off the shoes? Or is it impermissible for me to wipe over the artificial limb? Likewise, when I take a shower, I take off the artificial limb and make Wudu', but when I finish the bath, I forget to wipe over the limb. Am I sinful for this? Kindly clarify this matter for me. May Allah preserve you!

A: You do not have to wash the artificial limb or wipe over it when making Wudu', because the leg which should be wiped over no longer exists. As for Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge), you have only to wash the remaining part of the leg. May Allah compensate you for your loss and grant you a great reward!

Q 1: Al-Qahtany (may Allah be merciful with him) says in his poem known as Al-Nuniyyah:

Do not follow the Rafidah sect, for they believe that feet should be wiped in Wudu`.
They misinterpret an abrogated reading by another, although both are revealed.
One was revealed to abrogate the other,
but both are recorded in reports
The Prophet and his Companions washed their feet, and this fact is indisputable.
The brilliant Sunnah may qualify the Qur'an.

What is the abrogated reading?

A: washing the feet in wudu' (ablution) is authentically proven in the Qur'an and Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet).

(Part No. 4; Page No. 90)

Indeed, this case has no place for Naskh (abrogation). Allah (Exalted be He) says in Surah Al-Ma'idah: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces and your hands (forearms) up to the elbows, rub (by passing wet hands over) your heads, and (wash) your feet up to ankles.﴾

We do not know that Naskh has any place in this act. If the poet refers to Allah's Saying: ﴿and (wash) your feet﴾ in a genitive form thinking that it was abrogated, he is mistaken. The two ways of recitation in the genitive and accusative forms have been recurrently and decisively related. There is no doubt about the recitation using the accusative form. As for the genitive form, the soundest opinion is that the word is in the genitive form because it is preceded by Allah's Saying: ﴿(by passing wet hands over) your heads﴾ which is in the accusative form as well for the sake of linguistic harmony. Linguists state that this style is acceptable, as the Arabs used it in their poetry and prose. For more information, refer to grammar books.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 2: Some people said that it is not necessary to perform Wudu' (ablution) in order, so it is permissible to wash the feet before the hands or face. They also claimed that Istinja' (cleansing one's private parts with water after urination or defecation) is not necessary as long as one has not urinated. Likewise, it is not required to be done on waking up from sleep. We hope that your Eminence will enlighten us concerning this issue, so that we will be sure of matters of importance in our religion. May Allah grant you success!

A: It is obligatory to follow the prescribed order of Wudu' starting with washing the face, two hands and elbows, wiping the head and two ears and then washing the feet and heels as related in the honorable Ayah (Al-Ma'idah: 6) and in accordance with what the Prophet (peace be upon him) did. Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(I will begin with that with which Allah began \(i.e., mentioned first in the Qur'an\).\) As for Istinja', it is not part of Wudu', but it is a kind of removing impurity that is done after urination or defecation and before performing Wudu'. However, if a long period intervenes between Istinja' and Wudu', a Muslim is not required to repeat Istinja' when performing Wudu'. Likewise, Istinja' is not prescribed in cases such as sleeping, passing wind and the like.

The third question of Fatwa no. 20196

If while performing Wudu' (ablution), I forget to wash a small part of a limb that must be washed during Wudu', which I remembered immediately after Wudu'. Should I repeat Wudu' in this case, or is it enough to wash the part I forget?

A: One of the conditions of Wudu' is washing all the parts in close sequence. Thus, if a person forgets to wash a limb required in Wudu', or even a small part of it, and remembers it while performing Wudu' or immediately after when the washed parts are still wet, they may wash the part they forgot and the subsequent limbs only. However, if they remember having forgotten to wash a limb that is required to be washed during Wudu', or even a small part of it, after it is dry, or while or after performing Salah (Prayer), they should repeat Wudu' as prescribed by Allah and perform the whole Salah again. This is because the condition of washing the required body parts in sequence was not met. Moreover, Allah made it obligatory that all the required body parts should be washed during Wudu'. Accordingly, whoever omits even a very small area of a limb, it is as if it were wholly omitted. This is supported by the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) saw a person performing Wudu' \(ablution\), but he left a nail-size space on his feet \(unwashed\). The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) commanded him to repeat the Wudu' and Salah. The man went back and repeated Salah.» (Related by Ibn Majah in his Sunan) Moreover, Imam Ahmad and Abu Dawud related a Hadith similar in meaning.

Q 3: what is the ruling when a person performs wudu' (ablution) and when he finishes his Salah (Prayer), he discovers that he had forgotten to wash an organ whether obligatory or supererogatory?

A: Anyone who remembers that he has forgotten to wash an organ after finishing Salah must repeat Wudu' and Salah as well because cleanliness is a precondition to the validity of Salah. Taharah (ritual purification) can not be fulfilled except when all organs a person can wash are washed. The voluntary Salah is equally the same as the obligatory Salah except that it is not obligatory to make up for the voluntary Salah.

My name is `A.M.`A and I am over one hundred years old. I have two injuries, one in the right thigh and the other is a fracture in my left thigh. As a result, I cannot perform Wudu' (ablution) to offer Salah (Prayer) and my children carry me from my chair to the bed so that I can pray while lying in the bed. Furthermore, I perform Tayammum (dry ablution) instead of Wudu', bearing in mind that one of my children only sprinkles water on the place of impurity without rubbing it. I would like inform you that I urinate while in bed, and in many times drops of urine soil my clothes. Kindly give us the legal Fatwa regarding how to perform Taharah (ceremonial purification) and Salah in this condition. May Allah reward you and protect you!

A: It is obligatory upon you to remove feces by means of Istijmar (cleansing the private parts with a solid material after urination or defecation) until all the traces of stool are removed, provided that you do this for three times or more. Likewise, you should wipe the tip of the penis with a napkin three times or more after passing urine, and it is sufficient for you to wash the penis with water. As for the soiled parts of your body and clothes, they should be washed with water by your wife or any of your children or others. If the time of Salah is due and there is no one nearby to wash the traces of urine from your clothes and body, you are permitted to perform Salah with no blame on you, and afterwards they should be washed. Furthermore, you must perform Wudu' by washing your face and hands and wiping over your head, ears as well as washing your feet, whether you do this yourself, or any of your children helps you do it. However, if you cannot wash your four body parts, and there is no one to help you perform Wudu', it is permissible for you to perform Tayammum (dry ablution). We ask Allah to make our end and yours good and cure you! May Allah give you great reward!

Q 2: There is a girl who follows the instructions of Islam well, as we notice In sha'a-Allah. Whenever this girl goes to the bathroom to relieve herself or make Wudu' (ablution), she says that she feels water from the bathroom floor splashing on her. She says: It is impossible to believe it is pure water. It is worth mentioning that she washes the bathroom floor before using it and she repeats Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and Wudu' many times. Sometimes, she cries for fear that she does not clean herself properly. Once, some people watched her making Wudu' and told her that her Wudu' was valid, but she said that no one can guarantee that impure water does not splash on her. The problem became bigger and bigger until her body became weak. The same case is happening also during her Salah where she doubts the number of Rak`ahs or doubts that anything might occur which will affect the validity of her Salah. Could you kindly advise us in this regard?

A: What is happening to this girl is due to Satanic insinuations. She must ignore it and seek refuge in Allah from Satan for it will not harm her In sha'a-Allah.

Q 4: Your Eminence, I have a friend who has the following problem:

He says that each time he enters the bathroom, does Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) well, and goes to perform Wudu' (ablution), he finds drops on his penis which he thinks to be drops of urine. These drops cause him disturbance and make him doubtful about the validity of Wudu' and the cleanliness of his clothing. He, therefore, has to perform Wudu' again and changes his clothing. What is your opinion on this issue?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, the apparent situation is that the said person has insinuations and doubts which he has to disregard. They are from Satan whose aim is to spoil the acts of worship of the Muslim. It is recommended for him to splash some water on his pants after finishing Wudu' so as to end any insinuations.

Q 5: after performing Wudu' (ablution), I feel some dripping of urine. When I search, I sometimes see it and sometimes not. I am afraid that I suffer from urinary incontinence. Please advise concerning the lawful treatment of this condition.

A: This is an insinuation by Satan. You should ignore it unless you are sure that there are drops of urine. In this case, you should repeat Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and Wudu', according to the statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him) when he was asked about a person who imagined to have passed wind during Salah (Prayer). He (peace be upon him) replied, "He should not interrupt Salah unless he hears a sound or smells something." (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Wiping over leather socks

The second, third and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 13842

Q2: If one removes leather socks then sleeps in ordinary socks, is it permissible to wear the leather socks again and continue wiping over them?

A: if one puts on the leather socks after performing ablution and wipes over them, then removes them and leaves the ordinary socks on, he is no longer in a state of purity, and wiping over the leather socks is therefore no longer valid.

Q 3: If one wipes over Khuffs (leather socks) after the expiry of the time for wiping over them; what is the ruling on the validity of the Salah (Prayer) in this case?

A: If a resident wipes over Khuffs for more than one day and night, or if a traveler does so for more than three days and nights; wiping beyond this time limit is invalid. Wudu' and Salah in this case must be repeated.

Q 4: What is the ruling on taking off Khuffs (leather socks) to take out something harmful in them and then putting them on again?

A: if someone takes off Khuffs because of something harmful in them, Wudu' (ablution) will be invalidated. Such a person has to perform Wudu' anew and then wear the Khuffs.

Fatwa no. 14053

Q: I performed Wudu' (ablution), put on my socks, then nullified my Wudu'. I then put on another pair of socks over the first pair; is it permissible to wipe over them or should I take them off and wipe over the first, or should I take them both off and wash the feet? The same situation occurred , but this time I had two pairs of socks on together. I invalidated my Wudu' (e.g. passing wind, urine, or stool) and took off the second pair of socks; is it permissible to wipe over the remaining pair or should I take them off as well and wash my feet?

A: First: if one puts on socks while in a state of ceremonial purity then invalidates Wudu' (by passing wind, urine or stool) and puts on another pair of socks, he should wipe over the first pair; for it is the pair that was worn while in a pure state.

Second: If one puts on two pairs of socks while in a state of ceremonial purity, then invalidates Wudu' and removes the upper pair, it is permissible to wipe over the inner pair of socks, as it was worn while in a state of ceremonial purity.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16123

Q 2: is it permissible to wipe over the Khuffs (leather socks) without an excuse, whether cold or illness, but just for being unable to take them off?

A: It is permissible to wipe over the Khuffs if they cover the feet and the ankles, and you wear them after performing Wudu' (ablution), even if it is not cold. The wiping period is a day and a night for a resident, and three days and nights for a traveling person. And Allah knows best.

Fatwa no. 17201

Q: Many people wipe over Khuff (leather socks) to make Wudu' (ablution) for Dawn (Fajr) Prayer. Then they wear Khuff and on Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer they wipe over this Khuff and take it off and pray and wear the Khuff. Therefore, they count day and night from Zhuhr Prayer. Also, they may wipe over their Khuff on `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and take them off and pray `Asr Prayer and after that they wear their Khuff, so they count day and night from `Asr Prayer. Is this right?

A: If a person wears socks or Khuff after making Wudu' for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer then he wipes the first time when making Wudu' for Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, the period of wiping starts from the first time he wipes over his socks or Khuff. The period of wiping is that a resident is permitted to wipe over the socks for a night and a traveler is permitted to wipe over the socks for three nights.

If the person takes off the socks or the Khuff after wiping over it after having Hadath (minor or major impurities), the state of purity of this person will be broken, according to the majority of scholars.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17839

Q 2: Wiping over leather socks is permissible according to the Sunnah, is it permissible for a person to wipe over socks that are not made of leather?

A: It is permissible to wipe over all that covers the feet whether leather or thick socks; because the Prophet (peace be upon him) wiped over the leather and thick socks after wearing them in a state of ritual purity and ordered the Sahabah (Companions) to wipe over the leather socks a day and a night for a resident and three days and nights for a traveler.

Q 1: While I was making Wudu' (ablution), I wiped over my shoes which I wore without socks, then after making Wudu', I took them off and went to perform Salah (Prayer). After I finished Salah, I put them on while in a state of Taharah (ritual purification). Your Eminence, I would like to ask you concerning this matter; is it permissible for me to wipe over my shoes next time and for the period of one day and night or not?

A: It is permissible to wipe over the Khuff (leather socks) or the socks which cover the place to be washed. However, it is not permissible to wipe over the shoes which do not fully cover the place where it is obligatory to make 'Wudu'. Therefore, you should repeat this Salah as you did not wipe over in the correct manner.

Q 4: Someone wore socks while they were Tahir (ritually pure) then entered the state of minor ritual impurity, then wiped over the socks then entered the state of minor ritual impurity again then took the socks off then wore them; can they wipe over them?

A: If a person puts on socks while not being in a state of Taharah (ritual purification), it will not be permissible for them to wipe over them. This is because putting on socks while being in a state of Taharah is a prerequisite for wiping over them as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to Al-Mughirah ibn Shu`bah (may Allah be pleased with him) when the latter wanted to help the Prophet take off his Khuff (leather socks): «Leave them, for I have performed Wudu' \(ablution\) before putting them on.»

Q 2: if a person performs Wudu' (ablution) and wipes over a pair of socks then puts on a second pair of socks, is it permissible to wipe over the outer one only when performing Wudu' again?

Q: If a person doubts the time of beginning wiping over the socks or Khuff (leather socks); what should he do?

Q4: if i take the socks down to make it fit on my feet or to wear another pair, would that invalidate my ablution or my wiping over the socks? If I put on the socks then the duration of wiping elapses while I am still in a state of purity, should I perform ablution?

A: After wiping on the socks, if you take your socks off to fix them then a part of your foot shows, even if a small part, then you have a minor ritual impurity after wearing the socks, your ablution is nullified. Consequently, the ruling of wiping on the socks becomes invalid and the socks must be taken off. If the time of Salah is due, you have to perform ablution and it is not lawful for you to offer Salah with your earlier ablution before taking the socks off. Likewise if after wiping on the socks, you take them off to exchange them, it will be impermissible to wipe on the new socks even if you put them on in a state of purity, as it nullifies ablution. Consequently, you have to repeat a full ablution and wash all the organs including the feet. After that you may wear the socks and have a new duration for wiping on them. But if you mean wearing another pair of socks on the first pair without taking the first pair off, then if you wear the new pair in the previous state of purity before wearing the old pair, that is before you wipe on the old pair, the ruling of wiping will be for the upper pair of socks. If you wear the new pair of socks on the old pair after wiping on the old pair, the ruling will be for the first old pair. In this case before you wipe on them, you have to take the new pair off then wipe on the old one; because one of the conditions of wiping on the leather socks is that the person should wear them in a state of ritual purity after washing all the organs of ablution.

Q 4: Respected Shaykh, you mentioned in the chapter on wiping over Khuffs (leather socks) that it is permissible for a woman to wipe over her Khimar (veil covering to the waist), what is the basis that substantiates this ruling?

A: It is permissible for a woman to wipe over her Khimar that she wears over her head and is wrapped under her jaw for one day and night if she has not taken it off as long as she finds difficulty in taking it off to perform Wudu' (ablution) and hence it is treated like a turban. It is authentically reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that it is permissible to wipe over the turban and Khuffs whether one is traveling or residing, and it is reported from Um Salamah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she used to wipe over her Khimar.

Things that invalidate Wudu'

Q 1: I have been suffering from continuous passing wind accompanied with noise in my belly for more than ten years. It is very embarrassing for me in the presence of people. I cannot offer Salah (Prayer) with Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship). I tried hard to seek treatment, but it was of no use. Can I offer Salah at home in this case? Can I hold the Mus-haf (Arabic Qur'an) to read in it whether directly or through a barrier? I cannot remain Tahir (ritually pure) all day because of passing wind. Should I perform Wudu' (ablution) before I sleep or not? Please advise in detail. May Allah gather us in the highest level of Jannah (Paradise). Amen.

A: You should offer congregational Salah even if you have noise in your belly. If you do not pass gas, the grumbling stomach does not invalidate taharah (ritual purity). However, if you pass gas, your Wudu' will be invalidated, and you should perform Taharah to offer Salah and hold the Mus-haf. It is a Sunnah (a commendable act) to perform Wudu' before sleep.

Q 2: Does passing gas nullify Wudu' (ablution) or not?

A: passing gas nullifies Wudu' according to the religious texts and consensus of Muslim scholars. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said about a person who feels something like this in his Salah, \(He should not leave \(prayer\) until he hears a sound or smells an odor \(of passing wind\)\). Related by Al-Bukhari. The Hadith means that he should not leave Salah until he makes sure that he really passed gas and this indicates that it nullifies Wudu'. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(When any of you passes gas during the Salah \(prayer\), he should turn away, perform Wudu' \(ablution\) and repeat the Salah \(prayer\)\). Related by Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan (authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) and Ibn Hibban ranked it as Sahih (authentic).

Q: It has been a long time since I first experienced frequent gas passing from my vagina. As a result I always repeat Wudu' (ablution) and Salah (Prayer) over and over. I have great difficulty performing Wudu' again, what should I do?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 108)

Does passing this gas nullify Wudu'? If so, what should I do? It is worth mentioning that I sometimes repeat Wudu' five or even eight times and I cannot perform Salah in a state of tranquility fearing that I may pass this gas. What is the ruling on the Salah I performed previously while I pass gas after repeating Wudu' for several times? Please guide me, may Allah reward you

A: The following is the medical report submitted to the committee concerning this issue:

1. the air which emits from the vagina is a simple and common disease that women suffer from. It occurs as a result of numerous childbirths cause the vagina to widen. When a woman sits , lies on her back, or has sexual intercourse, air comes into her vagina. When the bowels are squeezed, for example when coughing, lifting heavy objects, or standing up, air emits producing a sound similar to the wind coming from the anus.

However, what emits from the vagina is common air which has nothing to do with gas or wastes. Surgery to narrow the vagina can be performed to get rid of this problem.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 109)

2. This woman should be examined by a specialist to make sure that she does not suffer from vaginal fistula (an abnormal opening between the back wall of the vagina and the large intestines). This disease causes the gases to leak from the large intestines and is emitted from the vagina. Surgery is required to close this opening as the gases passing through the opening are wind which nullifies Wudu'.

She should be examined by a gynecologist to make sure whether she has vaginal fistula or not. If she has this disease, she can have surgery to eliminate this problem. And Allah knows best.

According to the above mentioned report, the committee replied that the gas passing from the women's vagina occurs in two cases:

The first case: It happens as a result of the frequent childbirths which lead to the vagina widening. The air comes into her vagina for certain reasons; such as sitting down, laying on the back, etc. and emits when the position changes producing a sound that has nothing to do with gases or wastes. Therefore, that air does not nullify Wudu'.

The second case: It happens as a result of the gases leakage from the large intestines to emit from the vagina because of the vaginal fistula. In this case the gas nullifies Wudu' as it is as actual gas which emits from other than the normal place.

Only the gynecologists and specialists can determine which case applies to the woman.

Q 1: a man offers `Isha' (Night) Prayer and Shaf` (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer). While he is offering Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), he passes gas, should he repeat Wudu' to repeat Shaf` and Witr or not?

A: A person should repeat only Witr if he is offering it on its own when he passes gas. However, he should repeat them, if he is offering Shaf` and Witr together and he passes gas before saying Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). It is worth mentioning that Shaf` and Witr are Sunnah, not obligatory acts.

Q 2: After having performed Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ritual impurity), I went to perform Salah (Prayer). While offering Salah, I felt the discharge of Madhy (pre-seminal fluid). What is the ruling on this Salah? Do I have to repeat Ghusl or leave the Salah to perform Wudu' and then repeat Salah? Please give me a fatwa. May Allah reward you!

A: If you are certain that something emitted from the private parts after performing Wudu' it is invalidated and you will have to repeat your Wudu'. If this takes place during Salah, you must leave it and repeat Wudu'. However, if you are not certain, the basic rule is that you remain ceremonially pure because certitude is not cancelled by doubt.

Q 2: I heard that the sick must use water in purification whether in the case of Al-Hadath Al-Asghar or Al-Hadath Al-Akbar. what is meant by Al-Hadath Al-Asghar and Al-Hadath Al-Akbar?

A: Al-Hadath Al-Asghar (Minor ritual impurity) includes everything, which necessitates Wudu' (ablution) not Ghusl (ritual bath) such as urination, defecation, passing gas, eating camel meat and sleeping.

Al-Hadath Al-Akbar refers to matters that entail performing Ghusl such as sexual intercourse, discharging semen out of sexual lust in a wet dream or anything else, menstruation and childbirth bleeding.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18799

Q 2: Do nosebleeds nullify Wudu' (ablution) and Salah (Prayer) or not?

A: Impure matters that come out through any opening from human body other than the urethra and anus, but are neither urine nor stool, such as nosebleeds, vomit, wounds, and the like do not nullify Wudu' as long as they are not in much quantity, for the Hadith reported by Abu Al-Darda' \(that the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) once vomited and then he performed Wudu' \(ablution\)\). According to Ibn `Abbas, (may Allah be pleased with him both): "If the blood flows in large quantities, it (Wudu') should be repeated." However, if only a small amount of blood is discharged, Wudu' will not be nullified. This is the opinion of a group of Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) such as Ibn `Abbas, Abu Hurayrah, and Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) and no one of the Sahabah disputed over this point. This opinion finds further support among a group of Tabi'un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet). It is authentically reported on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) that he squeezed a sinus until blood came out of it, and he performed Salah without performing Wudu'. However, it is inferred that the blood that came out was little.

Q 3- I read in the books of Fiqh that sleeping while firmly seated does not nullify Wudu' (ablution).

On the other hand, sleeping in a position where a person is not firmly seated does nullify Wudu'. We also heard that sleeping in general nullifies Wudu'. What is your opinion concerning this issue?

A: The preponderant opinion in this regard is that the sleeping which causes a person to lose the senses is what nullifies Wudu', whether standing, sitting or lying down. However, dozing while one retains full awareness does not nullify Wudu'. Accordingly, we can reconcile between the Hadiths reported in this regard such as the Hadith narrated by Safwan ibn `Assal (may Allah be pleased with him) who said that: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) ordered them that they should wipe over socks on a journey for three days unless they are in a state of major impurity. However, in case of defecation, urination, and sleep, they are permitted to do so.\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) considered sleeping like defecation and urination and did not differentiate between them.

A: What nullifies Wudu' is touching the anterior and posterior private parts with naked hands; however touching them with a barrier does not nullify Wudu'. Thus, if you were in a state of ritual purity before having your bath, and you did not touch your private parts with your naked hands, or touched them with a barrier, and nothing came out from the urethra or anus, your Wudu' will not be nullified.

Q 1: Some of the contemporary scholars argue that touching one's wife does not nullify Wudu' (ablution). Their view rests on the Hadith reported by Abu Dawud on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that \(the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) kissed one of his wives and went out to offer Salah \(Prayer\) without performing Wudu' again.\) Could this be a supporting evidence to the holders of this view or is this act peculiar to the Prophet (peace be upon him) on account that he did not declare this? `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) also narrated: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to kiss \(his wives\) while observing Sawm \(Fast\); and he had the greatest control over his desire \(as compared with you\).\)

As for Wudu' being nullified by what comes out of the urethra and anus through an opening in the stomach, there is no disagreement regarding this except what was stated by the Shaykh of Islam and Al-Muwaffaq in "Al-Mughny" from some of the Maliki jurists. There is no disagreement that Wudu' is nullified by what comes out of the urethra and anus. Ibn Taymiyyah stated: "If a person has a disease that prevents the urine and stool from coming out of the urethra and anus and another opening is made in their body for the discharge of their excretions as is the case with some people, this does not nullify Wudu'." Accordingly, is Wudu' Mustahab (desirable) or Wajib (obligatory) in this case?

A: First, according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars, if a man touches his wife directly, this does not nullify Wudu', whether he touches her lustfully or not, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) kissed one of his wives and went for Salah without performing Wudu' again. Moreover, whenever the Prophet (peace be upon him) made Sujud (prostration) while standing for optional Prayer at night, he used to touch `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) with his fingertips to withdraw her legs due to the narrowness of the place, then he would prostrate. It would also impose a lot of hardship if Wudu' was required whenever a man touches his wife, so if it really nullifies Wudu', the Prophet (peace be upon him) would have explained it. As for Allah's Saying in Surahs Al-Nisa' and Al-Ma'idah: \(Or you have been in contact with women\) this refers to conjugal intercourse, according to the more correct of the two opinions maintained by scholars. This was reported by some of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) and Tabi'un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet) may Allah be pleased with them all.

Second, whatever comes out from other than the urethra and anus, such as blood, vomit, and the like, does not nullify Wudu' according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars, unless it is foul and Najis (ritually impure). Urine and stool absolutely nullify Wudu', whether they come out of the regular exit or not.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 16312

Q 1: does drinking camel milk nullify Wudu' (ablution)?

A: Drinking camel milk does not nullify Wudu'. In fact, eating

camel meat nullifies Wudu' as is mentioned in a Hadith. On the authority of Al-Bara' ibn `Azib (may Allah be pleased with him) who narrated: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) was asked about performing Wudu' after eating camel meat. He replied: Perform Wudu' after eating it.\) (Related by Abu Dawud) Also, Muslim related in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith on the authority of Jabir ibn Samurah (may Allah be pleased with him): \(A man asked the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) whether he should perform Wudu' after \(eating\) mutton. He \(the Prophet\) said: Perform Wudu' if you so desire. He \(again\) asked: Should I perform Wudu' \(after eating\) camel meat? He said: Yes.\)

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 19591

Q 5: When I read about the things that do not invalidate Wudu' (ablution), they included eating camel meat, even though I had read that: (A man asked the Prophet (peace be upon him), "Shall we perform Wudu' after eating camel meat?" The Prophet replied, "Yes.") How can we explain this contradiction?

A: eating camel meat invalidates Wudu' as authentically reported in the Hadith. The contradictory opinions of some scholars are not taken into account.

Q 6: why does eating camel meat invalidate wudu' (ablution)?

A: Eating camel meat in particular invalidates Wudu' according to the most authentic opinions of scholars, as proved by Sahih (authentic) Hadiths. The wisdom is devotional, and we are not required to know the wisdom behind it. We should believe in the rulings of Shari`ah (Islamic law) and apply them, even if we do not understand the wisdom behind them, while believing that Allah (Glorified be He) is the All-Wise, the All-Knowing. However, the scholars mentioned that part of the wisdom behind it is that camels have some sort of evil influence, envy, and a tendency to harm those who abuse them. If a person eats their meat, they acquire some of their traits, so Wudu' is prescribed in order to nullify this effect.

A 8: if a person doubts whether he has performed Wudu' (ablution) or not, does this nullify their Wudu'? Also if I doubt whether I have offered Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer or not, should I offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer to clear my doubts up or ignore the doubts and do what I am certain of? If I realize that I was wrong in guessing the direction of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah), should I repeat my Salah?

A: First: If a person performs Wudu' then doubts whether he becomes in a state of impurity or not, the rule is that he is still in a state of purity as long as there is no proof that he entered the state of impurity. They should consider what they are certain of and disregard doubts.

If the person has not performed Wudu' then doubts whether they have performed Wudu' or not, the rule is that they have not performed Wudu' unless there is proof that makes them certain of performing Wudu'. They should consider what they are certain of, i.e. not performing Wudu'.

The rule of Shari`ah in this regard is that certainty is not cleared up by doubts. The rule is that a status quo continues until it is proven to be nullified.

Second: If a person doubts whether he has performed Salah (Prayer) or not, the rule is he has not offer it until he is certain of offering it.

Third: If a person does not find anyone to tell him about the direction of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah), cannot find it on his own, and guessed it, then offered Salah, then later on, found out that he was wrong in his guess, this person does not have to repeat Salah and his Salah is valid, and praise be to Allah.

But if this person ignores asking people about it or finding it on his own, then finds out that he has been wrong in his guess, his Salah (Prayer) will not be valid and he has to repeat it.

Q 3: Does shaking hands with a non-Muslim nullify Wudu' (ablution)?

A: shaking hands with a non-Muslim does not nullify Wudu'. The Najasah (impurity) of the non-Muslim is Hukmiyyah (ceremonial impurity without discernable characteristics) not `Ayniyyah (ceremonial impurity with discernable characteristics), and therefore your Wudu' does not become invalid by shaking hands with them.

Q 2: if one touches dough, does his Wudu' (ablution) become null and void? May Allah reward you!

A: Touching dough does not nullify Wudu', for it is not one of the nullifiers of Wudu'. However, if there is a piece of dough on any body part that one has to wash during Wudu' and one performs Wudu' without removing it, Wudu' would be invalid.

The second question of Fatwa No. (17661)

Q 2: Is there a type of injection used by patients that may invalidate Wudu' (ablution)? Is it obligatory for a patient who bleeds from the spot where he was injected to perform Wudu' in order to remain in the state of ceremonial purity he was in prior to the injection? What is the ruling if one sees blood from the injected area on one's garment after performing Salah (Prayer)? Is it obligatory to repeat the Salah in this case? Please respond, may Allah reward you!

A: injections do not invalidate Wudu'. Moreover, the discharge of a small amount of blood from the area where one was injected is negligible. If one sees traces of blood on one's garment after performing Salah having not known of it before, or having known but he forgets and remembers only after Salah, it is not obligatory to repeat the Salah. If the blood is a small amount, it will be pardonable regardless of whether one knows of it or not.

Q 1: When I am in a state of Wudu' (ablution) and enter the toilet, not to relieve myself but just to bring items used for cleaning, would my Wudu' be invalidated? It should be noted that I only enter the bathroom for a very short time. What should I do in this case?

A: Merely entering the toilet and exiting it does not invalidate Wudu', because nothing occurs that nullifies Wudu'. There are other matters that are known to nullify Wudu', such as urinating or defecating, or the discharge of any impure substance emitted from the body in a relatively large quantity,

Q 4: In the early morning hours after midnight on the seventh day of Dhul-Hijjah, I circumambulated and performed Sa`i (going between Safa and Marwah) with the Wudu' (ablution) I performed for `Isha (Night) Prayer. Prior to Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, I intended to renew my Wudu' but I could not because of the crowd. I lost my family and did not find them except after the end of Salah, and feeling exhausted I did not renew my Wudu' nor perform Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Afterwards, I offered Salah without performing Wudu' lest I might lose my family again. Did I nullify my Wudu' when I intended to renew it? It is worth mentioning that I did not sleep, I only intended to renew my Wudu' to offer Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. If it was nullified, is there any sin on me in this case?

A: intending to renew Wudu' does not nullify the previous one. As long as none of the nullifiers of Wudu' occurred, your Salah is valid.

Fatwa no. 19660

Q: What is the ruling on one who performs Wudu' (ablution) to perform Salah (Prayer) then washes his entire body with water? Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: If a person performs Wudu' for Salah, then washes the entire body, there is nothing wrong in this, whether done for the purpose of cooling off, cleaning oneself or the like. Moreover, Wudu' is not nullified by this matter as long as one does not touch the `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public), i.e. the genitals and the back private parts, for the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(He who touches his penis must perform ablution\) Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhi, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah). The first question of Fatwa no. 13840

Q 1: An incident happened to me when I was still a young man; I had an uncle who was like a father to me. He raised me very well; he was very religious and pious and I never heard a bad word from him. This uncle died, may Allah be merciful with him, and it was my father who conveyed to me the bad news of his death. He asked me to go along with him to offer funeral prayer over my uncle. At this particular time, I was in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity) and I felt embarrassed to tell my father because I was young. I even tried not to go with him and told him to go and I would catch up with him, but he insisted on my going with him. He argued that my uncle used to love and cherish me so much and that he did a lot for my sake, and because of that I should witness the funeral. I accordingly went with him and entered the Masjid (Mosque) in the said state, and after performing Salah (Prayer), we brought my deceased uncle and offered him the funeral prayer then we buried him. Ever since, my conscience still worries me, and I could not see him in my dreams as did my mother, aunt and others although he used to love me very much and so do I. They told me that he died while uttering my name. Your Eminence, is there a Kaffarah (expiation) for that matter which I did in a state of recklessness and embarrassment from my father? Please advise, may Allah guide you!

Q: one night, I discharged semen so I became ritually impure, then I performed Fajr (Dawn) Prayer without taking a ceremonial bath. I did so because performing Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity) would have delayed me from performing Salah (Prayer) in congregation. Is the prayer I performed invalid or not? I appreciate your guidance, may Allah reward you!

A: One of the prerequisites of the validity of Salah is ceremonial purity. Therefore, you must repeat the Salah which you offered without being pure. Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces and your hands (forearms) up to the elbows, rub (by passing wet hands over) your heads, and (wash) your feet up to ankles. If you are in a state of Janâba (i.e. after a sexual discharge), purify yourselves (bathe your whole body).﴾ You must repent to Allah, ask His forgiveness and regret what you did.

Q 2: If a person ejaculates as a result of thinking about having sexual intercourse or foreplay, should one perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)?

A: If Maniy (sperm) is ejaculated as a result of thinking about sexual intercourse or foreplay, a person has to perform Ghusl. However, if Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted due to sexual thoughts or desire) is ejaculated, a person should not perform Ghusl.

Q 2: Is it permissible for a married person who is in the state of major ceremonial impurity after having relations with his wife at night to perform fajr (Dawn) Prayer without making Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity)?

A: Salah is not valid without purification, and whoever offers Salah without purification, his Salah will be invalid. Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces and your hands (forearms) up to the elbows, rub (by passing wet hands over) your heads, and (wash) your feet up to ankles. Q: I am a 27 year old married man with four children. I suffer from the discharge of sperm before or after urination, or after Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity). Sometimes, while at work I think of having sexual intercourse with my wife or kissing her and when I enter the bathroom, I see sperm discharge. I visited a physician and he gave me medicine, which I took, but I still suffer from this condition. What is the ruling on my Salah and Sawm (fasting)?

A: Sawm is valid but as for Salah, if sperm discharges due to arousal, you must perform Ghusl (ceremonial bath) even if it is caused by merely having erotic thoughts. If it occurs without such thoughts, it takes the same ruling of urine. It nullifies Wudu' (ablution), and consequently you must purify yourself and perform Wudu' for Salah.

After bathing, i remembered that i was in a state of Janabah before taking the bath. Must I repeat Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity)? Q: I usually have sexual dreams, and by the time of the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, I wake up to find my underpants wet [with sperm]. If I make Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), I will possibly catch fever and a flu, as I have suffered from this many times. On the other hand, if I make Ghusl, I will miss the Fajr Prayer in congregation in the Masjid. What should I do? Should I perform Tayammum (dry ablution)? Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: First, the basic rule is that you should perform Ghusl after a wet dream resulting in ejaculation, but if doing so would leave you diseased, then it will be permissible for you to perform Tayammum which is prescribed in cases of absence or lack of water, or the inability to use it because of a disease.

Secondly, congregational Salah (Prayer) is obligatory and performing Ghusl is a prerequisite for the validity of Salah. Therefore, if water is present, you should perform Ghusl and not Tayammum in order not to miss the congregational prayer.

Q3: A person awoke and found he was in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) and could not perform Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity), what should he do?

A: One who awakens at dawn and finds himself in a state of Janabah must perform Ghusl to offer Salah. As for Sawm (Fasting), it is permissible for one to fast while in the state of Janabah; because the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to perform Ghusl and fast without making up for the day he awakened in the state of Janabah. Also a sexual dream does not nullify Sawm if it takes place during the day; because it does not happen intentionally. But if one discharges seminal fluid, one must perform Ghusl. If a person is in a place

Q 1: What is the ruling when waking up at Fajr (Dawn) in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge)? Should one fully wash the body or what should be done, bearing in mind that we live in a Bedouin community where modern bathrooms are not available?

A: Whoever wakes up at Dawn in a state of Janabah must bathe with water to remove the impurity and perform Fajr prayer. Furthermore, the absence of modern toilets is not an excuse for not performing Ghusl. One must take cover away from people and perform Ghusl unless the weather is cold and there is no means to heat the water, or there is fear of becoming ill if one performs Ghusl with cold water. Only then should one perform Tayammum (dry ablution) with pure dust patting the hands against dusty ground and rubbing the face and hands, then perform Salah. This is in accordance with Allah's statement: ﴿If you are in a state of Janâba (i.e. after a sexual discharge), purify yourselves (bathe your whole body). But if you are ill or on a journey, or any of you comes after answering the call of nature, or you have been in contact with women (i.e. sexual intercourse), and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.﴾ The account of `Amr ibn Al-`As (may Allah be pleased with him) also lends support to this. He had an erotic dream while traveling and feared using water to perform Wudu', he performed Tayammum and led the other Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) in Salah. Upon his return, he related his case to the Prophet (peace be upon him) who did not object. It is authentically narrated on the authority of `Amr ibn Al-`As that when he was sent to the battle of Dhat Al-Salasel, he said: ﴿I experienced an erotic dream on a cold night during the campaign of Dhat al-Salasel, and I was afraid that if I performed Ghusl I would die, so I Performed Tayammum, then prayed Fajr with my companions. They mentioned this to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and he said: "O `Amr, did you lead your companions in prayer while you were junub?" I told him what had kept me from performing Ghusl and I said: "I remembered Allah's statement ﴿And do not kill yourselves (nor kill one another). Surely, Allâh is Most Merciful to you.﴾ Accordingly, I performed Tayammum and led them in Salah. Upon that, the Prophet (peace be upon him) smiled and did not say anything.﴾ Related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, and Al-Daraqutni.

Q 4: A man woke up after an erotic dream and went to work without performing Ghusl (ceremonial bath) due to having to be at work early. When the time of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer came, a friend insisted that he went with him for offering Salah (Prayer). He performed Wudu' (ceremonial ablution) and offered Salah. What is the ruling on this Salah which he performed in a state of Janabah (major ceremonial impurity)?

A: if one has an erotic dream and discharges semen, he must perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity). The Salah is invalid without bathing because of Janabah. Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(If you are in a state of Janâba \(i.e. after a sexual discharge\), purify yourselves \(bathe your whole body\)\).

Q: Your Honor, what is the legal way to distinguish between Maniy (sperm), Wadiy (a thick white secretion discharged after urination) and Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted due to erotic thoughts or desire).

(Part No. 4; Page No. 138)

Should I perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) if it is Maniy, or Wudu' (ablution) if it is Madhy or Wadiy?

A: Maniy is a white thick fluid discharged from the sexual organ after which there is a warm sensation. It is pure according to the soundest view. It is recommended that one cleans the garment whether by washing or scratching. Ejaculation of sperm resulting from sexual intercourse or a wet dream requires Ghusl. In the case of Maniy discharge without arousal such as sickness or cold, no Ghusl is due but only Wudu' (ablution).

Madhy is a white light fluid emanating out of the penis when a person fondles one's wife or when having erotic thoughts but without flowing and not followed by a warm sensation. Madhy is impure, therefore, one must wash the penis and testes then perform Wudu' and sprinkle water over the spots which were touched by it, whether on the body or the clothes.

Wadiy is a thick white fluid that appears on the penis after urination. It is impure and one must perform Wudu' after such discharge.

Fatwa no. 16172

Q: Explain to me how a woman should wash her hair while performing Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity).

(Part No. 4; Page No. 139)

Is washing all the hair Wajib (obligatory)? Is washing the entire scalp Wajib, as I sometimes feel pain when I wash all my head?

A: When performing Ghusl after menstruation, postpartum period, or Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge), a woman must wash all her head by pouring water over it, or on the roots if the hair is plaited without having to undo it. \(It was narrated by Um Salamah that she said: I said: O Messenger of Allah, I am a woman who has closely plaited hair on my head; should I undo it for taking a Ghusl, after Janabah or menstruation? He \(the Prophet\) said: No, it is enough for you to throw three handfuls of water on your head and then pour water over yourself, and you shall be purified.\) Reported by Muslim. However, it is better to undo the plaited hair when performing Ghusl after menstruation or postpartum period to wash it with water and Sidr (lote tree/ lotus jujube), because of the many hadith on this matter.

Q 2: Is it permissible to wipe my head only when I perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) as my hair is styled with a hairdryer?

It is worth mentioning that I loosen my hair to wash it all when I perform Ghusl after menstruation.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 140)

A: A woman should wash her head when making Ghusl. She should wash all her hair. However, she does not have to loosen her hair so as to avoid hardships. It is authentically reported in Sahih (authentic Book of Hadith) of Muslim , [\(on the authority of Um Salamah \(may Allah be pleased with her\) who asked the Messenger of Allah, "I have braided hair, do I have to undo it every time I perform Ghusl?" The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16061

Q 4: when is it obligatory to perform Ghusl (ritual bath) of Al-Janabah (major ritual impurity)? Does flirting with wives such as foreplay, but without penetration, and touching without a barrier necessitate performing Ghusl or not?

A: It is necessary to perform Ghusl following major ritual impurity if Maniy (sperm/vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) comes out due to sexual lust or during sleep when having a sexual dream, or due to penetration even if Maniy was not discharged. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «If the two circumcised parts (i.e. male and female genitals) have been in touch with one another [through penetration], Ghusl (ritual bath) will become obligatory.» There is another Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «If a man sits between the four limbs of a woman (i.e. takes the position of making sexual intercourse and there is penetration,

(Part No. 4; Page No. 141)

Ghusl will become obligatory even if without the discharge of sperm.» Moreover, «Um Sulaym asked the Prophet of Allah (peace be upon him), "Is Ghusl necessary for a woman when she has a sexual dream?" He (peace be upon him) said, "Yes, if she sees the liquid (vaginal secretion).» (Agreed upon by Imams Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Liquid in the Hadith refers to Maniy but with regard to foreplay if it is not accompanied with ejaculation of Maniy, it will not require Ghusl.

Q 1: I often awaken and find myself in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) without having a wet dream, i.e. without seeing a woman or girl in my dreams. Is this a case of Allah's mercy or that of Satan? Does it necessitate taking Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)? We hope you will explain how this can be treated in light of the Qur'an and Sunnah.

A: Whoever awakens and finds a trace of semen must perform Ghusl as it is due to a wet dream even, if one does not remember it. Q 1: Is it obligatory for a man when performing Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) after a wet dream to do it in order from the head to toe, or is it enough to pour water over the whole body? Is it necessary to rub his body?

A 1: it is recommended when performing Ghusl to purify oneself from Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) due to a wet dream, or otherwise, to perform Istinja' (washing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) first, perform Wudu', wash and pour water over one's head, and then pour water over the rest of the body three times. Pouring water over the entire body once is obligatory. If one has the intention to perform Ghusl and Wudu' together and makes sure that the water reaches every part of the body, it is sufficient and Wudu' is incorporated in the Ghusl.

Q 2: After I perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), my penis discharges a drop or two; is it Wajib (obligatory) in this case that I perform Ghusl again or it is sufficient that I wash my penis and make Wudu'?

A: If a person makes Ghusl then his penis discharges something, he has to make Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) then Wudu' (ablution) but he does not have to remake Ghusl. The same applies even if it is only a little discharge as it nullifies Wudu'.

Q 3: While performing Ghusl (ritual bath), I sometimes repeat it again, thinking that I did not wash some part of my body. What is the opinion of Your Eminence?

Q: What should a person do when he wakes up in the morning to find that he is in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge)? Is it permissible for him to wear clean clothes before performing Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)? Support your answer with the necessary proofs please.

A: If a person wakes up in the morning to find that he is in a state of Janabah i.e. he had a sexual dream and discharged Maniy (sperm secretions that are released on orgasm) while he was sleeping, it will be Wajib (obligatory) on him to make Ghusl. On the other hand, it is permissible for such a person to put on clean clothes before making Ghusl for Janabah is not a material Najasah (ritual impurity); it is only an immaterial one. Moreover, Maniy is Tahir (ritually pure), not Najis (ritually impure). However, it is Mustahab (desirable) to remove such Maniy by washing it if it is wet or rubbing it if it is dry for it is authentically reported that this was the way `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) would clean the clothes of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q: i woke up several times while in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge), to find that the time of prayer was about to expire.

Should I have performed Tayammum (dry ablution) in order not to miss the congregational prayer, or should I perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) even if the due time was missed?

A: You must perform Ghusl if you want to perform Salah, for Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces﴾ until His statement: ﴿If you are in a state of Janâba (i.e. after a sexual discharge), purify yourselves (bathe your whole body).﴾ Therefore, you have to perform Ghusl even if it causes you to miss the due time of prayer, for you are excused for that. Indeed, Taharah (ceremonial purification) is a prerequisite for the validity of Salah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿Allah does not accept the prayer of any of you if he invalidates his ablution until he performs ablution (anew).﴾

Q 1: A young man who studies in Abha says that on Monday, he slept during the afternoon and had a sexual dream. He woke up and wanted to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) but could not because of the cold weather and cold water. He washed his private parts and offered Maghrib (sunset) Prayer then performed Wudu' (ablution) to offer `Isha' (Night) Prayer and offered the obligatory Prayers on Tuesday without performing Ghusl because the weather was still cold and because his body could not stand the cold water. After that he went to his family where the weather was hot then offered `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer there but also before he performed Ghusl. After that he performed Ghusl and offered Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer.

A: You have to repeat the Prayers you offered before performing Ghusl and seek Allah's Forgiveness for your past negligence.

Q: After taking Ghushl (full ritual bath), I wash my private parts then I wash my hand and perform Wudu' (ablution) for Salah (Salah). Later and after about five minutes, I feel that something else is discharged from me; what should I do in this case? What is the ruling if something comes out from the private parts after performing Ghushl and I do not wash it believing that it is part of Waswasah (insinuating thoughts from Satan). After finishing the Salah, I wash it because of the frequent insinuations that I have. Should I just perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) in this condition or repeat Ghushl?

A: The secretion that comes out after having performed Janabah Ghushl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge) does not affect the validity of the Ghushl. However, you have to clean yourself by performing Istinja' and then Wudu' (ablution) when needed for an act that necessitates having it, such as offering Salah and reciting the Qur'an from the Mus-haf (Qur'an, the Book) if the secretion is ascertained. But if the secretion is just insinuations, do not give it much attention. If the secretion is Maniy (sperm/vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) due to frequent lust, you must perform Ghushl.

Q 3: Should a person perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) if he feels Maniy (spermatic fluid) that is not discharged? If blood is unintentionally exuded out of the nose of a fasting person while wiping it, should he make up for this day?

A: Scholars held different opinions with regard to the obligation of performing Ghusl in case a person feels Maniy that is not discharged upon having a desire. However, a person should not perform Ghusl, except if the Maniy is discharged for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "If the water gushes out, then perform Ghusl." (Related by Ahmad). On the other hand, Sawm (fasting) is not nullified when blood is unintentionally exuded out of the nose of a fasting person while wiping it, as the blood is unintentionally emitted.

I was embarrassed to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) in the early morning, as the house is very small, so I performed Tayammum (dry ablution) and I led my family in congregational Salah (Prayer). What is the ruling on my Salah and theirs?

A: It is not permissible for a Muslim to offer Salah while they are Junub, whether by a sexual dream or any other way, until they perform Ghusl, according to Allah's saying, ﴿If you are in a state of Janâba \(i.e. after a sexual discharge\), purify yourselves \(bathe your whole body\).﴾ It is not permissible to perform Tayammum if there is water. Embarrassment is not an excuse that allows Tayammum. The fact that you led people in Salah while you are Junub is a great mistake. Your Salah is invalid, as you offered it while knowing you are not Tahir (ritually pure). You should perform Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and repeat this Salah. As for the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer), if they knew this fact only after Salah, their Salah will be valid.

Q: My problem is that i discharge Maniy (vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) five or six times a day, and i perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) twice a day, so that i offer two Salahs (Prayers) with the same Wudu' (ablution). However, i heard that my Salah is invalid. I had a severe cold that lasted for four months, and I still suffer from it. I do not know whether I should perform Ghusl for every Salah or only every morning?

A: If Maniy is ejaculated with lust, you should perform Ghusl for every time it happens, and Salah will be invalid without Ghusl in this case. However, if it is not ejaculated with lust, it necessitates Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water) and Wudu' only, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), \(If you jet the Maniy, you should perform Ghusl; but if it only flows, you do not have to perform Ghusl.\) (Related by Ahmad). Q1: If one is junub (in a state of major ceremonial impurity) on Friday then performs Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) to end the state of janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge), should one perform the Ghusl for Friday Prayer as well? If one must perform Ghusl twice, should one do it with one or two intentions or should he combine the two? Should there be an interval between the two Ghusl, that is, should one dry off after the first Ghusl then begin the second Ghusl?

A: Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity) is sufficient for Ghusl for Friday Prayer because Ghusl for Friday Prayer is meant to clean and remove the bad odors of the body and this purpose is achieved through Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity). A: Both men and women can experience Ihtilam at any age. It is one of the signs of puberty. If a woman experiences Ihtilam by ejaculating Maniy (vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm), she should perform Ghusl (full ritual bath) following major ritual impurity. It was authentically reported from `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) was asked about a man who notices wet discharge but does not remember that he has experienced Ihtilam, so he said that he should perform Ghusl. When he was asked about a man who remembers to have experienced Ihtilam but does not notice wet discharge, he said that he does not have to perform Ghusl. Um Sulaym said, 'O, Messenger of Allah! Does a woman have to perform Ghusl if she experiences the same?' He said, 'Yes, if she sees the wet discharge (i.e. Maniy), for women are counterparts of men.' (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith [Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah] except Al-Nasa'y) It was also mentioned in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Um Salamah \(may Allah be pleased with her\) that Um Sulaym said, 'O, Messenger of Allah! Allah is not shy of (telling you) the truth. Does a woman have to perform Ghusl if she experiences Ihtilam?'

Q 1: A person intended to observe voluntary Sawm on Thursday, for example. he slept after having Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast), but on the next day he found himself in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) and did not find water at home. There was water in the Masjid (mosque) which was nine kilometers away. This long distance presented no problem; the problem was his fear that his father might need him during the period he took to go to the Masjid and ask him where he was, why he went there, and might even prevent him from going. He, thus, did not perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) that night and did not observe Salah (Prayer) for a whole day. On the next day, he performed Ghusl without his father's knowledge and made up for the Salah he missed the day before. Is his Sawm valid or not?

A: Anyone in a state of Janabah must perform Ghusl. It is not lawful to delay Ghusl until after the prescribed time of Salah elapses. The possibility that his father might scold him was not an excuse for delaying Ghusl as long as he was able to use water. His Sawm, on the other hand, is valid, but he is a sinner for delaying Salah beyond its prescribed time. He should make Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and ask Allah's Forgiveness for what he did.

Q 2: A person used to recite the Qur'an daily from Al-Mus-haf. One night he found himself Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) and he feared that his father, as in the first question, would know if he were to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity). Is he to blame for touching the Book of Allah? What is the Kaffarah (expiation) for this, bearing in mind that he never missed a day without reciting Qur'an unless there was no water?

A: it is not permissible for the Junub to touch the Qur'an or to recite it until he performs Ghusl. He who touches or recites it while being Junub should perform Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and Tawbah (repentance to Allah).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 18452

Q 2: is Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) for having a sexual dream the same as Ghusl for Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge)?

A: Yes, Ghusl for having a sexual dream is the same as Ghusl for Janabah i.e. after having sexual intercourse. Consequently, Rukns (integrals) and Sunan (supererogatory acts of worship following the example of the Prophet) of Ghusl are the same in both cases when Maniy (sperm secretions that are released on orgasm) is discharged.

Q 2: A person may wake up and find Maniy (sperm/vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) on their underwear, but they are not certain whether they had a wet dream or not. Should they complete their Sawm (Fast)?

A: If a person finds traces of Maniy on their clothing, they are obligated to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) even if they do not remember whether they had a wet dream or not. This is based on the Hadith reported by Um Salamah (may Allah be pleased with her), who said: ﴿Um Sulaym (may Allah be pleased with her) said: O Messenger of Allah! Verily, Allah does not feel shy to tell the truth. If a woman has a wet dream, is she obligated to perform Ghusl? He replied: Yes, if she notices discharge.﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Thus, the Prophet (peace be upon him) made noticing traces of discharge, that is Maniy, a condition necessitating Ghusl. Accordingly, one should continue their Sawm and it will be valid.

Q 6: What should a soldier do if he has a wet dream and then goes directly to an accident scene just before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and fears lest the time of the Fajr should pass?

A 6: Whoever has Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge) due to a wet dream or the like is not permitted to offer Salah (Prayer) except after Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity) even if he fears that the due time should expire.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 158)

This is true if water is available for him and he can use it. Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(If you are in a state of Janâba \(i.e. after a sexual discharge\), purify yourselves \(bathe your whole body\).\) If water is not available or he cannot use it, he should perform Tayammum (dry ablution) and offer Salah.

Q 1: what are the cases which make it obligatory on a woman to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)?

A: A woman should perform Ghusl after sexual intercourse with her husband, even if without ejaculation; the mere penetration necessitates Ghusl. Likewise, Ghusl is due following a sexual dream accompanied with the discharge of Maniy (sperm/vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) or the end of menstrual or postpartum bleeding.

Q 1: how do we perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)? Is there a Hadith about a special Salah (Prayer) after Ghusl?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 159)

A: First, Ghusl is performed in two ways: complete and sufficient. The complete form includes the obligations and the desirable things, which is the way that the Prophet (peace be upon him) performed it. A person should intend to remove Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge), say "In the Name of Allah", wash their hands thrice, and then wash their private parts with the left hand and clean the left hand with dust, water and soap, or any other detergent. Then, they should perform Wudu' (ablution), wash their hair with water, pour water three times over their head, starting with the right side of the body and then the left side, and then pour water over the whole body.

The sufficient form includes the intention to remove Janabah then mentioning the Name of Allah, making Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) and Istinshaq (inhaling and exhaling water nasally), and then pouring water over the whole body.

Second, there is no special Salah after Ghusl, as no such Salah was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). As for offering two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) after Wudu', this was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

The twelfth question of Fatwa no. 18612

Q 12: is the Wudu' (ablution) included in Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity) sufficient to perform Salah (Prayer)?

Does Salah become Batil (null and void) if the toes are turned up during prostration?

A: Firstly, if one performs Ghusl intending to purify oneself from the major ceremonial impurity, the major as well as the minor ceremonial impurities are lifted together as the minor ceremonial impurity is incorporated in the major one. As to whether Wudu' done during Ghusl is sufficient to perform Salah or not, it is definitely acceptable, because he performs Wudu' during his Ghusl.

Secondly, the toes are of the seven bodily parts specified in the narration by Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) who said that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) stated, I have been ordered to prostrate on seven bones i.e. on the forehead along with the tip of the nose and the Prophet (peace be upon him) pointed towards his nose, both hands, both knees, and the toes of the feet. (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Accordingly, if one's toes are turned up intentionally during prostration, the Salah becomes Batil. If done forgetfully, the Raka`h in which they were turned up should be made up along with Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) whether the person is an Imam or performs Salah individually. As for the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) other than the latecomers, he should make up for it after the Imam pronounces Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and no Sujud-ul-Sahw is required. As for the latecomer, he is required to make up for it and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Q 3: What should I do when I wake up and find traces of Maniy (spermatic fluid) on my clothes; should I perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and wash my clothes or only rub its traces after they are dry?

A: You must perform Ghusl. According to the authentic Sunnah, it is recommended to wash your clothes although it is sufficient to scrape the traces of Maniy off. However, washing the clothes is better and cleaner.

Q 2: If someone becomes in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) at night; will it be permissible for him to delay performing Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) until dawn?

A: If someone becomes in a state of Janabah at night, it will be permissible for him to sleep without performing Ghusl until the time of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer is due. The Salah (Prayer) will not be valid until major and minor ritual impurities are removed. However, it is an act of Sunnah to perform Wudu' (ablution) before sleeping to lighten the state of major Janabah. `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said that \(Whenever the Messenger of Allah wanted to sleep while in a state of Janabah, he would wash his penis and perform Wudu'

as that performed for Salah.) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). It is also related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) \(that `Umar ibn Al-Khattab asked the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) saying, "Is one of us permitted to sleep in a state of Janabah?" He \(the Prophet\) said, "Yes, after performing Wudu'.") But if one makes Ghusl before sleeping, this is preferable to be in a state of perfect Taharah (ritual purification).

A: The first person should perform Ghusl while the second should perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water) and Wudu' only. On the other hand, the third person does not have to perform Ghusl or Wudu' as nothing was discharged from him.

At the time of Zhuhr (Afternoon) Prayer, he found a drop of semen on his clothes. What should he do in this case? Is he obliged to make up for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and if so how can he make up for it?

A: anyone who wakes up and finds his clothes wet and is sure that this is because of Maniy (semen), he has to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity). However, if he does not see the traces of Maniy until after performing Salah, then he has to perform Ghusl and repeat the Salah which he offered before making Ghusl. Likewise, if he is not sure that this drop is seminal discharge, then there will be nothing due on him and his Salah will be valid.

Q 4: should I perform Wudu' (ablution) after Ghusl (ceremonial bath following major ceremonial impurity)?

Sometimes during Ghusl or when I put on my clothes, it happens that I touch my private parts? Should I perform Wudu' again in such cases?

A: It is an act of Sunnah for the Junub to perform Wudu' first then offer Ghusl, as this was the manner of the Prophet (peace be upon him). If one intends to remove the major and minor ceremonial impurity by washing the whole body, it is sufficient, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated, «The reward of deeds depends upon the intentions and every person will get the reward according to what he has intended.» If however Wudu' was not performed before Ghusl and one does not intend to perform Wudu' while performing Ghusl, then he will have to offer Wudu' after Ghusl. The same applies in the case of touching the genitals during Ghusl, in which case he should repeat the Wudu' invalidated by touching the genitals.

Q 2: sometimes drops of semi-seminal fluid come out during performing Wudu' (ablution). Am I obliged to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) in this case? Or is it sufficient to perform Wudu' (ablution), bearing in mind that this discharge is not preceded with intercourse or kissing of the wife?

A: If this is a seminal discharge, you have to perform Wudu', because it is not strongly flowing or coming out as a result of lustful desire such as kissing, looking or thinking about intercourse or having sexual intercourse.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 165)

Therefore, Ghusl is not obligatory in this state.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20867

Q 1: Once, while I was in the desert, i woke up to perform Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and made Wudu' (ablution) and offered Salah. Then, one hour before the time of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, i discerned that i had a sexual dream the previous night, but there was no water at that time. Accordingly, I made Tayammum (dry ablution) and repeated Fajr Prayer. It is worth mentioning here that I knew that water will be available after Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. When water became available, I performed Wudu' but not Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) out of my ignorance and I performed Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers. Is there any sin on me? May Allah bless you! It should be mentioned that I do not know when I performed the first Ghusl after that event. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Your Wudu' for the Fajr, Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers does not suffice you as far as removing the major impurity is concerned. It does not make the prayer valid even if you did not know that you were Junub when you were performing Wudu' because you later discerned that you performed your prayer without being ritually pure. It is well known that Janabah is only removed by making Ghusl or Tayammum in case of absence of water or the inability to use it. Likewise, the same ruling applies to your Tayammum to repeat Fajr Prayer one hour before the time of Zhuhr and after you knew that you had a sexual dream and that water will be available after the Zhuhr Prayer. It does not suffice you in this state or remove the state of Janabah. Furthermore, the time of Fajr Prayer was over, and you are entitled to offer it at the time you remembered that you had a sexual dream. There is nothing wrong with delaying offering Fajr Prayer a little for the sake of making Ghusl to be in a state of perfect Taharah (ritual purification). Therefore, you have to repeat Fajr, Zhuhr, and `Asr Prayers after being ritually pure from the major and minor impurity. As for the Prayers you performed afterwards and before making Ghusl which you can not remember their number, it is preferable for you to repeat the prayers you think you offered while being Junub after performing Wudu' or making Ghusl if you were Junub, for you are excused due to your ignorance.

Q: It is stated in the book Kashf-ul-Ghummah (Removing Distress) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to perform Salah (Prayer) wearing the garment which he sometimes wore while having intercourse or sweating in it. He used to scrub the traces of Maniy (sperm) that he might discern on his garment, then would offer Salah in this garment. At other times, he (peace be upon him) would wash it with water then go out to perform Salah in it.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 167)

A: It is related on the authority of Mu`awiyah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: I asked Um Habibah whether the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered Salah wearing the same garment which he wore during intercourse. She said, "Yes, if it had no traces of impurity." Related by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah.

It is also authentically narrated on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said, «The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to wash the Maniy, and then go out for Salah in that very garment and I saw the mark of washing on it.» Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. Muslim also narrated from her, «I used to thoroughly rub it \(sperm\) off the garment of the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\), then he would pray in it.» According to another narration by Muslim: [«I would scrub it \[sperm\] off his garment with my nail when it had become dry.»](#) Hence, the rulings designated by these Hadith are correct concerning the purity of Maniy, and that there is no harm if its traces remain on the garment when offering Salah, but it is preferable to wash it if it is wet or scrub it if it is dry. Praise be to Allah.

A: Whoever wakes up in a state of Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge), must perform Ghusl even if it means he will miss offering prayer on time. After performing Ghusl, one can offer Salah even if its due time is over, as one is excused based on the Prophet's statement, [\(If a person misses a Salah because they sleep or forget, they should offer it when they remember, as there is no other Kaffarah \(expiation\) for it. (Part No. 4; Page No. 169)

Q: I have been afflicted with allergy lately, which caused me asthma. I have undergone several medical diagnoses by general practitioners and specialists, but I have not gotten better. This led me to travel to the city of Blida, located near Algiers to visit a medical specialist there. Through the medical examinations, it was found that I am afflicted with allergies. The physician treating me gave me some advice to avoid the allergy being aggravated. Among the guidelines offered by my physician is that I have to avoid using water in Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) after intercourse. He advised me to resort to Tayammum (dry ablution) instead of Ghusl. Thus, I would be grateful if you could tell me how to perform Tayammum after intercourse. May Allah guide you to what is good for you!

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned that the use of water for Ghusl after intercourse and other major ritual impurities may do you harm, you should perform Tayammum with pure earth. If the use of water harms some parts of your body, you should wash the sound parts with water and perform Tayammum for the other parts of the body. As for the way you can perform Tayammum, you should have the intention to perform Tayammum, then mention the Name of Allah and strike pure earth with your hands to then rub your face with the inner surface of your fingers and the back of your hands with the inner surface of your hands.

Give us the ruling on this question, may Allah bless you for it!

A: If the time of Zhuhr Prayer is due and you are in your homeland and there is no water, you should perform Tayammum and pray. Moreover, you should not miss the time of the prayer to wait for water, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, \(and you find no water, perform Tayammum\) Also, performing the prayer at its due time is given priority over waiting for water to perform Wudu' (ablution).

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' have reviewed what was raised to His Eminence the General Mufti from His Eminence the Chairman of the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV) in Jeddah, referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the number (5382), dated on 12/11/1416 A.H., in which the questioner imposes the following question:

on journeys young people take some water for drinking. Such water may be more than they need for drinking. Is it permissible for them to perform Tayammum (dry ablution)? If they find no water, do they have to search for water in the surrounding areas or send one of them to a neighboring town to bring some water though such practice entails some hardships? Or is it permissible for them to perform Tayammum?

A: If the water is far away from them and the water they have is not enough for their drinking and Wudu' (ablution), they can perform Tayammum and use the water they have for drinking. Allah knows best!

Q 2: I spent a night in the house of a friend of mine who works as an Imam in a mosque. He awakened me to offer Fajr (Dawn) Prayer after the Adhan (call to Prayer). The time for Iqamah (call to start Prayer) was due and people were waiting for the Imam to lead them in the Prayer. I was Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity). It was not possible for him to leave me alone in his house with his wife as it is prohibited to have Khulwah (being in privacy with a member of the opposite sex) with his wife. Also, there was not enough time to wait for me until I performed Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity); so we went together to the mosque. Out of my shyness I could not tell him that I was Junub, so I performed Tayammum (dry ablution) out of his sight and offered Fajr Prayer with the congregation. Before Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, I performed Ghusl. This happened several days ago. Is what I did legally valid? If it is not legally valid, what should I do now?

A: offering Fajr Prayer after Tayammum despite the availability of water is invalid. You have to repeat that Fajr Prayer. Also, your shyness of your friend in that situation is not a legally favorable shyness.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17628

Q 3: a friend of mine suffers from rheumatism. When he offers Salah he uses hot water and when he prays at work he performs Tayammum (dry ablution) due to the unavailability of hot water there; is the Salah he performs with Tayammum valid?

A: It is not permissible for your friend to offer Salah with Tayammum at work, as he can easily get hot water by returning home or by any other means.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17575

Q 2: There is a school in which one thousand and two hundred students are enlisted. In this school there is a big tank which provides the school with water the whole school year, but those responsible for the tank lock the tank under the pretext that water will run out if students perform Wudu' (ablution) from the water of the tank. When the time of Zhuhr (noon) Prayer is due, the students perform Tayammum (dry ablution) and offer Salah on the roof of the tank. Is the Salah performed by those students for the past eight months valid or what should they do? Give us the ruling on this question, may Allah bless you for it!

A: The Salah performed by those students through Tayammum is not valid, as water is available in the place where they live. it is worth mentioning that Tayammum is permissible in the absence of water or when a person is unable to use it. If such students are prevented from using the water in the tank, they can easily get water from any other place in the town where they live.

Q 1: Is performing Tayammum (dry ablution) not to miss the time of prayer permissible? Does performing Tayammum with no excuse invalidate Wudu' (ablution)? Is the Prayer performed through Tayammum with no excuse valid?

A: If water is available, it must be used for purification even if a person fears missing the Prayer time. It is not permissible to perform Tayammum except when there is a legal excuse because of which a person is unable to use water such as an illness or fear of thirst. This is because Allah permits Tayammum only when water is unavailable or when a person is unable to use water. If a person performs Tayammum when water is available and there is no legal excuse for doing so, his Prayer will be invalid due to him missing one of the conditions of the validity of Prayer, which is Taharah (ritual purification).

Q: Is it permissible for a person who is Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) to follow the funeral and offer the funeral prayer through performing Tayammum (dry ablution)? Please note that if he goes to have a bath, he may miss the funeral prayer with the congregation? Also, what is the ruling on a person who followed a funeral and offered the funeral prayer through performing Tayammum when he had been Junub?

A: Purification is a condition for the validity of offering the funeral prayer. It is not valid for a person to perform Tayammum as long as water is available and one is able to use it. If a person does not have the time to have a bath and offer the funeral prayer with the congregation, he can have a bath and offer the funeral prayer after the dead is buried during a period not more than a month after burial. As for following the funeral, a Muslim can do so even if he is Junub and he will not be considered sinful.

As for the question that you offered the funeral prayer through performing Tayammum when water was available, you have to ask Allah's forgiveness for doing so.

A: If you search for water but do not find it or you are unable to reach it and you fear that you may miss the time of a particular prayer, you can perform Tayammum. The way to perform Tayammum is to strike the pure earth with your hands once then rub your face with the palms of your hands and the surface of your right hand with the palm of your left hand, and the surface of your left hand with the palm of your right hand. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) says, \(But if you are ill or on a journey, or any of you comes after answering the call of nature, or you have been in contact with women \(i.e. sexual intercourse\), and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.\)

Q 2: If a person finds in the morning that he is Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) and finds no water to offer the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, will it be permissible for him to perform Tayammum (dry ablution)?

A: If a person who is in a state of major ritual impurity is in a place where there is no water and he can not get water from any other place, he can perform Tayammum and offer the Prayer, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, \(and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.\)

However, if he is in a populated area and can search for water and get it, he has to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), as Tayammum will not be sufficient.

Q 3: A person performed Tayammum (dry ablution) and offered a particular prayer and the time of the following prayer was due, would it be permissible for him to offer the following prayer by the same Tayammum or should he perform Tayammum once more?

A: As legally fixed, tayammum is nullified by what nullifies Wudu' (ablution). Tayammum is not nullified by the end of the due time of the prayer for which he performed Tayammum. Thus, he can offer more than one prayer as long as he has not done any of the acts that nullify Wudu'.

Q 1: is it permissible for me to perform Tayammum (dry ablution) when i am in my pastureland although i have some water to drink and my village is one kilometer or more away?

A: It is not permissible for you to perform Tayammum to offer Prayer in such a case as the distance to the place where water is available is close and there is no difficulty in going to bring some water and the due time of prayer is not missed by going to bring water from your village. Moreover, you can provide yourself with enough water for your drinking and Wudu' (ablution) if you fear the loss of any of the cattle you pasture, by using the tools that make it easy for you to have enough water.

Q: Respected shaykh, we sometimes leave the city of Riyadh to the desert to spend some days for fun. We have more than one car on which we carry a tank or more of water to use it for drinking, cooking, washing dishes, etc. In the evening, we camp in a place which is twenty kilometers or more or less away from the nearest place where water is available. Some of us perform Tayammum (dry ablution) to offer the Salah under the pretext that the water we have is only used for drinking, cooking, washing dishes, etc, whereas others perform Wudu' with water, saying that water is available and any of us can go by car to get water from the nearest village or the nearest petrol station at any time. Also, we shorten the Prayers and combine the `Isha' (Night) Prayer with the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer though we stay in the same place for more than one prayer; for example, we may stop at a place before the Maghrib Prayer and leave it after the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Also, we may stop at a place before the Zhuhr Prayer and leave it after the `Asr Prayer and so on.

Respected shaykh, the question is: Is it permissible for us in such a case to perform Tayammum to offer Salah? Also, is it permissible for us to shorten the four Rak`ah Prayer into two Rak`ah Prayer or to combine the Maghrib Prayer with the `Isha' Prayer or the Zhuhr Prayer with the `Asr Prayer though the distance to our home city, Riyadh, is most probably more than one hundred kilometers. If there is a distance for shortening the Prayers, we will be grateful if you could mention it. May Allah reward you with the best for it! May Allah prolong your lifespan and make your knowledge a benefit for all Muslims!

A: Allah (Glorified be He) has made tayammum an alternative for water when it is not available or difficult to get, or when one is unable to use water because of an illness or any other legal excuse. Also, Allah has made it obligatory to use water for Wudu' when water is available and not difficult to get, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces and your hands (forearms) up to the elbows, rub (by passing wet hands over) your heads, and (wash) your feet up to ankles. If you are in a state of Janâba (i.e. after a sexual discharge), purify yourselves (bathe your whole body). But if you are ill or on a journey, or any of you comes after answering the call of nature, or you have been in contact with women (i.e. sexual intercourse), and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.﴾

Since you can get water for your Wudu' and your personal needs such as drinking and other needs from the villages and the stations you pass by on your way and which are no more than twenty kilometers away from you, it is obligatory for you to use water for Wudu' and it is not permissible for you to perform Tayammum instead, as Tayammum will not be sufficient for you to perform the Salah. This is because you are like those who have water as you can get the water by your cars, so you are not permitted to perform Tayammum in such a case. The person who is permitted to perform Tayammum is one who is almost sure that he will not find water if he searches for it or a person who fears death by searching for water or fears that he may miss the due time of a particular prayer. the distance that allows the shortening of Prayers is eighty kilometers, as agreed upon by the Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars). Consequently, it is permissible for you to shorten the Prayers by shortening the four Rak`ah Prayers into two Rak`ah ones and combining the Zhuhr Prayer with the `Asr Prayer and the Maghrib Prayer with the `Isha' Prayer at the due time of any of the two prayers of each group.

A patient whose name is (...) receives medical treatment in the Medical Rehabilitation Center in Al-Rihab reported that he had been afflicted with inflammation in his hand because of Tayammum (dry ablution). We charged the consultant of preventive medicine with the task of meeting the patient to examine him. The consultant sent us the enclosed report in which he stated that the patient suffers from quadripartite paralysis and uses his left hand only for performing Tayammum, but since his fingers are bent in the direction of the palm of his hand, some atoms of dust get under his fingernails and remain for a long period of time, a matter that causes a fungal inflammation of the fingernails. May Allah preserve you, my question is; can such a person be exempted from Tayammum? Or can he use the back of his hand on performing Tayammum instead of using the palm of his hand?

A: There is no sin in using the back of a persons hand for performing Tayammum if that person is harmed by using the palm of his hand. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Also, Allah (Glorified be He) says, ﴿Allāh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾

Q: One day I became very feverish. I said to myself, "I will perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and then offer the Salah," but I could not do so until it was time for the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. on hearing the Adhan for the Zhuhr Prayer, I intended to perform Tayammum and offer both the Fajr and Zhuhr Prayers. What is the ruling on such a situation though I had the desire to perform the Salah at its due time, but I could not? What is the solution to this problem?

A: You have to offer Salah at its due time as much as you can, standing, sitting down or lying on your side. You have to get purified by using water, but if you are unable to use water, you can perform Tayammum, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾

Q: We are Bedouins who move from one place to another all the time. We carry water for our camels and sheep in a car. The place where water is available is one hundred kilometers away. When the time of Salah (prayer) is due, we perform Tayammum (dry ablution) and offer the Salah. This is because the water we have is enough only for our basic needs. The wandering guides told us that it is not permissible for us to perform Tayammum when there is water and that our Salah will be invalid unless we use water for Wudu' (ablution). What is your opinion on this point?

A: It is an Islamic fundamental that purification is realized by the use of water when water is available. If water is not available or it is available but it is enough only for one's basic needs and there is no water in the surroundings, one is permitted to perform Tayammum, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, \(and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.\) As for a person who performs Tayammum while he can get and use water, his Salah is not valid. Removing ritual impurities

A: Clothes do not become Najis if stained with Maniy (sperm) after a sexual dream, as Maniy is Tahir (ritually pure) according to the most correct opinion of the scholars, but it should be washed for the sake of cleanliness.

Q: What is the difference between Najasah Hukmiyyah and Najasah `Ayniyyah? Should both kinds of Najasah (ritual impurity) be removed?

A: Najasah `Ayniyyah is a ritual impurity that has discernible characteristics and cannot be removed, such as the impurity of dogs and pigs. Najasah Hukmiyyah is a ritual impurity that causes a clean place to become impure, such as urine, stool, and other temporary impurities. This latter kind of Najasah can be removed if it and its traces of smell, taste, and color are washed with water until they disappear.

Please note that blood flows out in large quantities, but at infrequent intervals.

A: A person suffering from hemorrhoid and blood flows out of them has to make Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and wash the parts of their body and clothing that are stained with blood and then perform Wudu' (ablution) to offer Salah (Prayer). Because I am Multazim (practicing Muslim), all praise be to Allah, I find difficulty as I wake up everyday to offer the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, for I find my clothes, body, and bed wet. It is difficult for me to have a bath everyday. It is worth mentioning that I have been afflicted with this disease since childhood. What should I do now?

A: If you wet your bed when you get up to offer the Fajr Prayer, you have to wash the parts of your body and clothes that have become impure. Q: A person suffers from bed-wetting. On waking up, he washes his body between his navel and feet. He then performs Wudu' (ablution) and offers Salah (Prayer). Is his Salah valid? We would be grateful if you could substantiate the answer with evidence. Sometimes, this person is late for the Salah or delays it when water is not available; what is your opinion on this point?

A: A person discharging urine or any of the things that nullify Wudu' has to perform Wudu' if they want to offer Salah. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces﴾ Also, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ("Allah does not accept the Salah of any of you if they nullify their Wudu' until they perform Wudu' again.")

Furthermore, he has to wash any Najasah (ritual impurity) that has befallen his body and clothing before offering Salah, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) enjoined the washing of clothes stained with menstrual blood. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And purify your garments!﴾ If water is not available, they can perform Tayammum (dry ablution) to offer Salah and their Salah is valid as long as they are unable to obtain water. If they can find water, even for money, they have to buy it and use it to perform Wudu', have Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), and remove Najasah. This is because Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿and you find no water, then perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands.﴾

Allah (Glorified be He) also says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to the one who was Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) and could not find water: ﴿Use clean earth (for Tayammum) as it will be sufficient for you.﴾

Q: is the vomit of the young and old regarded as Najis (ritually impure)? Should one's clothes or anything else be washed if vomit has touched them? Does vomit nullify Wudu' (ablution)? Please give us the ruling on these points.

A: Vomit is Najis, whether it is the vomit of a young or old person, as it is some food that is dissolved in one's abdomen; it is like stool and blood. If vomit touches one's clothing or anything else, it has to be washed with water and then rubbed until the traces of Najasah (ritual impurity) disappear completely. It is worth mentioning that vomit nullifies Wudu' if it fills the mouth or more. A small amount of vomit does not nullify Wudu'.

Q 18: Is it permissible to use perfume containing a percentage of alcohol? As you know, alcohol is an intoxicating substance.

A: It is not permissible to wear perfume that contains an alcoholic substance if a large amount of that substance causes intoxication. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"If a large amount of anything causes intoxication, a small amount of it is Haram \(prohibited\).">﴿"If a large amount of anything causes intoxication, a small amount of it is Haram \(prohibited\).﴾ Also, Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) has described Khamr (intoxicant) and all kinds of alcoholic beverages as an abomination. Q 2: Is it permissible to wear the used clothes of the People of the Book (the Europeans) which they send to poor countries and for which there is a growing demand due to its low price?

A: It is permissible to wear the clothes of the Kafirs (non-Muslims) as long as they are not Najis (ceremonially impure), for the basic ruling is that clothing is Tahir (ceremonially pure). If the clothes are washed before being worn, it is much better.

Q: We are a group of Saudi youth working in the Saudi Customs using police dogs to detect drugs and explosives. The nature of our work requires that we have to touch and deal with dogs. Dogs' saliva also comes on our clothes and hands, and so does their hair.

You should bear in mind that these dogs receive constant medical treatment, hygiene, and special food. However, we do not know the ruling on dealing with dogs, as there is a Hadith reported from the Messenger (peace be upon him) that prohibits keeping a dog except for hunting and guarding. You should also bear in mind that many drugs have been, thanks to Allah, detected by means of these dogs.

Respected shaykh, please guide us to the appropriate procedure. May Allah protect and support you!

A: There is nothing wrong with this. However, you should avoid the Najasah (ritual impurity) of the dog. You should wash out the saliva or urine that stains your clothes or body. You should also wash the vessel which the dogs lick seven times, the first time with soil or whatever can replace it.

Q 4: what is the ruling on the dog's saliva if it taints one's garment or body? What is the ruling on the garments that are washed with such stained garments in one washing machine?

A: The dog's saliva is Najis (impure), so the vessel or garment tainted with it should be washed out, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "If a dog licks the vessel of any of you, it should be washed seven times, the first time with dust." If the garments are washed with the Tahir (ritually pure) water until the Najasah (ritual impurity) washed out, they will all be Tahir (ritually pure) provided that they are washed seven times, the first time with dust or what replaces it such as soap or potash.

Q: We live in the United Kingdom, where non-Muslims keep plenty of dogs. Sometimes, it is hard to avoid dogs, when going out and coming back home. It gets tougher when we are closer to the Masjid (mosques) than home and it is hard to go back home to wash or change the clothes the dog touched. What should we do?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 197)

A: If the saliva, sweat or blood of the dog does not come on your body or clothes, your Salah (Prayer) will be valid. the dog merely touching your clothes does not make them Najis (ritually impure) and you should not wash or change them for this reason.

Q 2: The dog is Najis (ceremonially impure); so what is the Najis in it, the saliva or something else? When should one wash his hands seven times, the first of which is with dust?

A: the stool, sweat, and saliva of dogs are Najis. The vessels and other objects it may stain should be washed with water until it becomes Tahir (ceremonially pure). As for the saliva in particular, one should wash what it gets onto seven times with water, one of them with dust or what replaces it such as soap or any other kind of detergent. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated, \(The purification of a vessel belonging to one of you, if a dog licks it, is to wash it seven times, one of which should be with dust.\) Reported by Muslim in his Sahih.

Q: A man says that whenever he cleanses his male organ (the penis) with water after urination, some water affects the spot around his genitals and sometimes this used water may come back to him from the seat of the toilet.

Furthermore, the questioner elaborates saying that he tries to wash every place which this water affects for he read in one of the books of Fiqh (Islamic Law) that the water used in cleansing an impurity is impure as well. In consequence, he became full of doubts lest he should not wash every place which this used water affected. So, he sometimes takes a bath after performing Istinja' (washing ones private parts after urination or defecation). What do you say to him for this case may be general owing to the kind of toilets used in houses and mosques?

A: A Muslim should protect himself from impurities and keep purifying himself from them for Salah (Prayer) is not valid except after performing ritual purification. As for the water that is scattered during cleansing your genitals, if it carries impurity, the place it affects should be cleansed with new pure water and if not, there is no harm bearing in mind that the principle ruling is cleanliness and nonexistence of impurity. Moreover, one should guard himself against things that bring satanic insinuations to him.

Q 2: I sometimes have a liquid discharge after urinating; is it thus Wajib (obligatory) on me to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity)?

A: Liquid discharge that a person has after urinating with no ejaculation or enjoyment entails the same ruling which applies to urine. Consequently, such a person only has to make Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and remake 'Wudu' (ablution). A: It is not permissible for a person who is sexually excited when kissing or hugging his nephews and nieces to kiss or hug them or to do any other act that may arouse sexual desire. It is Wajib (obligatory) upon him to perform Wudu' (ablution), and wash his male member and testicles as the Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded.

A: If the amount of blood on your garment was little, it will be forgiven. However, if it was a lot but you did not know except after Salah, your Salah and the Salah of those who follow you would be valid but you would have to wash it for the next Salah. If you saw it during Salah and you could take the garment off, do it and continue your Salah as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did with his shoes.

Q 3: my wife menstruated for two days, then blood stopped on the third day on which I had sexual intercourse with her. On the fifth day, menstrual bleeding resumed. What is the ruling on this? May Allah grant you long life and bless you!

A: The days on which your wife saw signs of complete Tuhr (ceremonial purity), even if they were during her menstruation cycle, then she is considered to have been in a state of Taharah (ceremonial purification) during them. Accordingly, if she performed Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity), it is lawful for you to have intercourse with her and she is permitted to perform Salah (Prayer) and observe Sawm (Fast) if no blood emits for a whole day or more. However, if bleeding resumed during her menstruation period, she is considered to be in menstruation and it was unlawful for you to have intercourse with her, and she is not permitted to observe Sawm during that period.

Q 1: What is the ruling on a woman who took a bath after the end of her menstrual period and her husband had sex with her then she found blood? It is worth mentioning that her period is seven days and they had passed. Could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you!

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned that her husband had sex with her after the end of her menstrual period and her cleanliness through making Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), there will be no blame on him. The discharge of blood after having sex will not harm him because what the woman saw after her period is Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period). However, if this happens in the next month, this shows that the period of her menstruation has changed unless it exceeds fifteen days.

On the other hand, if sexual intercourse happened before ascertaining the end of her period and seeing the complete purity but they depended on her usual period, then this sexual intercourse happened during menstruation. They have to repent and not repeat it again because the number of days of menstruation may increase or decrease and both must pay penance which is to give a Dinar or half a Dinar for the sake of Allah to the poor. The amount of a Dinar equals four-seventh of a Saudi Pound. If the value of the Saudi Pound is 70 riyals, each one will pay 20 or 40 riyals and whatever value they pay, will be sufficient.

First question of Fatwa no. 18414

Q 1: If a woman observes a little brown discharge after her menstruation period while no sign of menstruation persists, what must she do bearing in mind that the discharge continues for two or more days? Does she perform Salah (Prayer) and observe Sawm (Fast), or must she wait until she observes dry Tuhr (purity)?

A: If a woman ends her menstruation period and observes dry Tuhr or the white discharge, any other discharge is not considered menstruation. Rather, the discharges mentioned above will carry the same ruling that applies to urine, i.e. it suffices for her to perform only Istinja' (washing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and Wudu' (ablution). It is worth mentioning that this happens to many women who are all regarded as being in a Tuhr period during which they are to perform Salah and observe Sawm of Ramadan. This is supported by a Hadith which is narrated by Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said: "We used to consider yellow and dark discharges after the period had ended as nothing 'i.e. not menses'". (Related by Abu Dawud with a Sahih 'authentic' Sanad 'chain of narrators' and Al-Bukhari but without the phrase 'after the period had ended').

Q: my menses period used to last nine days after which I would be ceremonially pure for sixteen days. Ten years ago, however, my menses period changed increasing to fifteen days whereas days of purity decreased to only eleven days. It remained that way for a considerable period, for example, in the month of Ramadan I only observed Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (Fast) for eleven days and the same during the rest of the months. My menstruation usually begins on the first and last days of the month, given that the blood discharged is obviously menstruation and not Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) accompanied with a very light Kudrah (dusky-colored vaginal discharge during or after menstruation). It should be noted that during the menstruation days from the ninth to the fifteenth days the smell of the discharge is relatively mild compared to the offensive smell of the normal monthly menstruation. What really grieves me is that I cannot offer Salah and other acts of worship during this period and this affects one's faith and devotion. Likewise, the long period of the menstruation affects pregnancy, as the doctors told me that the days of the ovulation cycle begins from the eleventh to the fourteenth, a period during which I am usually ceremonially impure. During the last menstruation, the Kudrah continued until the sixteenth day of the month. Please advise me on what I should do as far as the acts of worship and my husband's rights are concerned, as I spend almost two-thirds of the month without offering any acts of worship. May Allah reward you!

A: As long as the menstruation does not exceed its usual period, which is fifteen days, you should abstain from offering Salah or Sawm on these days, and make up for the days in which you break your Fast in Ramadan. Menstruating women must make up for Sawm, but not for missed prayers. This is in accordance with the Hadith of `Aishah, may Allah be pleased with her, \(During the lifetime of the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) we used to have menses and we were ordered to compensate fasting and not to compensate prayers.\)

X-rays on the uterus for diagnosis and treatment of this disease?

A: You should not give up offering Salah and Sawm during the first eight days since the blood that comes out during these days is not the blood of menstruation but your menstruation period occurs in the following eight days when you should give up Salah and Sawm. However, you may take the medical examination you referred to if required.

A: When your menstruation ceases at any time during its seventh or eighth days, this does not mean that it is over or that you should perform Taharah. The rule of menstruation will remain in force as long as you are still in the days of your usual monthly period. The fourth question of Fatwa no. 20961

Q 4: what is the white Qassah in regard to women? What are the rulings related to it?

A: The scholars held different opinions concerning defining this white Qassah mentioned in the saying of the Mother of the Believers, `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her), "Do not be in a hurry until you see the white Qassah," meaning the Taharah (ritual purification) from the period of menstruation. There are two opinions held in this regard:

The first opinion designates that the white Qassah is a white fluid vaginally emitted by women at the end of menstruation and is a sign that the woman is about to become ritually pure.

As for the second opinion, it says that a woman inserts a piece of cotton or cloth in her vagina, and if it comes out white and clean with no traces of blood, yellowish fluid or Kudrah (dusky-colored vaginal discharge during or after menstruation), then this will be a sign that the woman is pure.

Accordingly, women become ritually pure by either of the two ways; when she sees a white discharge at the end of menstruation, or when she inserts a piece of cotton or so in her vagina and it comes out white. In either case she becomes ritually pure.

Fatwa no. 15989

Q: We received this question from a female: I have not yet married. my menstrual cycle used to last for seven days during the first two years, but later it increased to nine days. It then returned as it was in the beginning and used to last for seven days, then for nine days for more than three months. My menstruation then changed and lasted for eleven days. After that, it lasted for nine days after which I would be in a state of Taharah (ceremonial purification) for three days, then would see signs of blood again for one day, and then return to the state of Taharah for two days. I would remain in a state of Taharah for ten days, after which my new menstrual cycle would start again just like the first time. I have been suffering from this irregularity for around three months. The blood discharged is like the menstrual blood, that is, its color varies between red and brown. Your Honor, we hope you will advise us about what this irregularity entails in order to inform the inquirer about it. May Allah guide you and grant you success!

A: She should refrain from performing Salah (Prayer) and observing Sawm (Fast) when there is blood, and she should perform Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity) after each time the bleeding stops, whether menstruation lasts for a longer or shorter period as long as it does not last for fifteen days. If it lasts for more than fifteen days, she should consider it to last for a maximum of seven days, as it first used to be, and regard the bleeding after those seven days as Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual period). Accordingly, she must perform Ghusl after the seven days and then observe Sawm and perform Salah, but on the condition of performing Wudu' (ablution) before every Salah.

Q 1: is it permissible for a menstruating woman to enter the Masjid (mosque), hold the Mus-haf (Arabic Qur'an) and read from it?

A: It is permissible for a menstruating woman to enter a Masjid to pass by or fetch something from it without staying there, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade this. It is impermissible for her to hold the Mus-haf without a buffer, according to the statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him), «None should touch the Qur'an except one who is Tahir \(ceremoniously pure\).»

Q 3: A Muslim woman studies the Qur'an in a nearby village. While on the way to her lesson one day, she got her menses while holding the Qur'an. What should she have done in this case?

A: It is impermissible for a person who is in a state of major or minor ceremonial impurity to hold the Qur'an without a buffer. Since this woman was ceremonially impure, which is menstruation, she should have held the Qur'an while placing something between it and her hand, i.e. cloth, glove, etc.

Q 1: When a woman, who has performed Ghusl after her menses is over, goes to perform Wudu' (ablution) for Salah (Prayer) but finds some blood, must she perform Ghusl again or just Wudu' and then offer Salah? In another situation a woman may find some blood one day after she performed Ghusl and observed Salah. Must she perform Ghusl again?

A: When a woman, who does Ghusl after she has seen the sign of purity clearly, finds some blood, she should pay no attention to it. The state of purity and the Salah she performs are valid. If this blood lasts after the period is over, she should perform Wudu' for every single Salah when its time is due, as it is Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual) not menstruation.

Q 2: If a woman performs Ghusl (ritual bath) due to having menses after sunrise; should she offer Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer of the previous night?

A: If the menstrual blood of a woman stops before dawn, she will have to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and offer Maghrib and 'Isha'. On the other hand, if it stops before sunset, she will have to offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and if it stops after sunrise, she will not be obliged to perform any of the previous prayers.

Q: I am a twenty-eight-year-old woman. I have been suffering from prolonged menstruation periods since my marriage that reach ten days or even more. I went to many doctors, but they told me there is no cure for this, as it is caused by the weakness of my body. This causes a problem for me in Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (fasting). Starting from the sixth day, I begin to spot a few drops of blood, until the tenth or twelfth day. In Ramadan, I observe Sawm for only eighteen days, and I menstruate for the rest of the month.

I would like to know the normal number of days of menstruation, and the day on which a woman can perform Ghusl (ceremonial purification bath), offer Salah and observe Sawm.

A: Ten days seem to be your usual menstrual period, as what is "normal" differs from one woman to another. The period may extend to fifteen days, in which case you are to consider it menstruation, even if the bleeding is slight on some days and more on other days.

Q: My wife's menstrual period stops on the eighth day but the emission of the white vaginal discharge, which is the sign of purity is delayed to the tenth or eleventh day. Is it permissible for her to offer Salah (Prayer) or for me to have intercourse with her during this period, namely from the day the blood stops until the white discharge is discerned, as this period lasts for two or three days?

A: The menstrual period does not come to an end until the sign of purification is discerned. So, if a woman is sure that the blood stops and there is no sign of yellowish fluid or

Kudrah or the emission of white vaginal discharge, she has to perform Ghusl and she is permitted to offer Salah (Prayer) or to have intercourse with her husband. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says, [\(therefore keep away from women during menses and go not unto them till they are purified \(from menses and have taken a bath\). Q 2: Does a pregnant woman menstruate? If so, what is the ruling on the Salah and Sawm (fasting) she performed? If not, is it permissible for her to perform Salah and Sawm when she finds blood coming out of the uterus?

A: the discharges secreted from the pregnant woman during pregnancy are considered bad blood. Therefore, she should not abandon Salah or Sawm and her husband may have intercourse with her. She should perform 'Wudu' for each Salah when its time is due and wear sanitary napkins or so to Q: I am a twenty two year old single woman. My menstruation used to have a fixed duration of six days, but it has now changed. My menstruation starts on time, but only very slightly and the color of blood is not the same, with menstruation lasting for one week or more. My question is whether I have to perform Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity) and perform the Salah (Prayer)?

A: The blood that you see during the days of your menses is menstruation, even if it is a small quantity and different in color. You must perform Ghusl and Salah only upon seeing the complete tuhr (purity) either by the cessation of blood, or when you see the white discharge.

bleeding that was not accompanied by pain. It would subside for four hours and then resume in the form of drops. It is worth mentioning that she does not take any medications. Please, advise.

Fatwa no. 18445

Q: Before marriage, the menstrual period of my wife lasted five days. The blood used to flow for two days and then cease for a day then flow until it stops completely without a trace on the fifth day. After pregnancy and giving birth, she does not know exactly the days of her menses. During the last month of Ramadan, the days of postpartum period continued and she did not know when they should end and her menses should begin. Is there any blood during the days after the forty days of postpartum period? In this month the menses lasted for five days and then ceased then she stayed seven days before purification and then I had sex with her but later on blood flowed for two days.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 220)

It was like few drops on the sanitary towel. The spot was medium i.e. 5 cm wide and 5 cm long; what should she do now in such a case? Should she stop Salah (Prayer), taking into consideration that the blood was very bright and did not flow continuously but only a few drops like four drops in a day and night. Should she make up for the days she fasted in Ramadan after the end of her postpartum period because she feared that she was able to fast but did not observe it in Ramadan, so, she preferred to fast without performing Salah because the blood is intermittent after postpartum period. It is worth mentioning here that my wife teaches Qur'an to some Muslim children in a chamber in the university which is prepared for Salah. Teaching the Qur'an runs on a weekly basis. Is it permissible for her to go to this place during her menses or is it considered a Masjid (mosque)? This chamber is inside the university building but it is prepared for Salah. Could you kindly advice? May Allah reward you!

A: If this woman knows the exact period of her menstruation, then she has to stop Salah and Sawm (fasting) during Ramadan. When the blood ceases completely, she should perform Ghusl (ritual bathing) during Ramadan and then perform Salah. If she sees dark or yellow fluid, she should not give it much attention because of the saying of Um `Atiyah (may Allah be pleased with her), we did not consider dark or yellow fluid part of blood menses after purification.

there is no harm in her sitting in the Musalla (a place set for prayer) which is prepared for the Salah of women during her menses because it does not carry the rulings of a Masjid. However, she is not entitled to touch the Qur'an during her period because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(No person is permitted to touch the Qur'an unless they are pure.\)

As for postpartum period, it is only forty days. Whenever this period ends, the rulings of ritually pure women apply to that woman. She has to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and therefore, has the right to perform Salah, observe Sawm and have sexual intercourse with her husband. Whatever she sees of blood after this period is spoiled blood that does not have the ruling of menstruation or postpartum blood unless it flows during the time of her menstrual period, in which case she has to stop Salah and Sawm. if the woman ascertains her purification in the postpartum period before completing the forty days, she has to perform Ghusl and then she has the right to perform Salah, observe Sawm and have sexual intercourse with her husband. However, if the blood flows again within the forty days, she has to stop performing Salah and observing Sawm until the end of the forty days.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 18489

Q 4: A woman has menstrual blood on its definite time. However, in the first three days of her menstrual period, she finds no blood coming out except that she sees a token from inside the vagina which indicates the existence of blood and on the fourth day blood begins to come out and lasts for the determined days of the menstrual period. So, what is the ruling on the first three days? Should she offer Salah (Prayer) and observe Sawm (Fasting) during these first three days or not? It should be taken into account that this was not the natural period of its menstruation but it came in consequence of having surgery for purgation of the womb following a miscarriage and continued on all the months after that?

A: dusky-colored and yellowish vaginal discharges, which women find during the days of their menstrual period are regarded as menstrual blood due to which a woman has to abandon Salah and Sawm and it is forbidden for her husband to have sex with her in this period. Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her) said, "We used not to count Dusky-colored and yellowish vaginal discharges after having ritual purification as a thing of importance (as menses)." This means that both discharges will be considered menstrual blood if they appear before having ritual purification.

Q 4: We know that purification from menstruation is discerned by two cases; the first is the cease of blood and the second is the emission of the white vaginal discharge. My problem is that the menstrual blood stops, then after a few days I see the white discharge, and occasionally I see the white discharge followed by Kudrah (dusky-colored vaginal discharge during or after menstruation) and Sufrah (yellow vaginal discharge during or after menstruation). What is the ruling concerning each of the cases mentioned above? May Allah bless you! I hope you will give me the answer supported with proof. I would also like to know the difference between Kudrah and Sufrah.

A: When a menstruating woman makes Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) after the end of her menstrual period, the yellowish discharge or the dusky-colored vaginal discharge has no effect. Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her) said, "We used to consider dark and yellowish discharge as nothing (i.e. not menses)."

Q 2: Five days after the monthly period is over, she sees yellowish or brownish discharge. Should she stop Salah and Sawm (fasting) due to this discharge? Should she perform Ghusl for it? Two days after her Ghusl from this discharge, it occurred again. What should she do?

A: If a woman sees yellowish or brownish discharge after her period is over and performing Ghusl, she should not pay any attention to it. She has to perform Salah and Sawm. She need not perform Ghusl because of this discharge. This is based on the report narrated by Um `Atiyyah who said, "We used to not regard the brownish and yellowish discharge after the Tuhr (end of the period) as being of any significance." Similarly, there is nothing wrong with seeing the same discharge again. She has to perform Wudu' for each Salah when its time is due as long as the discharge is present. The Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered a woman who suffers from Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) to do so if she bleeds this discharge continually. If this discharge is absent when the time of Salah is due, her purity prior to this time will be valid.

Q 2: I have been having menstrual disorder for a few years caused by contraceptive pills; the menstrual blood used to flow strongly since the first day and last for six days after which it begins to decrease day by day until the blood stops on the sixth day. However, and in recent years, matters were very different with me. Three or four days before the menses, a few drops of dusky-colored vaginal discharge is emitted and on the third or fourth day, and even the fifth day, the menstruation blood is discharged normally, but it does not last six days as in past menses, rather five days only. I was examined by a female physician who told me that this dusky colored discharge is considered Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) during which you are allowed to perform Salah and Sawm and to have intercourse with your husband. The doctor also told me that the reason for this abnormal vaginal bleeding is a weakness of the secretion of a certain hormone in the body, and prescribed me a medical treatment, but it was not useful and I did not receive any medication afterwards. Is what this female Muslim doctor said to me true or not? Please advise.

A: the yellowish and dark discharges that are emitted outside the menstrual or post-partum period are considered nothing because Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her), said: "We used to consider dark and yellowish discharge as nothing (i.e. not menses)". However, if such discharges took place during the menstruation, then they are considered as a menstrual blood.

Q 1: What is the ruling on having sexual intercourse with a wife during her menstruation period?

A: Having sexual intercourse with the wife during her menstruation period is unlawful according to the Saying of Allah (Exalted be He): ﴿They ask you concerning menstruation. Say: that is an Adha \(a harmful thing for a husband to have a sexual intercourse with his wife while she is having her menses\), therefore keep away from women during menses and go not unto them till they are purified \(from menses and have taken a bath\). And when they have purified themselves, then go in unto them as Allâh has ordained for you \(go in unto them in any manner as long as it is in their vagina\).﴾ It is not permissible for a husband to have sexual intercourse with his wife during her menstrual period until it comes to an end then she performs Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) according to the Qur'anic Verse revealed in this regard. Whoever has sexual intercourse with his wife during her menstrual period or before she performs Ghusl, will be committing a sin and an act which Allah made unlawful. This person has to repent to Allah of such an abominable act and offer a Kaffarah (expiation). The Kaffarah for committing such a sin is to give a Dinar or half a Dinar to charity for the poor according to the Hadith reported by Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that he said about the person who had sexual intercourse with his wife during her menstrual period: (He has to give a Dinar or half a Dinar to charity) and a Dinar amounts to four sevenths of a Saudi pound. If the Saudi pound

Q 2: What is the ruling on a man who had sexual intercourse with his wife and only knew she had her menses after they had sex?

A: Anyone who has sexual intercourse with his wife without knowing that she is having her menses is not a sinner, but he should offer Kaffarah (expiation) which is to give as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) one or half a Dinar (old Arab coin that equals 2.975 grams of gold) of gold. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("He who has sexual intercourse with his wife during her menses should give a Dinar or half a Dinar as Sadaqah."\) (Related by Imam Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan (authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) through a Sahih (authentic) Sanad (chain of narrators)) Any menstruating woman should inform her husband of her menses.

Q 2: After my wife finishes her menses and has Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), I engage in sexual intercourse with her.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 227)

However, we sometimes find blood after that. This has happened two or three times; I do not remember exactly. Please bear in mind that I observe Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and leave her at once to have Ghusl when this happens. What is the ruling? May Allah benefit us and you!

A: A menstruating woman should not have Ghusl after menstruation until she finds the signs of purity (white discharge). It is not permissible for her husband to have sexual intercourse with her until her menses completely stops and she has Ghusl and becomes Tahir (ritually pure). Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿They ask you concerning menstruation. Say: that is an Adha (a harmful thing for a husband to have a sexual intercourse with his wife while she is having her menses), therefore keep away from women during menses and go not unto them till they are purified (from menses and have taken a bath). And when they have purified themselves, then go in unto them as Allâh has ordained for you (go in unto them in any manner as long as it is in their vagina).﴾ In your case, you should offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Kaffarah (expiation) which is to give in charity what is equal to one or half a Dinar of gold. The Dinar equals 4/7th of one Saudi pound according to the exchange rate of Dirhams.

Q 2: is it lawful for a husband to have sexual intercourse with his wife before she performs Ghusl after menstruation?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 228)

A: It is impermissible for a husband to have intercourse with his menstruating wife, for Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(therefore keep away from women during menses and go not unto them till they are purified \(from menses and have taken a bath\). And when they have purified themselves, then go in unto them as Allâh has ordained for you \(go in unto them in any manner as long as it is in their vagina\).\) That means if they performed Ghusl, as explained by Ibn `Abbas, because Allah said: \(till they are purified \(from menses and have taken a bath\).\) This refers to removing all signs of impurity, i.e. menstruating blood. Then Allah said: \(And when they have purified themselves, then go in unto them as Allâh has ordained for you \(go in unto them in any manner as long as it is in their vagina\).\) If they perform Ghusl, then it is lawful for you to have intercourse with them in the manner ordained for you by Allah. Allah stipulated two conditions for the permissibility of having intercourse with the menstruating woman; the first is the stopping of menstrual blood, and the second is taking a bath to remove all signs of menstruation, i.e. purification. Allah (may He be Praised and Exalted) praised those who adhere to His Shar` (Islamic Law) as He says: \(Truly, Allâh loves those who turn unto Him in repentance and loves those who purify themselves \(by taking a bath and cleaning and washing thoroughly their private parts, bodies, for their prayers\).\)

Fatwa no. 19973

Q: In some rare cases my menstruation keeps to the usual period of six or seven days. However, I used to use a medical organizer but some years ago I fell down from a high place while I was menstruating. I then bled and my menses became irregular and exceeded its normal duration. It is worth mentioning that I sometimes see the white discharge at the end of menstruation and at other times do not see it.

To come to the point, I started menstruating in the middle of the month of Sha'ban and it continued until the end of the twentieth of Ramadan before I saw Tuhr (purity). Nevertheless, seven days after my menstruation had started; I performed Ghusl, started to perform Salah (Prayer), observed Sawm (Fast), and recited Qur'an believing that my menstruation does not normally exceed seven days. It is worth mentioning that during that period my bleeding used to cease suddenly in the day time and flow again at night and vice versa. Bleeding would sometimes be of a large quantity. Moreover, I noticed that the color and fragrance of the blood was different from that of menstruation. I thus observed Sawm during Ramadan and performed Salah as I thought that menstruation would start towards the end of Ramadan as usual. Amazingly, when the expected time of menstruation approached, i.e. towards the end of Ramadan, my bleeding completely ceased and I became obviously Tahir (ritually pure).

My question now is, what is the ruling on my Salah and Sawm during Ramadan under the circumstances explained above? Do I have to make them up?

Provide me with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned, you have acted correctly by making Ghusl, starting to perform Salah and observing Sawm after the expiry of the period of your usual menstruation. This is because bleeding that exceeds the usual number of days of menstruation is not considered menstruation. Rather, it is a hemorrhage. And Allah knows best.

Q: I am a twenty year old married woman. my menstrual period used to be late for one to four months before I got married and one year after marriage. However, after the last sexual intercourse I had with my husband, I had bleeding mixed with white discharge. As this continued for one week, I thought it was menstruation and thus I started not to perform Salah (Prayer). Then I had bleeding of a brown color like that of dirt. It continued for ten days so I went to hospital and had a pregnancy test but it was negative. Finally, I had for the first time in my life a very little amount of dark red bleeding. This started thirty one days ago until now; a period during which I did not perform Salah. My question is whether such blood that I have is menstruation or Istihadah? Do I have to perform Salah? What is the ruling on the number of Salahs that I missed? What is istihadah? May Allah reward you with the best for availing Muslims.

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned, you will have to stop performing Salah only for the number of days of menstruation that you usually have every month. When that number of days expires, you have to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), perform Salah, and wrap up some cloth etc. to prevent blood flow during Salah until the time of the next menstruation period. This was what the Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded women to do during Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period). Moreover, if you have continuous bleeding; it will be Wajib (obligatory) on you to make Wudu' (ablution) for every Salah after the start of its time. In addition, you have to make up for the number of Salahs that you did not perform while you were not in menstruation. May Allah help and guide you. May He cure you from all illnesses.

Q 2: is it permissible for a menstruating woman to recite the Qur'an without touching Al-Mus-haf (Arabic copy of the Qur'an)?

A: It is permissible for the menstruating woman to recite the Qur'an by heart without touching Al-Mus-haf directly if she wants to recite the Qur'an so that she does not forget it. This case is not applicable to Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) for which a person in a state of Janabah is not permitted to recite the Qur'an from Al-Mus-haf or by heart until they perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity). It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him): «Nothing would prevent him from \(reciting\) the Qur'an except being in a state of Janabah.» Related by Imam Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan (authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes). In another narration recorded by Ahmad on the authority of `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) with a good Isnad (chain of narrators) that «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) recited some \(verses\) of the Qur'an and said: This applies to a person who is not in a state of Janabah, but the one who is in a state of Janabah is not allowed to recite even one verse.» As for the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade a menstruating woman from reciting the Qur'an, it is a weak hadith.

Q 1: I read in the book compiled by Your Eminence "Issues related to the Woman" that I can differentiate between the menstruating blood and that of Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) which sometimes may be a drop or two or fluid mixed with blood. You also said that a woman, in a state of Istihadah, can perform Wudu' (ablution) for every Salah. Is it permissible to perform Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah with the same ablution as well? Will my Salah be accepted if I only washed my underpants, or should I wash all my clothes?

A: If some drops of blood fell on the clothes, then you should wash the garments you wear when offering Salah or the prayer mat, and if you were suffering from Istihadah, you should perform Wudu', pad yourself well and offer the obligatory Salah after making sure that you are perfectly pure. It is permissible for you to offer any supererogatory prayers until the time due for the next obligatory Salah comes, and for which you should offer new Wudu' as you did for the previous obligatory one.

Q 5: What is the ruling on a woman who after the beginning of her fifties and a year after her menopause, blood came due to pathological or psychological problems. Should she offer Salah?

A: The discharged blood from a woman during her menopause at the age of fifty is not menstrual blood. It is bad blood. Therefore, she should not abandon Salah or Sawm (fasting). Moreover, it does not have the same rulings of menstruation. `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said, "Once a woman reaches the age of fifty, menstruation ends." (Related by Ahmad)

Q: Doctors prescribe for some patients who have passed the age of menstruation a medication for the treatment of osteoporosis and other symptoms which result from cessation of menstruation. This medication supplies the patient with hormones similar to those responsible for the discharge of menstrual blood. If the patient takes this medication, regular bleeding resumes. Should this blood be considered menstrual blood which makes it prohibited for the woman to offer Salah (Prayer), observing Sawm (Fast), etc. or should she count it as Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period)? It is worth mentioning that some patients regard it as menstrual bleeding and refrain from offering Salah. What should they do?

A: If it is a woman who has reached her fifties and thus, passed the age of menstruation, she should not regard it as menstrual blood and refrain from offering Salah and observing Sawm. Instead, she should regard it as bleeding or impure blood, especially if she knows that the reason for the discharge is taking the stated medication.

Q3: A women claims that she is now approaching menopause and her period has begun to stop gradually or stops for four months or more. After that some blood remains inside her vagina and does not go out. She knows that it is blood by cleaning it with a tissue. This blood continues for twenty days or more. Given all this, should she offer Salah or not?

A: When a woman experiences menopause at the age of fifty, the bleeding or yellowish blood she discharges is not menstrual blood which requires a woman to stop Salah and Sawm (fast). In fact it is impure blood which only nullifies Wudu' (ablution). This woman is to perform Istinja' (washing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and purify her vagina of this blood before performing Wudu'.

Q: My sister underwent many surgical operations in the uterus, which caused her menstrual period to become continuous, to the extent that it might come two or three times a day. Sometimes it is just few drops, but it does not stop, given that before the operations her period was regular, but became irregular after them. Having undergone many operations, her period is almost continuous. She now takes medicine four times a day.

She did not observe Sawm (fasting) this year in Ramadan, and she has not been able yet to make up for it. How should she make up for last year? How can she observe Sawm this year while the doctor recommends that she does not stop the medication for fear of complications, may Allah forbid. And Allah knows best.

She now offers Salah (Prayer) some times and leaves it at other times. What is the ruling on her Salah? How and when should she offer Salah?

How can she perform Hajj and `Umrah if she remains like this? Please advise, may Allah reward you for what you do for Islam and the Muslims. May Allah cure everybody of every disease.

A: This woman is considered one who experiences recurrent symptoms of istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period). Since her menstruation was regular before undergoing these operations, she should track the usual time of her menstruation before the operations, and leave Salah and Sawm during this time. After the end of these days, she should perform Ghusl (ritual bath), wrap her private parts with cotton or anything that prevents the overflow of blood as much possible, then she can offer Salah and observe Sawm if she is able to do so. She should also make up for the days in which she broke her Sawm during menstruation. She takes the same ruling as Tahir (ritually pure) women concerning the permissibility of having intercourse with her husband, even if blood flows from her, as it is considered Istihadah. However, she should perform Wudu' (ablution) for every Salah if any blood is discharged from her after the previous Wudu'. If Sawm is too difficult for her, and she is harmed by not taking the medicines as recommended by her doctor, she may stop observing Sawm in Ramadan as an ill person. If her case is curable, she should wait until she recovers and then make up for the days in which she did not observe Sawm. If it is a chronic illness that is most likely not curable according to the doctors, she should feed a needy person for each day in which she did not observe Sawm. The amount of feeding is half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of wheat, dates, rice or such foods common among the people of the country. There is no harm on her in this case, and she does not have to make up for those days, according to Allah's saying, \(And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskîn \(poor person\) \(for every day\).\)

Allah (Exalted be He) also says, ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) also says, ﴿and has not laid upon you in religion any hardship﴾

As for performing Hajj and `Umrah, if it coincides with her regular menstruation in the past, it is prescribed for her to perform Ghusl (ritual bath) and assume Ihram (ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah), as the Prophet (peace be upon him) ﴿asked `Aishah to perform Ghusl for Hajj while she was menstruating.﴾ It was authentically reported that he (peace be upon him) ﴿asked Asma' bint `Umays to perform Ghusl while she was in her postpartum period.﴾ She should perform all the rituals of Hajj except Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah) on the days of her menstruation. When they come to an end, or if her menstruation does not coincide with the days of Hajj and `Umrah, she is considered to have Istihadah; she should wrap her private parts with cotton or so in order not to soil the Masjid (mosque) and perform Tawaf in a normal way. There is no harm on her in this. She should then carry out the other rituals of Hajj and `Umrah.

While she is performing Salah (Prayer), she feels as if something would come out of her and she finds nothing. It should be noted that she takes care of her cleanliness.

Q 1: when I had sexual intercourse with my husband for the first time, I bled slightly for three consecutive days. It was light and discontinuous. I am asking about the three days on which I did not observe Salah (Prayer) because of this blood; should I make up for them? Am I a sinner for not observing Salah during those days?

A: If the blood discharged was during the usual time of your menstrual cycle, it is regarded as menstrual blood during which you should not offer Salah. On the other hand, if it was not during the usual time of your menstrual cycle, it is considered bleeding, especially that you mentioned it occurred after the first act of sexual intercourse with your husband. Thus, it seems that it was bleeding because of which you should not have refrained from offering Salah. Accordingly, you are obligated to make up for the Salah you missed.

Urinary incontinence

The first question of Fatwa no. 16789

Q: If a person suffers from a disease in the urinary tract that makes the period of discharging urine take a whole minute, and that not only bothers him but even causes him to sometimes miss the congregational prayer, does such a person come under the same ruling concerning those who suffer urinary incontinence?

A: if a person discharges urine in a period longer than what is usual due to a disease in the urinary tract, he should not hasten to perform Wudu' until he is certain that his urine is fully discharged, then he should perform Wudu' and Salah, even if he misses the congregational prayer because he is excused. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾

However, the said person does not come under the same ruling of a person suffering from urinary incontinence, because his urine stops but its full discharge is delayed. He should also wash the parts of his clothes or body that are contaminated by urine to perform Salah. Similarly, he should take his time to discharge his urine before the time of congregational prayer is due in order not to miss it.

Q: I suffer from a problem in my urinary system which causes the retention of urine or that urine may flow out involuntarily before I am ready to urinate. As a result of this problem, some drops may fall on my clothes while I am at work which requires me to wear trousers and a shirt. Before I offer Salah (Prayer) I wash the place on which urine drops fell before I perform Wudu' (ablution) but I still have doubts regarding this. So, is what I do enough and is the Salah I offer right? Please, give me your Fatwa regarding this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: According to what you elaborated on, it is necessary for you to perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) before Wudu' and wash the parts of your body or clothes that were contaminated by urine. Then you have to perform Wudu' and Salah and do this whenever you leak something as you explained when you want to perform Salah. Allah knows best.

Q: I had a hemorrhoids operation more than a year and a half ago, and after this operation, I could no longer control the state of Taharah (ritual purification) regarding the passage of gases, urine and the like. This caused me grief and a difficulty to purify the parts which become wet in order to perform Salah. I now ask whether i should change the wet underpants at the time of every Salah, bearing in mind the great difficulty implied in this matter when I am at work or in a lecture that lasts from Maghrib (Sunset) to `Isha (Night) prayers, given that I perform Wudu' for every Salah, but changing my clothes becomes very difficult for me. Should I wear a big diaper until the end of the day as long as there is not much wetness?

Is it permissible for me to combine prayers with one Wudu' when traveling or at times of rainfall?

Is it permissible for me to wipe over my socks?

Is it permissible for me to occasionally perform Wudu' a few minutes before the time of Salah is due so that I become able to perform congregational prayer, as in the case of being in Makkah and to avoid people rushing towards toilets?

What is the ruling concerning my performing prayers in the past which their number I do not know and for which I offered Wudu' before they were due?

A: Firstly, you should wear a big diaper so that no impurity falls on your underpants, and you have to change this diaper if it is contaminated by any Najasah. As for your underpants, you do not have to change them as long as they were not contaminated by any Najasah.

Secondly, there is nothing wrong with you attending lectures and lessons as long as you are certain that no impurity will be caused to the Masjid.

Thirdly, a person inflicted with urine incontinence should perform Wudu' for each Salah after its time is due, and if he combines two prayers while in travel or as a result of rainfall, it would suffice him to offer only one Wudu', because offering the two prayers at the time of one is considered as one prayer. Furthermore, it is permissible for you to wipe over the Khuffs (leather socks) if you wore them in a state of Taharah. As for performing Wudu' before the time of Salah is due, we hope that Allah may forgive you. You should also continue offering the optional night prayers or Qiyam-ul-Layl, reciting the Qur'an and attending the circles of learning and do not let Satan deceive you; rather you should be patient in the face of adversity and you will be greatly rewarded. We ask Allah that He might cure you and to make you steadfast to the truth. May Allah guide us all to what pleases Him!

Fatwa no. 16954

Q: I heard from a brother that whoever suffers from uncontrollable enuresis or gases, has to perform Wudu' (ablution) shortly before each Salah. If this is true, what is the evidence for it? Does the person who suffers from uncontrollable enuresis have to perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) before each Salah? Does he have to remove the impurity in the piece of cloth he placed to prevent drops of urine from reaching his garment?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 245)

If it is Friday Prayer, should he wait till the Imam is about to finish the second sermon then perform Wudu'? Is it permissible for him to perform Wudu' at home then go to the Masjid? As regards to wiping over leather socks, shoes or regular socks, if the person who suffers from uncontrollable enuresis finished Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer then put on his leather socks or the like, is it permissible for him to wipe over them for the next Salah?

A: When the time of Salah (Prayer) is due, whoever suffers from permanent uncontrollable enuresis must first perform Istinja' then place something on his penis to absorb the drops of urine then perform Wudu' and offer Salah and so on for every Salah. The evidence for this is the Statement of Allah (Exalted be He): «So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can» The Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered a menstruating woman to place a piece of cloth and perform Wudu' for every Salah. It is permissible for one who suffers from uncontrollable enuresis to wear leather socks and wipe over them according to the generality of Islamic proofs, and Allah knows best!

Q: a whitish transparent liquid flows from me all the time.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 246)

This disturbs and perplexes me. I went to a female gynecologist who said that this is normal. I became sure that this fluid was not dangerous. However, the problem is Salah (Prayer), for this fluid is discharged at no specific time. Sometimes, it flows while I offer Salah, so that I interrupt my Salah to change my clothes and renew my Wudu' (ablution), but at other times, I complete the Salah. I fear that my Salah and Wudu' are in doubt; besides, I can not keep Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) while offering Salah. I hope you can guide me to what I can do about this.

A: This fluid nullifies the Wudu', so when you intend to offer Salah, you should make Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and pad the urethra to prevent its spread and then you can make Wudu' and offer Salah. If the fluid comes out while you offer Salah, you should leave Salah and do as we mentioned before, then continue your Salah, unless this fluid comes out continuously, in this case you are to complete your Salah, even if it comes out, for it will be like urine incontinence. This is if you make Wudu' when the time of prayer is due, for whoever continuously has discharges, such as urine or Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) and the like should make Wudu' when the time of each Salah is due and then offer it. They are not to blame for what discharges while they are offering Salah as long as the discharge is continuous.

Q: In Al-Jomaih Masjid (mosque) in the district of King Faisal, a 60-year-old man suffers from urinary incontinence and performs Salah in congregation with many people. He wets his pants and the carpets covering the Masjid's floor. We are unable to wash these carpets each time he urinates on them. Many people who are led by the Imam avoid standing in the row where this man is present. We made a special carpet on which he can perform Salah and to keep the other carpets clean, but he leaves it and uses the carpets of the Masjid. We let him, his brother and nephew know that his presence in the masjid causes other people to leave the masjid. It is worth mentioning that the masjid smells bad even if incense is burned. People began to be uncertain about the validity of Salah due to the impurities caused by this man who moves throughout the Masjid. Please tell us your Fatwa concerning this issue. May Allah guide you and grant you success! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

Q: I suffer from a urinary tract disease and have spared no effort in seeking treatment. All the doctors I consulted were uncertain about the nature of this disease and its causes. During last Ramadan, Allah facilitated for me to present my case to a consultant specialist in these diseases. After careful examination, the doctor discovered that there is some tissue lining the inside wall of the penis, whose function is to secrete a natural fluid in healthy people. However, in my case, this tissue is inflamed and, thus, secretes this fluid in large quantities. It is similar in color and description to Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted when aroused) but has no bad smell and is not discharged because of arousal. This confused me regarding Taharah (ceremonial purification), because before this last examination and diagnosis I thought it was Madhy; however, the doctor explained that these tissues are responsible for secreting this fluid and that my other organs and systems are all sound.

My questions are:

a) Is this fluid Tahir (ceremonially pure) or Najis (ceremonially impure)?

(Part No. 4; Page No. 249)

b) If it is Najis, am I obligated to cleanse my clothes and thighs? Am I required to purify myself for every Salah (Prayer)?

c) Should I take precautions to prevent the spread of this fluid by covering the penis?

It is worth mentioning that this creates a great burden for me.

A: If the case is as you mentioned that your penis always discharges a fluid similar to the Madhy in its color and description but has no bad smell and is discharged without a sexual arousal, it takes the same ruling as enuresis. This means that you must perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water) and perform Wudu' (ablution) for each Salah. Moreover, you must guard against its spreading on your clothes and thighs by covering the penis as much as possible. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can\)

We ask Allah to grant you recovery and reward you for your illness.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 251)

Since I take a bath for every Salah, I have built a bathroom attached to my bedroom to shorten the time I would take between Wudu' and Salah. I feel great sorrow because I can not perform congregational prayer in the masjid (Salah), especially that I am one of the people who call to Islam and join Jihad (fighting/striving in the Cause of Allah). Is there any way out for this problem? My family and neighbors consider me a pious person and they wonder why I do not join them in the congregational prayer. It is noteworthy that I wear an adult diaper during Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. But, it is hard, practically and financially, to use it for every Salah. All attempts I made to seek treatment from this disease were of no avail. Please advise and make Du`a' for me at midnight or at a time when it is most likely to be accepted by Allah. May Allah protect and reward you the best for benefiting the Muslims! Amen

Q 1: Allah predestined that I was subjected to an accident in which I fell from a palm tree. as a consequence, I suffered from hemiplegia and double incontinence for 5 years. What is the ruling on this? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You have to make Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water) and Wudu' (ablution) when the time of Salah (Prayer) is due. Then, you can offer Salah in that time, and if something comes out of you during Salah, there is no harm on you. Q 1: Is it permissible for a young women who is unable to hold her urine for a long time to abandon Salah (Prayer), as she cannot keep Wudu'?

A: It is not permissible for this woman to abandon Salah, because of her inability to hold her urine. She should offer Salah in a manner that suits her. She can perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) and place a barrier that prevents urine from leaking. She should then perform Wudu' and pray even if the urine emits during Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) states, \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) advised the woman who experienced Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), "Perform Wudu' for each Salah."

Q 1: i am a diabetic and i leak some drops of urine while offering Salah (Prayer) at the Masjid (mosque) so I leave Salah to change my clothes and renew my Wudu' (ablution). What should I do? Guide me, may Allah reward you!

A: If urine comes out continuously, you should do Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) when you want to offer Salah and pad your penis to prevent the urine from reaching your body and clothes, then you should perform Wudu' and offer Salah whenever the time of each Salah is due. If urine comes out while you offer Salah, your Salah is valid in this case.

(Part No. 4; Page No. 255)

Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾

However, if the urine does not come out continuously, you should leave Salah if urine comes out while you offer it and wash the spot that the urine stained of your body and clothes and then perform Wudu' and offer Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet, his family and Companions!

Q: Praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet, Muhammad. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has looked into the question sent to His Eminence, the general Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from his Eminence, the Manager of the Center of Da`wah and Guidance in Jeddah, and which is referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the no. (516), dated 28, Muharram, 1416. The questioner asked the following:

A new Imam came to our Masjid in Jeddah and told us that he had a disease in the large intestine that causes him to have constipation and to pass wind, and for this reason he offers Wudu' for every Salah after its time is due, but sometimes when he leads prayers, he passes wind and he is certain of that either by its sound or smell. He asks whether his ignorance of the ruling of passing wind affects his Salah, as he used to think that not controlling the passage of wind does not affect his Taharah (ritual purification).

What is the ruling on offering Salah behind that Imam who is sure of his passing wind?

Is he obliged to tell those who offered prayers behind him about the prayers which he performed without being Tahir (ritually pure)? What is the ruling if he was unaware of the prayers which he offered as lacking Taharah? How should he tell people about that?

Do you advise him to continue as an Imam for that Masjid, given that his disease is not related to wind incontinence; rather just an occasional case in which he can not resist passing wind? I hope you will attend to this issue and provide us with the relevant answer.

A: Examining the issue, the Committee answered as follows:

If the reality is as you have mentioned, then this person does not have a continual passage of wind; rather he only suffers an occasional disease which forces him to pass wind unwillingly. Hence, if the said person passes wind whether in Salah or at any other time, he should repeat Wudu', because his impurity is not permanent. Furthermore, it is preferable for him to not lead people in prayers, as he might confuse the people being led if he suffers this condition while leading the congregational prayer. As for the past prayers, he is excused because of his ignorance of the related ruling. May Allah forgive him!

Postpartum period

The third, fourth, and fifth questions of Fatwa no. 19312

Q3: What is the ruling on the blood that a woman discharges at the first and last months of pregnancy caused by carrying a heavy object, falling, or other reasons related to a disease in her womb?

A: The blood a pregnant woman discharges while the baby is in her womb is considered as bleeding which does not require a woman to stop Salah (Prayer) or Sawm (fast), most especially if she knows that the reason behind this blood is a disease, carrying a heavy object, or falling, etc. She must wear a piece of cotton or so, offer Salah and Sawm and perform Wudu' (ablution) for each Salah as long as she discharges this blood.

Q 4: If a pregnant woman aborts a fetus, she undergoes curettage. The postpartum blood stops and then bleeding flows because of the curettage. Is she considered Tahir (ritually pure), or is it postpartum bleeding?

A: First, it is impermissible to perform abortion except by a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) based on a demanding necessity that is confirmed by a consultative body of trusted doctors.

Second, if abortion of the fetus is permissible in this case, the bleeding after it, is considered postpartum blood, during which a woman should leave Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (fasting) for forty days, unless it is proven to be normal bleeding and that the postpartum blood has stopped. In this case, it is not considered postpartum period during which she should leave Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (fasting).

Q 5: how should a woman who suffers from bleeding offer Salah (Prayer), if it is permissible for her?

A: If a woman suffers from continuous bleeding, she should perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation), wear a pad that prevents leakage, perform Wudu' (ablution) and then offer Salah. She must repeat this for every Salah, according to the advice of the Prophet (peace be upon him) to a woman who experienced Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), "Perform Wudu' at the time of every Salah."

Q 1: A man's wife delivered their baby on the ninth day of the blessed month of Ramadan and after nine days, childbirth blood stopped. Thus, she made Ghusl (ritual bath) and offered Salah (Prayer) and observed Sawm (Fasting) but she noticed that during the night small drops of blood flows out of her, while during the day she sees nothing of this. What is the ruling in this regard? Is the Salah and Sawm she offered correct? Please, give us a Fatwa in the case at hand. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If this woman found perfect purity, her Salah

and Sawm are valid for she is regarded as Tahir (ritually pure). As for what she saw of drops of blood at night, they are not considered childbirth blood and therefore its ruling is not applied to it. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions! Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta'

Q 2: A woman had a miscarriage in her first months of pregnancy, and discharged a fetus the size of a fist. What are the rulings regarding this issue? Could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you.

A: if a pregnant woman miscarries a piece of flesh or clotted blood which was not formed in shape yet, it does not take the ruling of a newborn which requires that Funeral Prayer be offered, no `Iddah (woman's prescribed waiting period after divorce or widowhood) is due on her, and there is no postpartum period. Therefore, the blood which she sees is not considered except if it coincides with her period which in this case will be considered menstrual bleeding.

If however the fetus was formed after reaching three months, and the least period is eighty one days, it takes the same ruling of a newborn baby, the lapse of `Iddah, postpartum period; so what a woman sees is postpartum discharge which demands that she discontinues Salah and Sawm (fasting). The days are to be made up for the Sawm she discontinued during her postpartum period. The fetus is not washed, enshrouded, or prayed upon until it reaches four months. Imam Ahmad was asked how old a dead baby should be in order for the funeral prayer to be obligatory, and he said four months because the spirit is blown into it when it reaches this stage.

It is to be wrapped in a piece of cloth, enshrouded, and buried in a hole because there is no life in it. Hence, he is not a baby before the lapse of four months.

Fatwa no. 14512

Q: I have been suffering from menstrual disorders since twelve days after I gave birth, as my husband had an accident in which he was badly injured, and was carried to hospital, then when I knew of what happened to him, I panicked over him. I became so distressed and afraid, and I wept a lot during the time when he was in hospital in a dangerous condition for thirty days. My condition was so terrible that the postpartum bleeding did not stop after forty days; it lasted for ten more days, although the postpartum bleeding usually lasts for twenty or twenty five days with me. Three days later, the bleeding started again. It continued for five days, then I became Tahir (ritually pure) for two or three days, and then the bleeding started again. My menstruation has become irregular, which means that it comes two, three or maybe even four times a month. I sought treatment in hospital, but it was of no use. I remained in this condition for five months, given that this is menstrual blood. The days on which I offer Salah (Prayer) have become very few, because whenever the bleeding starts, I leave Salah until I become Tahir. However, the days of Tuhr (period of ritual purity) are much less than the days on which I have menstruation.

I would like to ask about what I should do in this case. Should I go on like this and leave Salah on the days in which I bleed, and offer it again on the days of Tuhr? I leave Salah for very long intervals.

If Ramadan comes while I suffer from the same condition, what should I do?

May Allah reward you.

A: First, you should make up for the Salah of the last ten days of the postpartum period.

Second, in the future, you have to leave Salah on the days of your usual menstruation every month, and the rest is considered Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), during which you can offer Salah, observe Sawm (fasting) and have intercourse with your husband, as this blood is abnormal.

Third, you should make up for the Salah you left on days other than those of menstruation.

Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta'

Q 2: What is the maximum period for postpartum?

A: The maximum postpartum period is forty days, based on the Hadith of Umm Salamah: "A woman in postpartum in the time of the Messenger of Allah, peace be upon him, used to wait for forty days". Related by Al-Tirmidhi and others. However, if she discerns purification before then, she must bathe, offer Salah, fast Ramadan, and can have intercourse with her husband. If bleeding reoccurs during the forty days, it is considered postpartum blood until she discerns purification or completes forty days.

Q 3: Should a woman offer Salah while experiencing symptoms of the labor of childbirth such as discharging blood along with labor pains, although she is not yet ready to deliver? Is it permissible for a woman to offer Salah in cases of early labor when the amniotic fluid is discharged?

A 3: the vaginal discharge a day or two before delivery accompanied by labor signs is regarded as postpartum blood. A woman should not observe Sawm (fasting) or offer Salah. However, if this is not accompanied by labor signs, it is not regarded as postpartum blood. She should observe Sawm and offer Salah even if the blood is discharged, as it has the same ruling of urine.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 15925

Q 4: When does a woman become Tahir (ceremonially pure) after the Postpartum Period?

A: Taharah from postpartum bleeding and before the completion of forty days occurs when the woman sees signs of purification, i.e. white vaginal discharge or stoppage of bleeding altogether, or the completion of the postpartum period which is forty days even if the bleeding has not stopped.

Fatwa no. 17250

Q: A woman, who was in the fourth month of pregnancy, was breast-feeding her child and did not know that she was pregnant and experienced bleeding. She went to the hospital and there she was told that she was pregnant and she would soon have a miscarriage. After she was examined, they found that what was inside her was not a baby but just an empty placenta and they performed a cleansing operation. Is this considered postpartum blood?

Note: The doctors said that the baby might have died in the first or second month. She took an antibiotic without knowing that she was pregnant, which caused the miscarriage.

A: If the reality is as mentioned in the question, this woman is not in postpartum period. In fact, she is in the menstruation period. She can offer Salah, Sawm, and have sexual intercourse with her husband. But she has to perform 'Wudu' at the time of every Salah and place a piece of cotton or something like it. She does not have to do any thing as regards the death of the embryo, because it was not yet complete. She has to stop Salah and Sawm during the days of her menstruation, then make up for the missed obligatory Salah and Sawm.

While my wife was in the second month of her pregnancy, drops of blood came out of her. The doctor told her that this is normal. Thus, I had sexual intercourse with her and she offered Salah (Prayer) by performing Wudu' (ritual ablution) for every Salah. When the discharge of blood increased, we visited another doctor who told us that it was a pseudocyesis that should be aborted. What is the ruling on the Salah she offered and the sexual intercourse I referred to? What about visiting a male doctor instead of a female doctor bearing in mind that the most specialized doctors in this field are men? Does my wife take the ruling of Nufasa' (a woman in the state of birth blood discharge) following the operation of abortion seeing as the blood continued flowing for a day and she completed the forty days then made Ghusl (ritual bath) and made up for Salah of two days? Is what she did right or not? How should she make up for the Salah she missed?

A: When a woman becomes sure of her pregnancy, the blood that comes out of her is regarded as bad blood which does not prevent her from offering Salah or having sexual intercourse with her husband. In addition, it is illegal to have an abortion unless the death of her fetus is confirmed. As for going to a male doctor for remedy instead of a female doctor, it is permissible if there is not a specialized doctor in the concerned field and there is a necessity for this. By the same token, if the aborted fetus does not take the shape of a human being, the blood that comes out after aborting it is not to be regarded as childbirth blood, so she should offer Salah (Prayer) as the blood takes the ruling of bad blood. It is worth mentioning that the least period to check the creation of a human being is eighty one days.

Q 1: I have a female neighbor who is ninety years old. She is like a mother to me. She told me that she used to not offer Salah (prayer) for sixty days after her postpartum period, not forty. She has seven children. Your Eminence, what is your opinion in this regard? How can this woman make up for the acts of worship she missed, given that she does not know their number?

A: the maximum postpartum period is forty days. If the woman completes forty days, she has to perform Ghushl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and offer Salah even if there is still a flow of blood. In such a case, she takes the ruling of the woman in a state of Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), and as such she should make Wudu' (ablution) before each Salah and insert a piece of cloth into her vagina to prevent this bleeding. This will be the case unless this is the time of her monthly menstruation. The said woman is not excused for neglecting Salah after the elapse of forty days of post-partum period unless it was the time of her usual menses. Accordingly, she has to make up for the missed Salaha as much as she possibly can. She should try to estimate the number of the Salaha which she did not offer after being Tahir (ritually pure) before the completion of forty days or after the completion of the post-partum period. Hence, she should perform these Salaha respectively each day and night until she completes the days in which she did not offer the obligatory Salaha after the elapse of her post-partum period.

Obligation to perform Salah and making up Salah

Q 2: Some people say that the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers were originally fifty in number but the Prophet (peace be upon him) asked Allah (Exalted be He) to decrease them as this was the advice of prophet Musa (Moses, peace be upon him). As the number was thus decreased to five; was the reward for the remaining forty five Salah omitted? On the other hand, some other people are of the opinion that the number of Salah was initially five but the reward of each one is multiplied by ten and thus a person receives the reward of fifty Salah on a daily basis. They support their view by Allah's saying: ﴿No change can there be in the Words of Allāh.﴾ .

A: A person receives the reward of fifty Salah for the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers they perform because every good deed is multiplied by ten. All praise be to Allah Alone.

She is not permitted to abandon Salah at all, or to obey her father in this regard. A: It is related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Whoever misses Salah due to sleeping or forgetfulness, he should offer it when he remembers it\)

Hence, whoever misses an obligatory Salah due to sleeping, then he should offer it when he wakes up. However, it is impermissible for the said person to take this matter as a habit whereby he misses many prayers; otherwise he would be sinful.

Q 8: One day I could not pray Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer but I performed the Maghrib Prayer of the following day on time; am I correct?

A: Whoever misses a Salah (Prayer) due to sleeping or oblivion, it is Wajib (obligatory) on them to make it up whenever they remember it or wake up and they should not delay it until any other time. Proof for the foregoing is a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: [\(Whoever misses a Salah due to oblivion or sleep, they have to offer it when they remember it. A: Whoever offers a certain obligatory Salah then he discerns that it is invalid, he should only repeat it at once. Its invalidity has nothing to do with the preceding or later Salahs as long as there is nothing to invalidate them.

Q 1: My father died nine months ago after suffering from a malicious disease. four months before his death, he did not offer Salah (Prayer) due to symptoms of hallucination and forgetfulness caused by the illness and medication. When he woke up in slightly good health, we told him to offer Salah, but he would say that he could not. If he prayed, he might sleep during the Salah or even forget what time and which Salah he was offering. Even if we told him about the Salah he was about to offer, he would soon forget and fold the prayer mat claiming that he finished Salah.

Is there anything this man or his sons are required to do, because until this moment they did not pay anything in charity in return for his missed Salahs, especially in the last two months preceding his death? At that time his health critically deteriorated and he completely missed Salahs while his sons did not pay attention to that matter.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 12)

It should be noted that this man had enough money and wealth to pay in charity what compensates for the missed Salahs or Sawm (Fasting) for the last two months of Ramadan. How can charity be paid to make up for the missed Salahs during four months and Sawm during the last two months of Ramadan?

A: If your father lost his mind as a result of his disease, then Salah and Sawm would be waived for him, and he will not be accountable when in this state, because accountability for such acts of worship are associated with the faculty of reason which he no longer had. Accordingly, you and he are not to blame and you do not have to offer Kaffarah (expiation) for that.

Q 1: My grandfather is about one hundred and fifty years old. One year ago he started to lose his mental capacity at times. Moreover, he is now unable to move and consequently unable to perform the obligatory Salah (Prayer). It may be worth mentioning that my grandfather has a continuous and uncontrollable discharge of excrement and urine. My question here is whether it is Wajib (obligatory) on him to perform Salah? It is worth mentioning that my grandfather becomes mentally disordered only sometimes, not all the time. Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: At times when your grandfather has his full mental capacity, it is Wajib on him to perform Salah as much as he can. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When I command you to do anything, do of it as much as you possibly can...﴾

Your grandfather has to clean himself and make 'Wudu' (ablution), or make Tayammum (dry ablution) in case of his inability to use water, or just to perform Salah without making any 'Wudu' or Tayammum in case of his inability to make Tayammum. Besides, your grandfather has to perform Salah standing, sitting in case of his inability to stand up, lying down on his sides in case of his inability to sit, or lying down on his back in case of his inability to lie down on his side. This is also supported by Allah's saying: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Pray while standing and if you can't, pray while sitting and if you can't do even that, then pray lying on your side.﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 'authentic' Book of Hadith). Al-Nasa'iy related the same with the addition of: "and if you can't, pray lying on your back."

On the other hand, your grandfather does not have to perform Salah at times when he is mentally disordered. He does not even have to make up for it.

Fourth question of Fatwa no. 18252

Q 4: My mother in-law lives with me. She is an old woman who is not in her full mental capacity. Sometimes she behaves normally but at other times she does not. For example, she goes to the bathroom to make Wudu' (ablution) but she does not clean herself well. She performs Salah (Prayer) only when we ask her to do so but she performs incomplete Wudu'. She prays from Fajr (Dawn) Prayer to Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer by making Wudu' for only one time. Moreover, she moves and speaks during the Salah (Prayer).

Is such an old woman accountable for her Salah? Besides, are we considered sinful though we guide her and inform her of her mistakes but she does not respond?

A: If the reality of the concerned woman is as what is mentioned in the question, and she has become mentally disordered, then she is no longer obligated to perform Salah. Accordingly, you do not have to ask her to pray.

Q: My father has been suffering from memory loss since two years, and he is now seventy five years old; and is unable to offer Salah (Prayer) the right way or to remember the number of Rak'ahs (units of prayer) he offers unless someone reminds him. As for myself, I offer Salah in the Masjid (Mosque) and leave him to pray at home. Furthermore, he did not fast any of the days of last Ramadan, and as a consequence I fed a needy person for each day he missed. My question is:

Is feeding a poor person for every missed day valid or not?

Is it possible for me to stay at home to perform Salah with my father in congregation?

When he is awakened to perform Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, he says that he already offered Salah although we know that he did not. Kindly advise me in this regard. May Allah save you!

(Part No. 5; Page No. 16)

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned, your father will be absolved from the obligations of Salah and Sawm because he has lost his mind. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «There are three \(persons\) whose actions are not recorded: a sleeper until he awakes, a boy until he reaches puberty, and an insane person until he recovers his mind.» Your father comes under this Hadith as one who has lost his mind.

Fatwa no. 19757

Q: There is a sixty-year-old woman who suffers from a disease that has caused her mental disorders for six years now. Her doctor says that she will not recover from this state, in addition to her losing consciousness often. For example, when someone enters upon her, she may know his name and then forget it. Again, she says that she has not seen someone for weeks while they are sitting in front of her. She claims that she can see Jinn (creatures created from fire) and that they go to the sea. Moreover, she cannot control her urine or bowels, cannot feed herself or walk unassisted.

The question is: Is it obligatory for her to perform the Salah (prayer), observe the Sawm (fast) and do all other acts of worship?

May Allah reward you!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, and the woman is able to understand what is said to her, she must be ordered to offer Salah at the prescribed times and offer it in the way that suits her. She can perform Tayammum (dry ablution), if she is unable to use water. She should be ordered to observe Sawm in Ramadan according to her condition. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allāh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾

Otherwise, she does not have to offer salah or observe sawm if she does not understand what is said to her.

Q: I have a sixteen-year-old daughter who suffers many diseases including moderate mental retardation as well as kidney failure that requires her undergoing kidney dialysis three times a week. In the light of the facts mentioned above, and as she does not understand anything or even talk and as her body stature looks like that of a seven-year-old girl, not sixteen.

My question is: what is the ruling concerning her performing Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (Fast), given that she does not perceive anything around her or even talk despite that she is sixteen?

A: If the said girl can not perceive anything around her, she will not be bound by any religious duties, because she is not Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions).

Q: My father was stricken with age and suffered from lunacy before his death. This caused him to become bedridden for more than three years. This also led him to have a mental disorder and he became unable to speak. As a result, he abandoned performing Salah (Prayer) and observing Sawm (Fast). He continued in this condition until he died.

Are we, his children, obliged to make up for the missing days of Sawm, as he did not observe many months of Ramadan? We hope Your Eminence will give us the answer. May Allah safeguard you!

A: If your father he would not be held accountable for not performing Salah or observing Sawm in this state. That is because Taklif (meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for actions) is connected to reason, so nothing is due on you in this regard.

Fatwa no. 16065

Q: My brother got sick and was taken to hospital. The medical examinations showed that he was suffering from a brain tumor. At the beginning of Ramadan, he had surgery. During this period he did not offer Salah (Prayer), because he was mentally incompetent. Sometimes, he did not recognize the time of Salah and when he recognized its times, he could not perform Wudu' (ablution), for he was tube-fed and could not move. He did not offer Salah during his stay at the hospital that lasted for two and half months. After recovering his memory, he resumed his Salah. However, the surgery caused him some loss of memory.

Should my brother make up for the Salah that he missed during these two months? Taking into consideration that he made up for Ramadan but he did not make up for the missed Salahs.

Your Eminence: My wife was possessed by Jinn (creatures created from fire) - may Allah protect us. During two months of her suffering, she did not offer Salah. She used to forget the time of Salah and offer them beyond their due time when she remembers. She sometimes offered Salah with or without Wudu' (ablution). She sometimes offered them completely and sometimes did not.

She used to forget to recite Surah Al-Fatihah. She has, Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah], recovered and she offers Salah in its due times and recites Qur'an.

Should my wife make up for the Salah that she did not offer during her illness? Please, advise! May Allah reward you!

A: a person is not obliged to make up for Salah that he did not offer due to his mental illness for in this case he is exempted from religious duties. however, he should make up for the Salah that he missed when he was tube-fed after regaining consciousness. He should offer Salah when Allah cures him, as by then he is religiously committed. As for your wife, she should not make up for the Salah she missed during her mental disorder, for she is exempted from religious duties in this case. However, she should offer what she missed after recovery.

Q: My father has a psychological disorder, which affects him once every year or every two years and during which he remains mentally retarded for a period between three and six months. When he comes to his senses and becomes totally cured, I ask him why he does not perform Salah (Prayer), and he replies that he cannot concentrate while praying and that he does not know what Salah he offers and even forgets what the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recites. He says that he prays only with his body while his mind is absent. This has led him to stop performing Salah. Please bear in mind that this condition of absent-mindedness not only pertains to Salah, but also strikes him in all his affairs. He has been suffering from this disease for sixteen years.

Kindly tell us what we should do. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned that your father loses his mind, salah is waived for him during the period of his absent-mindedness. If he comes back to his senses, he should offer Salah during that period as much as he is able to, for Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) As for the period during which he loses his mind, there is nothing due on him, because he is not held accountable.

Q 3: A twenty-nine-year-old girl has been physically handicapped since she was two years old, as her left hand has stopped growing and is smaller than the other hand. she also suffers from sporadic hysteric fits. Her mental ability is limited, which means that she thinks and acts like a child. She is uneducated and has never offered Salah (Prayer) all her life although she observes Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan. Is her father sinful because he does not order her to offer Salah? Is she obliged to offer Salah? If the answer is in the affirmative, how then could she perform Wudu' (ablution) and offer Salah? Is there any advice you would like to give as far as this girl and her Muslim parents are concerned?

A: If this girl comes back to her senses at certain times, she should perform the legal duties pertaining to Salah, Sawm, and other obligatory acts of worship. However, when she loses her mind, she is not obliged to observe the obligatory acts of worship. This is according to the Hadith: \(There are three \(persons\) whose actions are not recorded...\) Among the three persons mentioned in the Hadith is the insane person until they recover their mind. Furthermore, it is incumbent upon her parents to be lenient and kind to her and to give her the necessary education to benefit her in her worldly and religious affairs. The most important thing is to teach her how to offer Salah and its related rulings, including Taharah (ritual purification) from major and minor ritual impurity. The parents will definitely be rewarded for that.

What can we do for this person? We love him and want to make up for what he missed after his death. What is the ruling on this?

A: You should not make up for the Salah (Prayer) he was unable to perform during his final illness. If you love this person, you can give in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on his behalf, ask Allah to forgive him, and supplicate to Allah for him. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When a person dies, their deeds come to an end but three: Sadaqah Jariyah \(ongoing charity\), knowledge \(by which people\) benefit, or a pious son who prays for them \(for the deceased\).﴾ (Related by Muslim)

Q 2: A week after my father's death, my mother passed away. She was old and ill. Her death shocked me as the two misfortunes followed each other. I wept a lot as I could not stand this shock. According to doctors my mother suffered from brain hemorrhage. She missed some Prayers as she was unconscious. When she felt that she was close to death, she willed a charity to be given to the poor on her behalf as a way of making up for the missed Prayers. It should be noted that she used to observe Prayer, fast during Ramadan even though she was weak and old. She even used to offer supererogatory Sawm.

The problem here is that we do not know how much we should give in charity for missed Prayers or what the Kaffarah (expiation) for missing some prayers should be.

A: You have to show patience and submit to Allah's Will and Decree, seek Allah's reward through patience for the loss of your mother, and do not bewail or lament her. It is reported that bewailing, lamenting or crying out for the dead is prohibited. There is no blame on your mother in what you have mentioned of her missing some Prayers while she was unconscious, as she was not legally competent to pray when she was unconscious. She also does not have to make Kaffarah (expiation) or give to charity to make up for the missed days; because she was unconscious when she stopped praying.

If you give to charity on her behalf, that would be good. May Allah (Exalted be He) reward you munificently for this. Your duty towards her is to invoke Allah for her, ask Allah to pardon her and be merciful to her, maintain her blood ties, friendship ties, do good to her friends. All this is considered doing good deeds for your mother after her death.

Q: My mother-in-law is very old and incapacitated. she suffers from diabetes and urinary incontinence. Her clothes and the place where she performs salah (prayer) are always soiled by urine. Note that her Muslim maidservant always looks after her and cleans her clothes and room. She always complains that we leave her alone. We cannot sit with her to eat or drink in her room due to the unpleasant odor of urine, so we have the maidservant eat with her. Her daughter-in-law dislikes sitting with her in this room. The children are very young and do not like to be left with her, as they prefer to go out to play. In addition, she has an impaired memory and I usually inform her when Salah is due. However, she performs it when she likes. Sometimes, she does not perform Salah unless we remind her. At other times, we remind her but she claims that she has already performed it. Again, we may tell her that the proper time of Salah is not due yet, but she pays no attention to us! Although we constantly remind her of the times of prayer, she sometimes claims we do not. She then becomes angry and invokes Allah against us. She may also perform prayers together. For example, she may join two Prayers such as Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers together. Furthermore, she wants us to stay with her all the time and neglect our work; otherwise she gets upset and invokes Allah against us. She fasts in Ramadan, but by the end of the day before the time of Maghrib, she asks for food to break her fast. She gets upset if we do not respond. Due to her old age, she suffers from hearing impairment that makes it difficult to persuade and teach her these things.

Although her son is very busy, he visits her every morning and evening. What is the ruling on the Salah and fasting she observes? Are we sinful for not staying with her? What about her invoking Allah against us? Please, advise. May Allah reward you!

A: If the reality is as mentioned, this woman is exempted from Salah and Sawm, due to her impaired memory. As for the problem of urinary incontinence, she should be examined by a specialist who may help her recover from this disease. She is also recommended to wear an adult diaper to contain urinary emission which can be changed every so often.

Q 3: What should I do about the Salah (Prayer) which I did not offer for four years in the past?

A: If you stopped performing Salah because of forgetfulness, sleep, or something that you thought was an excuse for you, you have to make up for these Prayers even if this happened in the distant past. You will not be free from responsibility unless you make up for these prayers according to the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(He who misses a prayer because he sleeps or forgets it, should offer it when he remembers it, there is no expiation for it, except this.\) But if you stopped Salah intentionally or out of negligence, you have to repent to Allah of this sin and you do not have to make up for the missed prayers; because according to the soundest view of religious scholars, abandoning Salah is Kufr (disbelief) even if you do not deny that it is obligatory. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning prayers.\) Related by Muslim in (his Sahih book). He, peace be upon him, also said: \(That which differentiates us from the disbelievers and hypocrites is our performance of Salat. He who abandons it, becomes a disbeliever.\) Related by Imam Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan (authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) with an authentic chain or narrators.

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, [\("Anyone who misses a prayer due to sleep or forgetfulness should offer it when they remember it. Q 2: what is the ruling on my children who disobey me when I order them to offer Salah (Prayer)? Should I disown them? also, when I order my daughter to wear Hijab (veil), she and her father refuse. What is the ruling on them?

A: You should persist in your efforts to order your children to offer Salah; in fact, you must obligate them to offer Salah if they are already ten years old or more. If they are less than ten years old, you should order them to offer Salah but without obligation, even if their father is not helping you in this. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Command your children to offer Salah when they become seven years old, and beat them for \(neglecting\) it when they become ten years old; and arrange their beds \(to sleep\) separately.» Salah is an obligation that should be carried out by all Muslims. Moreover, you must order your daughter to wear Hijab and force her to do this even if her father is not encouraging you. You should persist in your attempts to order, advise, and guide them to what is good and wait for your great reward. We ask Allah to guide you, your children and husband, and all of us!

Returning after Salah, he awakens his sons for prayer. Is this act permissible for him? Is the mother responsible for awakening her sons?

A: It is not permissible for the father to go out to the Masjid for Salah leaving his two sons at home without praying in congregation. Rather, he should awaken and order them to pray. He may also order their mother or anyone else to awaken them if he goes out early. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"Command your children to pray when they are seven years old and beat them for \(neglecting\) it when they are ten years old, and do not let \(boys and girls\) sleep together."﴾ He (peace be upon him) also said, [﴿"All of you are guardians and are responsible for your subjects. Fatwa no. 20637

Q: My son is 35 years old. He has four sons and a wife. He used to have a job but he quit. Now he and his family live with me in my house. He does not offer Salah (Prayer) at all. It should be noted that I beat and insult him to force him to offer Salah but in vain. The Masjid (mosque) is in front of the house, but he does not go to it unless I drag him by force to catch up with congregational Salah. He does not even complete Salah. He has a good wife and his children offer Salah in congregation. I fear for the children if I tell them and their mother about their father's negligence of Salah. It should be noted that I expressed my disapproval of him so many times and even beat him but he does not respond to me. I hope your Eminence will tell me what to do with this son. He is mentally well and usually replies to me saying "I pray!" then when I ask him where he prays, he says "Allah can be worshipped anywhere!"

I hope your Eminence will tell me what to do with this matter; may Allah reward you with the best, and protect you for the people of this Peninsula. May Allah protect you and guide your steps!

After examining the request for Fatwa, the Committee answer was: You have to force your son to offer Salah. If he refuses, and he is able to sustain himself, you should force him out of your house. If he is unable to live by himself, you have to keep advising him and forcing him to offer Salah. You should also report him to the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV) so they may help you with him, and you have to be patient and expect reward from Allah for doing so. May Allah help you! We pray to Allah to grant us all guidance!

Q: i have a sixteen-year-old brother but he does not offer Salah (Prayer). I cannot strongly reprimand or beat him because I am only two years older than him. My father blames me when I try to reproach my younger brother while eating because he does not offer Salah. My father is not convinced that this is the right approach. I hope you will give me the relevant answer, so as to convince my father that my brother should offer Salah. What should I do if my brother insists on neglecting Salah? What could we do in this regard? Please advise. May Allah benefit us and you!

A: First, you have to continue urging your brother to offer Salah with what is best and lenient, explaining the merits and virtues of Salah and its obligation.

You should also explain to him that anyone who neglects Salah and denies its obligation is a Kafir (disbeliever) according to Ijma' (consensus of scholars) and anyone who neglects it out of laziness is also a Kafir according to the most correct opinion of the scholars.

Second, a Muslim should enjoin his family to offer Salah in obedience to Allah's Sayings: [﴿And enjoin As-Salât \(the prayer\) on your family, and be patient in offering them \[i.e. the Salât \(prayers\)\]. We ask not of you a provision \(i.e. to give Us something: money\): We provide for you. And the good end \(i.e. Paradise\) is for the Muttaqûn \(the pious - See V.2:2\).﴾](#) and: ﴿O you who believe! Ward off yourselves and your families against a Fire \(Hell\) whose fuel is men and stones﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Command your children to perform Salah when they are seven years old, and beat them for \(not offering\) it when they are ten, and do not let \(boys and girls\) sleep together.﴾

Accordingly, your father is obliged to teach your brother the obligation of Salah and even beat him if he does not offer it. You should cooperate with your father in that matter.

The third question of Fatwa no. 15398

Q 3: what should I do with a close friend who does not accept my advice and refuses to offer Salah (Prayer) saying, ﴿Verily you (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) guide not whom you like, but Allâh guides whom He wills.﴾ ?

A: You should keep advising your friend who does not offer Salah. If he does not accept your advice, you should abandon him, because abandoning Salah is Kufr (disbelief). Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿You (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) will not find any people who believe in Allâh and the Last Day, making friendship with those who oppose Allâh and His Messenger (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم)﴾ and ﴿O you who believe! Take not My enemies and your enemies (i.e. disbelievers and polytheists) as friends﴾ It is untrue to use the Ayah ﴿Verily you (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) guide not whom you like﴾ as evidence to support his claim. Guiding to the straight path is required and possible for man. Allah (Exalted be He) addressed Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) saying, ﴿And verily, you (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) are indeed guiding (mankind) to the Straight Path (i.e. Allâh's Religion of Islâmic Monotheism).﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"If Allah guides one person through you, it will be better for you than red (expensive) camels."﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). However, the previous Ayah rules out man's ability to guide to the acceptance of Truth, for this is confined to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) alone. Allah says,

Q 2: my eldest brother does not offer Salah (Prayer); what should I do with him? I hope that you will give him advice so that Allah (may He be Praised and Exalted) may guide him to the right way and to perform the obligations of Allah.

A: You should advise your brother and prompt him to obey Allah through doing what Allah orders him, and avoid what Allah forbids him to do using wisdom, good instruction and a nice way. In addition, you should offer him some Islamic books and tapes that will be useful for him.

We recommend your brother to repent to Allah from what he did and to keep himself away from evil friends and get close to the righteous people. We advise him also to attend Islamic lectures and forums and to listen to the Qur'an station on the Saudi Radio from which he will gain great benefit. Moreover, we remind him to recite Qur'an often along with contemplation and reflection on its verses, performing the supererogatory Salah (Prayer) and observing the prescribed daily Salah in their due times, as Salah prevents one from committing immoral and evil acts. We hope that Allah may accept his repentance and replace his evil deeds with good ones.

The second question of Fatwa no. 15392

Q 2: We as teachers and students offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in the Musalla (a place for Prayer) of `Eid. However, not many people other than us attend the Salah (Prayer), only one or two persons, because they live far away from the Musalla or are engaged in jobs in distant places. We watch the students closely while they perform Wudu' (ablution) and Salah, but we do not guarantee that every student perfects his Wudu' or that his clothes are Tahir (ritually pure) as they should be for Salah. While offering Salah, students may move, look right and left, or laugh with one another; especially those in the early primary grades. We always guide and direct their behavior, whether in the Masjid (mosque) or in school. We prefer not to use the corporal punishment, such as beating, except when necessary until we make them love the Masjid. However, others consider corporal punishment necessary for each wrong action they may do to teach them to respect the Masjid for fear of being punished. Could you kindly advise us in this regard? May Allah benefit us and you!

(Part No. 5; Page No. 40)

A: You are required to teach the students Salah and exhort them to observe it properly and you shall be rewarded for doing so. We ask Allah (Exalted be He) to grant you reward for what you are doing and to tolerate the small faults of our young children, because they cannot be controlled like adults. They should be accustomed to respect Salah and behave well while offering it by means of soft words and leniency.

Q 1: I would like to inform Your Eminence that i have not offered Salah (Prayer) since i reached the age of puberty, i.e. for one year. Allah guided me and i started to offer Salah regularly. What is the ruling on the Salah that i did not offer in the past? Do I still have to offer it? Don't supererogatory Salals I offer compensate it? If I have to make up for it, how do I do so?

A: Whoever intentionally abandons Salah is judged to be a disbeliever. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning Salah.\) (Related by Muslim). Accordingly, if such a person repents to Allah (Exalted be He), he may not make up for the Salah he missed. Rather, he will have to be punctual in performing future Salah. Moreover, it is recommended for him to offer a lot of supererogatory Salah so that Allah might accept his repentance.

Q: What is the ruling on a person who does not offer one of the Daily Obligatory Five Salahs (Prayers), such as Fajr (Dawn), out of laziness and negligence while believing it to be obligatory?

Is such a person rewarded for the four Salahs he offers and will he be punished for only the one Salah he abandons? Is he rewarded for other good deeds he does, such as dutifulness to parents, maintaining kinship ties, and the like?

A: It is obligatory to be punctual in performing all the Five Obligatory Daily Salahs. Allah (Exalted be He) said: «Guard strictly \(five obligatory\) As-Salawât \(the prayers\) especially the middle Salât \(i.e. the best prayer – 'Asr\).» Allah (Exalted be He) also said: «And those who strictly guard their \(five compulsory congregational\) Salawât \(prayers\) \(at their fixed stated hours\).» Actually, abandoning one Salah is equal to abandoning all Salahs and thus all the other Salahs will not be accepted. Likewise, no other good deed will be accepted from him unless he becomes punctual in performing all Salahs even if he believes Salah to be obligatory. In fact, believing Salah to be obligatory alone may not replace performing it. Moreover, by intentionally abandoning Salah one is judged to have committed major Kufr (disbelief) even if one admits it being obligatory, according to the sound of two opinions of scholars. In this regard, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning Salah.» (Related by Muslim in his Sahih). The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: «That which differentiates us from the disbelievers and hypocrites is our performance of Salat. He who abandons it, becomes a disbeliever.» (Related by Imam Ahmad and the compilers of the four Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) books through a trustworthy Isnad (chain of narrators)).

Q 2: It is well-known that a person who abandons Salah (Prayer) is judged to be a Kafir (disbeliever) and out of the scope of Islam. What is the criterion to judge a person as abandoning Salah? Is a person judged to be a disbeliever if they abandon all the Daily Obligatory Five Salahs? Or, are they judged as such for abandoning even only one Salah?

A: There are many Hadiths indicating that a person who abandons Salah is judged to be a disbeliever. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Whoever abandons Salah will be a disbeliever.\) He (peace be upon him) also said: \(What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning Salah.\) Such Hadiths and similar ones indicate that abandoning one Salah has the same ruling as abandoning all Salahs, although abandoning all the Salahs is more sinful.

Q 1: I read in a book about the ruling on the person who does not offer Salah (Prayer) that they are considered Kafirs (disbelievers) and are neither allowed to marry a Muslim, be buried in the Muslim graves, nor even be offered Funeral Prayer when they die. If a person is heedless of Salah and some religious rulings during a certain time in their life, will they be considered like any other sinner or they are regarded as Kafirs?

A: The person who deliberately abandons Salah is a Kafir according to the most correct opinion of the scholars regardless of whether they deny its obligation or not. However, if they really deny the obligation of offering Salah, they are Kafirs according to Ijma` (consensus of scholars), for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"What makes one a Kafir or a Mushrik \(one who associates others with Allah in His Divinity or worship\) is abandoning Salah."﴾ (Related by Muslim) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: [﴿"That which differentiates us from them \(i.e. hypocrites\) is \(our performance of\) Salah. Q 5: A person used to offer Salah (Prayer) then abandoned it for one or two months or even more. Allah (Exalted be He) then guided him to Al-Haqq (the Truth). Should he make up for the Salahs he abandoned or not?

A: Whoever abandons Salah for one or two months, or for a lesser or greater period, must renew their Islam, make sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah), and regret the Salah they abandoned because totally abandoning Salah is major Kufr (disbelief). It is, thus, prescribed for this person to increase his offering of supererogatory acts of worship and implore earnestly to Allah (Glorified be He) so that He may pardon him, forgive what he did, and accept his Tawbah. Verily, Tawbah cancels all the sins preceding it. He is not obligated to make up for the Salah he abandoned.

Q 4: many a time, I have missed Salah (Prayer) and have not made up for them. Sometimes, I offered Salah without being in a state of Taharah (ritual purification). In fact, I do not remember the number of the prayers I missed. Should I make up for them, and how?

A: You should repent to Allah sincerely and perform as many of the supererogatory prayers and other acts of worship as you can. You should also supplicate to Allah (Glorified be He) hoping that He will forgive you. You should seriously resolve to maintain performance of Salah at its due time, may Allah forgive you and accept your repentance. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(Verily, the good deeds remove the evil deeds \(i.e. small sins\).\) He (Glorified be He) also says: \(And all of you beg Allāh to forgive you all, O believers, that you may be successful\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("Tawbah \(repentance to Allah\) wipes out all the previous misdeeds."\) It is enough to repent and then you are not obliged to make up for the Salah you neglected intentionally. Indeed, neglecting Salah is an act of major Kufr (disbelief); therefore, its Kaffarah (expiation) is to turn in repentance to Allah.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 45)

Q: My son who was seventeen years old died two months ago in a car accident without any responsibility on his part. He used to not offer Salah (Prayer) or observe Sawm (Fasting) of the month of Ramadan. Is it permissible for his mother, his brothers, and me to make up for the month of Ramadan on his behalf? Likewise, if I fast the Day of 'Ashura', the Day of

'Arafah or Mondays and Thursdays on his behalf, will my son receive the reward of fasting these days? Moreover, I offer four Rak`ahs before Zuhr (Noon) Prayer and two Rak`ahs after it and after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, `Isha' (Night) Prayer and Fajr (Dawn) Prayer on his behalf.

A: If a person died while he used to not offer Salah or observe Sawm, he is not regarded a Muslim. Whoever abandons Salah intentionally is a disbeliever as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning prayers﴾ Thus, if your son died like this and did not offer repentance to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He), it is not permissible to seek forgiveness for him or supplicate to Allah for him. As for what you offer of Salah and Sawm, they do not benefit him even if he is Muslim, for Salah does not have a proxy. It is worth mentioning that it is not permissible to offer supererogatory Salah after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer except for a reason.

Q 1: A husband offers all the obligatory Prayers except for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, which he offers after sunrise, and persists in doing so for many months, even though his wife offers him advice and wakes him for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. He refuses to wake up because of sleep.

The question is about the wife of this man, does she commit a sin by living with him or does she have to ask for divorce?

A: It is not permissible for the person to delay obligatory Salah (Prayer) after its time is due unless there is a legal excuse such as sleep or forgetfulness. If the husband delays Salah deliberately, as mentioned in the question, the wife has to abandon him and go live with her family; because intentional delay of offering Salah after its time is due, is Kufr (disbelief) according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(That which differentiates us from the disbelievers and hypocrites is our performance of Salat. He who abandons it, becomes a disbeliever.\) and his saying: \(What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning prayers.\) .

Adhan and Iqamah

Q: What are the rulings related to the Adhan (call to Prayer)? Is it permissible for any person to pronounce the Adhan?

A: The Adhan is a form of `Ibadah (worship) and a means to draw closer to Allah (Exalted be He). It is one of the best acts of `Ibadah because of its great reward. It was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: ﴿"If the people know \(the reward\) for \(pronouncing\) the Adhan and for \(standing in\) the first row \(in congregational Salah\) and find no other way to get that \(reward\) except by drawing lots, they would draw lots."﴾ It is permissible for any person to pronounce the Adhan as long as he is Muslim, sane, trustworthy, and honest. Q: A person says that a new Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) has been appointed in a small Masjid (mosque) in his village, and this Imam has a twelve-year-old son, in addition to neighboring children whose ages range from six to twelve. These children respectively pronounce the Adhan (call to Prayer) in that Masjid in due time. Is it permissible for them to pronounce the Adhan despite their age? Please note that this Masjid has no official appointed Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer).

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) that the Mu'adhin be an adult person, because he is responsible for informing people of the due time of Salah (Prayer) as well as the time of the break of dawn and sunset in the days of Sawm (Fast).

As for the Adhan pronounced by a young boy, if he is discerning, depends on an adult on how to pronounce it in the right manner, or pronounces the Adhan in Masjids of his town where others do the same, it is permissible for a young boy to pronounce the Adhan.

Q 3: My teacher says that adhan (call to Prayer) was ordained along with Salah (Prayer) on the occasion of Isra' (Night Journey) and Mi`raj (ascension to Heaven). Is this correct?

A: Adhan was ordained in Madinah after Hijrah (Prophet's migration). The foregoing is authentically reported in the Hadith of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab and `Abdullah ibn Zayd ibn `Abdu-Rabbihi Al-Ansary (may Allah be pleased with them both). The first question of Fatwa no. 18440

Q 1: Is it not recommended to not use loudspeakers for Adhan (call to Prayer) so as not to be heard by those who are not Tahir (ritually pure)?

A: It is a Sunnah to raise the voice with Adhan even if it is done by loudspeakers or heard by not Tahir people.

It is a Sunnah for a person who hears Adhan to respond to it and repeat after the Mu'adhin (a caller for prayer) except in Al-Hay `alah (Saying Hay `Ala Al-Salah, Hay `Ala Al-Falah (come to prayer, come to success)), he should say: "La Hawla Wala Quwwata Illa Billah" (There is neither might nor power except with Allah) even if he is not Tahir. This is a kind of general Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), which does not require purification because purification is meant for Salah, circumambulation and reciting the Qur'an from the Mus-haf (Arabic copy of the Qur'an).

Q 2: Is it permissible to pronounce the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) with the same number of phrases as the Adhan (call to prayer), that is, by saying each phrase twice or is it better to say it once?

A: The formula of the Iqamah consists of eleven phrases, each is said once without repetition except for the phrase of Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and "The time of Salah has come," because the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered Bilal to say each phrase of the Adhan twice and that of the Iqamah only once except for the phrase "The time of Salah has come" and Takbir. It was authentically reported in the Hadith of `Abdullah ibn Zayd ibn `Abd-Rabbihi, who received the phrases of the Adhan and the Iqamah in a dream, that he repeated Takbir twice at the beginning and end of the Iqamah. Furthermore, it is permissible to pronounce the Iqamah in a faster way unlike the Adhan which should be uttered slowly.

Q 1: during Ramadan, some Mu'adhins (callers to Prayer) do not pronounce the Adhan (call to Prayer) for the Fajr (dawn) Prayer but use bells instead and some other Mu'adhins do not do anything. Also, they pronounce no Adhan during the period of Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast); they only say Tahlil (saying: "La ilaha illa Allah [There is no god except Allah]"), or recite the Qur'an, or play a cassette tape of recitation of the Qur'an. What did the Salaf (righteous predecessors) use to do?

A: The Adhan is pronounced to inform the people of the time of Salah (Prayer) or the approach of its time, such as the first Adhan for the Fajr Prayer. Nothing can replace it; because it is one of the Tawqifiy (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion) matters. It is not permissible to add or delete from its wording or to replace it (the Adhan) with another means. Anyone who replaces the Adhan with a bell is imitating the Christians and acting unlike Muslims; and this is an abominable act. Thus, it is Haram (prohibited) to use a bell instead of the Adhan to announce the time of Salah nor to neglect it entirely; because pronouncing it is a collective obligation and the people will be committing a sin if none of them pronounces it. Also, it is not permissible to neglect pronouncing the Adhan entirely since it is one of the apparent Islamic rituals, and neglecting it is considered disdain of the Islamic religious matters. Similarly, if a person says Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) or Du'a' (supplication) or even recites the Qur'an instead of the Adhan, they will be introducing a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) which displeases Allah (Exalted be He) and their deeds will be rejected according to the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("Anyone who innovates things in our affairs for which there is no valid \(reason\) \(commits sin\) and these are to be rejected."\) The basic rule is that reciting the Qur'an, seeking Allah's Forgiveness, and saying Dhikr are done after the Adhan and after offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque). Each person should do this alone and in a low voice so as not to distract other people offering Salah. This was the practice of the Salaf.

Fatwa no. 20519

Q: We are a group of employees in a governmental department. We offer congregational Salah (prayer) at a specific place but we do not call the Adhan (call to Prayer) for congregational Salah because we do not hear the Adhan of the Masjid (mosque). We just make the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) before we pray. I hope your Eminence will explain the following points:

First: Is it permissible to make the Iqamah only and overlook the Adhan?

Second: What if the microphone in our Masjid (mosque) does not work or there is a power cut because we, or some of us, depend on hearing the Adhan from the Masjid? is it permissible for women to make Adhan and iqamah?

Third: A person or a group of people entered the Masjid to offer Salah and found that the Salah was over, do they have to make Adhan and Iqamah or do they have to make Iqamah as most people do today?

Fourth: if a person slept and missed some Prayers, what is permissible for him with regards to the Adhan and iqamah?

Fifth: Is it permissible for a woman to fast and perform Salah after delivery if postpartum blood stopped before forty days?

A: First: You have to offer Salah in the nearest Masjid as long as you are able to do so and as long as you can hear the Adhan; because it is obligatory for men to offer obligatory Salah in the Masjid and it is not permissible to postpone it. As for women, it is not permissible for them at all to make Adhan or Iqamah.

Second: Nowadays, there are accurate tools that tell the time. If you cannot hear the Adhan, you may consult your watch to know the time and go to the Masjid.

Third: Making the Adhan is one of the collective obligations. If the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) made the Adhan in the Masjid and finished Salah and a new group was held to offer the Salah they missed, it is permissible for them to make Iqamah only and they do not have to make the Adhan.

Fourth: If a person lives in the city, it is permissible for them to make Iqamah for every missed Salah. But if a person lives in the desert or a place where no one makes the Adhan, it is permissible for them to make the Adhan and Iqamah for every Salah.

Fifth: If the woman became ritually pure before forty days of her postpartum period, she has to perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), offer Salah and fast, and it is permissible for her husband to have sexual intercourse with her; because she is considered ritually pure after the postpartum blood stops.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family,

The third question of Fatwa no. 17671

Q 3: The Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) in our Masjid (mosque) is old. He is about 75 years old. he smokes and shaves his beard. Is his making the Adhan (call to Prayer) valid and permissible or not? If it is not permissible, we hope your Eminence will inform the Ministry of Hajj, Endowment and Islamic Affairs about this. It should be noted that we advised him and talked to him many times and so did many other people in the same neighborhood, but he says: "Let us live, O people!" He also sells cigarettes in his shop that is adjacent to the Masjid (mosque). May Allah grant us success to do what pleases Him.

A: You have to refer to the people in charge of your Masjid

so that they may replace him; because he commits sins publicly and we fear that other people will follow his example.

Fatwa no. 20579

Q: I like the manner in which the well-known Adhan (call to Prayer) of the Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) is performed. It is recorded at the beginning of the tapes of Qur'an in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. I imitate it well enough that some who hear me in the Masjid (mosque) say that they like it, for it appeals to their longing for Al-Haramayn Al-Sharifayn (the Two Sacred Mosques: the Sacred Mosque in Makkah and the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah). Some people pray for me when hearing it out of admiration. Nevertheless, other people told me that this way includes Lahn (incorrect recitation due to mispronunciation of letters or grammatical mistakes) and excessive prolongation compared to the known rules of Tajwid (art of Qur'anic recitation). Hence, I feel uneasy when imitating the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) of Haram. Is this way of Adhan permissible or am I to blame for this?

Please, advise. May Allah reward you!

A: The Adhan is one of the great rites of Muslims. It is an act of devotion on the part of the servant to Allah (Exalted be He). Accordingly, the Mu'adhin should pronounce it in a simple and straightforward manner. He should not sing it or prolong it.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 56)

Rather, he should call it in accordance with its rules and the etiquettes of Shari'ah (Islamic law), indeed, mimicking the sound of another Mu'adhin when calling the Adhan was not the tradition of the early Salaf (righteous predecessors).

Fifth question of Fatwa no. 20977

Q 5: Is the first Adhan (call to Prayer) for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer Wajib (obligatory) or Sunnah (a commendable act)?

A: The first Adhan for Fajr Prayer is Sunnah for it aims at awakening people to get ready for Salah (Prayer).

Q 6: What is the ruling on adding the phrase "Al-Salah Khayrun min-al-Nawm (Salah is better than sleep)" to the Adhan (call to Prayer) pronounced in a Masjid (mosque) where just one Adhan for the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer is pronounced?

A: pronouncing the Adhan twice for the Fajr prayer is an act of the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the prophet). One Adhan should be pronounced before the appearance of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq (true dawn) to alarm the people to the forthcoming due time of Salah (Prayer) and another after the appearance of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 57)

The Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) adds to the second Adhan the phrase "Al-Salah Khayrun min-al-Nawm" twice after the two phrases "Hay `ala Al-Salah (come to Prayer)" and "Hay `ala Al-Falah (come to success)".

A: The authentic Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) and the practices of the Muslims, whether the Salaf (righteous predecessors) or their successors, indicate that saying "salah is better than sleep" should be in the second Fajr Adhan.

is entitled to announce the Adhan (call to Prayer) and Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) and then start to offer Salah.

A: Muslim men are obligated to offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in the Masjid (mosque) in congregation. If they have a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse, it is permissible for them to offer Salah at home. If they offer it alone, they should only announce the Iqamah and not the Adhan.

Second question of Fatwa no. 14096

Q 2: if a Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) commits a mistake while making Adhan (call to Prayer), will he be required to remake Adhan from the very beginning, or does he only have to correct the word that he erred in or forgot then proceed with the Adhan? On the other hand, if a person makes a mistake while saying Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), forgets a sentence, or repeats a sentence that is not to be repeated; what will he be required to do? To give an example, if the Mu'adhin (while making Iqamah) repeats Hay `Ala-s-Salah (come for the prayer) twice or forgets it and realizes his mistake in the middle of saying the same sentence or commits a similar error; how can he correct himself? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: If the Mu'adhin commits a mistake or forgets something while saying Adhan or Iqamah, he has to say the sentence that he forgot or repeat the sentence that he erred in then proceed with Adhan or Iqamah.

The sixth and seventh questions of Fatwa no. 18762

Q 6: An official Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) has assigned a person to call the Adhan (call to Prayer) instead of him when he travels. However, when this assignee pronounces the Adhan and says "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)," he prolongs the "ba" in the word "Akbar". When he is advised not to say it like this, he says that he cannot say it another way. Is this permissible?

A: It is not permissible to prolong the "ba" when saying "Allahu Akbar" in the Adhan or in anything else. This involves distortion of the required meaning as it will bear the meaning of the plural of "Kubr" which means drums in Arabic as stated by scholars. It is, thus, necessary to prevent that man from pronouncing the Adhan and to search for someone else who can do it in the right way.

Q 7: is it permissible for the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque) to say "Come to Salah (success)" instead of "Come to Salah (Prayer)" in the Adhan (Call to Prayer)?

A: If the Mu'adhin says, "Come to success" instead of "Come to Prayer", his Adhan is invalid, as he has replaced a Mashru' (Islamically acceptable) word for another, so the Adhan is incomplete and invalid. Such a Mu'adhin should be prevented from pronouncing the Adhan.

Q 2: In the Masjid (mosque) of the town where I work, the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) is used to add the word "Sayyiduna" (our master) by saying "Ashhadu Anna Sayyiduna Muhammadan Rasulu Allah (I bear witness that our master Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah)". I believe that one should say during the Adhan (call to Prayer) "Ashhadu Anna Muhammadan Rasulu Allah" without the word "Sayyiduna". However, many people object to this, especially that our town has fourteen Masjids and all of them say in their Adhan "Ashhadu Anna Sayyiduna Muhammadan Rasulu Allah". Who is right and which of the two sayings is the soundest and the best?

Please advise me in this regard as I think my view is the one reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). I also believe that since we face the direction of the Ka`bah in Salah (Prayer), we have to follow their way of pronouncing the Adhan.

A: adding the word "Sayyiduna" to the adhan is not permissible; it is rather one of the innovated matters which should be avoided. The words of the Adhan are reported in the books of Sunnah and none of them contains the word "Sayyiduna". Therefore, we should adhere to the reported words and add nothing to them.

Q 3: What is the ruling if the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) forgets to say, "Al-Salah Khayrun mina-al-Nawm (Prayer is better than sleep)" in the Adhan (call to Prayer) of the Fajr Prayer?

A: If the Mu'adhin forgets a word from the Adhan then he remembers it while he is still announcing the Adhan, he should say the missed word and the following words of the Adhan. However, if he does not remember until some time later, he has to repeat the entire Adhan unless there is another Mu'adhin, for the Adhan is a collective obligation which is fulfilled by the Adhan of another Mu'adhin.

Q: I suffer from a disability that makes me unable to offer Salah (Prayer) except while sitting. There is a nearby Masjid (mosque) but when the time of the Adhan (call to Prayer) is due, no one comes to announce it. Consequently, I carry out this duty through the microphone, but while sitting. It is worth mentioning that this Masjid has no regular Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer), that is, there is no person empowered by the authority responsible for Masjids to announce the Adhan. Whoever enters the Masjid at the time of the Adhan should announce it. Is it permissible for me to announce the adhan while sitting down because of the reason already stated? Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: The basic rule regarding the Adhan is that it should be announced by a person who is standing. However, it is permissible for a person - who has a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse to sit - to announce the Adhan as long as the objective of informing the people about the time of Salah is met. Yet it is better for the Adhan to be announced by a standing person whenever this is possible.

Q: I work in a company where the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers is announced using a recorder. What is the ruling on this? Is this Adhan considered Shar`y (Islamically lawful)? Is it sufficient to pronounce the Adhan in the Musalla (a place for Prayer), taking into consideration that only a small number of employees hear it owing to the largeness of the company? What is your opinion with regard to pronouncing the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) using a loudspeaker to draw the attention of those who do not hear the Adhan?

A: Announcing the Adhan using a recorder does not comply with the Shar`y Adhan, which is prescribed to notify the people that the time of Salah (Prayer) has become due. It is not an actual Adhan but only a recorded voice whereas the Adhan is an act of worship that must involve both intention and deed. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("The reward of deeds depends on the intentions and every person will get the reward according to what they have intended."\) Thereupon, the Adhan must be announced when the time of Salah becomes due in the place where Salah is offered. If there is a need for a loudspeaker to inform the people so that they come Q 4: If i miss the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in congregation and i want to offer it at home before its due time is over; should i pronounce the Adhan (call to Prayer)?

A: If you miss an obligatory Salah (Prayer), you could either perform it in the Masjid (mosque) or at home. If it is within your ability to perform it in congregation, you have to. You should pronounce the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) before offering Salah, but you do not need to pronounce the Adhan, because the Adhan already pronounced in the Masjid is enough.

Q 2: In our village during the month of Ramadan, the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) announced the Adhan (call to Prayer) for the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer seven times before the Prayer time. Accordingly, a number of the people at our village broke their fast. It is note worthy that the Mu'adhin did not do that on purpose.

Does he have to make Kaffarah (expiation)? Do the people who broke their fast have to make up for that day?

A: During the month of Ramadan, the Mu'adhin has to make sure that the Prayer time is due, especially at sunset and dawn. This is because at sunset, it is permissible to break the fast and at dawn, it is obligatory to abstain from food and drink. If the Mu'adhin did this out of forgetfulness, we ask Allah to forgive him. However, he must tell the people who broke their fast that they have to make up for that day.

Q 2: We have two Masjids (mosques); one is Jami` (a large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) and the other is a small one. Once I went to offer Salah (Prayer) in the small Masjid; and although the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) was already announced in Al-Majid Al-Jami`, no one had announced the Adhan (call to Prayer) in the small Masjid. In such a case, should we announce the `Iqamah and offer Salah or should we first announce the Adhan and the `Iqamah and then offer Salah? Please advise.

A: If the mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) has not announced the Adhan, it is desirable for those who attend to offer Salah to announce it except if this would cause disruption, like if the time is late. In this case, it is sufficient to announce the `Iqamah only.

Q: The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) of our Masjid (mosque) is the same person. He is doing a great job (although none can verify this but Allah). However, he often hastens the Adhan (call to Prayer), especially in Ramadan. Once he hears the radio announces that the Adhan is about to be aired live from Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah), he immediately pronounces it even before it is pronounced in Al-Haram. When we tell him of that matter, he says that the sun sets five minutes before the time of the Adhan in Al-Haram, claiming that he and others have witnessed that many times at the seashore. He quotes as supporting evidence the Hadith in which the Messenger (peace be upon him) said: \("When night falls from this side and the day vanishes from this side and the sun sets, the fasting person should break their Sawm \(Fast\)."\) He quotes other reported Hadith pertaining to the preference of hastening to break Sawm. Please advise us in this regard. May Allah reward you!

A: It is not permissible for the Mu'adhin to pronounce the Adhan once he hears the radio announcer say that the Adhan will be aired from Al-Masjid Al-Haram, because this does not indicate the beginning of the Adhan but rather the approach of its due time. The Mu'adhin is not permitted to pronounce the Adhan unless he is sure that the prescribed time of the obligatory Salah (Prayer) is due. It is also permissible for him, if he is in Makkah and the Adhan of

Q 2: During the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), do we have to remain seated until the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) says the phrase 'the Salah (Prayer) is due to be established' after which we have to stand up for Salah? Is it permissible to say: "May Salah continue to be established for as long as the heaven and the earth continue to exist"?

A: It is permissible to stand up for Salah at the announcement of Iqamah. There is nothing wrong, however, if one remains seated until the Mu'adhin says: "The Salah is due to be established". This is permissible only if the Imam is present at the moment the Iqamah is announced. If, however, the Imam is not present, then one must remain seated until they see him.

The Prophet is not reported to have said statements such as 'May Salah continue to be established...' upon the announcement of the Iqamah. Therefore, it is preferable not to utter these words. One may, however, repeat the same words uttered by the Mu'adhin.

Q 1: Regarding the Athar (narration from a Companions) which reads: "The Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) is in charge of Adhan (call to Prayer) and the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is in charge of Iqama (call to start the Prayer)"; does this Athar just mean that the Imam is the person to decide the time of Iqamah or does it mean that the Imam is entitled to ask a person other than the Mu'adhin to make Iqamah?

A: The narration quoted in the question means that it is the Imam who decides the time of Iqamah. The concerned narration does not imply that the Imam is to ask a person other than the Mu'adhin to make Iqamah without there being a legal excuse, for doing so contradicts Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). A Hadith that supports the foregoing is what is related by Abu Dawud and Al-Tirmidhy from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: \(Whoever calls the Adhan pronounces the Iqamah.\) Al-Tirmidhy commented: "The fact that most scholars accepted such a Hadith and acted upon it is a sign of its authenticity."

Q: We work in the Salt Water Desalination Public Corporation in Jeddah. The corporation produces water and electricity. Work demands great caution and punctuality. The working hours that have been regulated include half an hour break for Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. The time for the Zhuhr Prayer changes gradually during the four seasons from (12:05 p.m.) to (12:40 p.m.). The time for Salah (Prayer) is fixed at (12:50 p.m.) throughout the year and the Adhan (call to Prayer) is announced in its due time. This is an attempt to regulate the work as the Prayer break begins at (12:30 p.m.) and ends at (1:00 p.m.); and this is fixed throughout the year.

Is there anything wrong with announcing the Adhan in its due time and delaying the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) to (12:50 p.m.)? Please advise; may Allah reward you. Is the employee who does not abide by these regulations to blame? Indeed, some employees may leave their work and go to the Masjid (mosque) directly after hearing the Adhan even if it is announced at (12:10 p.m.). As the issue is urgent, please decide it as soon as possible. May Allah preserve you for Islam and Muslims and guide you to things that please Him. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

(Part No. 5; Page No. 70)

A: It is permissible to delay the Iqamah until the people prepare themselves and come to Salah. Anyone who wants to go to the Masjid immediately after the Adhan may do so, because this is the basic rule.

Q: is it permissible for a person who makes the iqamah for Salah to put his fingers in his ears, or hold his hand on his chest as if he is in Salah, as I saw some people do both things. Because I love the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Sunnah, I would like to know what is right, may Allah reward you for that!

A: The basic ruling in the Shari`ah is that acts of worship should be based on Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion) and not on sayings or acts involving innovation in religion. Therefore it is not permissible for a person who makes the Iqamah to put his fingers in his ears; because this is specific to the Adhan. Also it is not permissible to hold one's hands on the chest as if in Salah because there is no evidence for doing so.

Q: Your Eminence, some female students in classes of illiteracy elimination in our district announce the Adhan (call to Prayer) and the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) loudly. They have been informed by some of their colleagues in the center that this is not permissible. I hope Your Eminence will send us a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard so that we can inform them about it and post it on the bulletin board in the center, if Allah wills. They also offer Salah (Prayer) in congregation being led by one of them.

A: The Adhan and Iqamah have to be announced by men. Women are not required to announce either the Adhan or Iqamah lest their voice is attractive and attracts men. Only the men among the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) announced the Adhan whereas women did not.

Q 2: is it permissible for a woman to pronounce the Adhan (call to Prayer) at her home to offer Salah (Prayer)?

Q: It is not permissible for a woman to pronounce the Adhan whether at home or elsewhere, because the pronouncement of the Adhan must only be carried out by men, and to avoid Fitnah (sedition) that may result from hearing her voice.

The first question of Fatwa no. 15410

Q 1: It has become customary for some people awaiting the Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque) to say when the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) is being pronounced and after the Shahadah [(Testimony of Faith, saying "La ilaha illa Allah" (there is no deity but Allah))]: "Verily, La ilaha illa Allah." Some Muslim brothers tell them that this is not permissible, because it is not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Some others say after the Iqamah and before Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer): "O Allah, show mercy on us when we stand for reckoning before You." Similarly, some Muslim brothers object to that as being not permissible on the grounds that this Du`a' (supplication) is not authentically reported in any books.

A: It is prescribed that those who hear the Iqamah are allowed to repeat the same phrases of the Iqamah, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) has ordered us to repeat what the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) says.

This is based on the fact that the Iqamah is the Adhan, and one should say after it: ﴿O Allah! Lord of this most perfect call (to Prayer) and of the Prayer that is to be established, grant our master, Muhammad, Al-Wasilah (the most superior degree in Paradise) and a rank of distinction, and resurrect him to the lauded position that You promised him. Verily, You never break a promise.﴾

However, and as far as we know, there is no specific Du`a' to be said after the Iqamah and before Takbirat-ul-Ihram except the one mentioned.

The third question of Fatwa no. 16802

Q 3: What is the ruling on sending peace and blessings upon His Messenger aloud after the Adhan (call to Prayer) using different wordings?

A: It is recommended to repeat after the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) except when he says, 'Hayy `ala Al-Salah [come to Prayer!], Haya `ala Al-falah [come to success!]' for the listener should then say, 'La hawla wa-la quwwata illa billah (There is neither might nor power except with Allah)'. When the Adhan is pronounced, the Mu'adhin and the listeners should send peace and blessing upon the Prophet (peace be upon him). They should also say individually rather than collectively, ﴿Allahumma rabba hadhihi al-da'wati al-Tammah, wal -Salatil-Qa'imah, 'ati Muhammadan al-Wasilata wal-Fadilah, wab`athhu maqaman mahmudan alladhi wa'atah. [Oh Allah, the Lord of this perfect call and of this prayer, which is going to be established, bestow upon Muhammad Al-Wasilah (the highest position in Paradise) and Al-Fadilah (extra degree of honor) and raise him to Al Maqam Al Mahmud, which You have promised to him].﴾ It is not permissible for the Mu'adhin to say this Du`a' (Supplication) out loud after the Adhan so that it will not be considered part of it.

Q 2: after finishing the adhan (call to Prayer), some Mu'adhins (callers to Prayer) invoke Allah's blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him). Some say: "Peace and blessings be upon you O you bright-faced and peace and blessings be upon you light of Allah's Throne etc..." We told them that their deed is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). They said that we hate the Prophet (peace be upon him), and that this is the norm of Sunnis and Wahhabis i.e. followers of Muhammad ibn `Abdul-Wahhab who all hate Prophet Muhammad and do not like to invoke Allah's blessings upon him!

A: Invoking Allah's Blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) is permissible. It is a great grace of Allah. But it should be done just like the Prophet has done it at the times he used to do it. Invoking Allah's Blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) following the Adhan as mentioned in the question is unlawful and Bid`ah. It involves adding to the wording of the Adhan while the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(He who did any act for which there is no sanction from our behalf, that is to be rejected.\) When the Muslim hears the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) making the Adhan, the Sunnah for him is to repeat what the Mu'adhin says, except when he says: 'Come to Salah (Prayer)! Come to success!' in which case the listener should say: 'La hawla wa-la quwwata illa billah i.e. (There is neither might nor power except with Allah)'. After that both the listener and the Mu'adhin should invoke Allah's Blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the same manner which the Prophet (peace be upon him) mentioned including the following manners: \('O, Allah! Send prayers upon Muhammad and the family of Muhammad,

just like You sent prayers upon Ibrahim and upon the family of Ibrahim. You are indeed the Praiseworthy and the Glorious. O Allah! Bless Muhammad and the family of Muhammad, just like You blessed Ibrahim and the family of Ibrahim. You are indeed the Praiseworthy and the Glorious.\) Also it is sufficient for the person to invoke Allah's blessings upon the Prophet in the shortened form, i.e. "Allahumma Salli Wa Sallim `Ala Rasulallah" (O Allah send your peace and blessings upon Allah's Messenger) instead of the innovated forms mentioned in the question. Then the person should say: \('O Allah! Lord of this perfect call \(of not ascribing partners to You\) and of the regular prayer which is going to be established! Kindly give Muhammad the right of intercession and superiority and send him \(on the Day of Judgement\) to the best and the highest place in Paradise which You promised him.\) As for doing so in the microphone collectively, it is a Bid`ah and impermissible.

Q 3: if a person hears the Adhan (call to Prayer) while they are reciting Qur'an, should they proceed with their recitation or repeat what the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) says?

A: When the Mu'adhin makes Adhan it is Mustahab (desirable) for whoever hears him to repeat what he says. Only when the Mu'adhin says the Hay`alatayn (Statements said while making call to prayer; 'come to Salah' and 'come to success'), a person should say: La Hawla Wa-la Quwwata Illa Billah (There is neither might nor power except with Allah). However, if a person hears Adhan while they are reciting Qur'an; they should stop the recitation, repeat what the Mu'adhin says, then resume their recitation. The foregoing is supported by a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «When you hear the Mu'adhdhin, repeat what he says, then invoke a blessing on me, for whoever invokes a blessing on me will receive ten blessings from Allah; then beg from Allah al-Wasila for me, which is a rank in Jannah \(Paradise\) fitting for only

(Part No. 5; Page No. 76)

one of Allah's servants, and I hope that I may be that one. If anyone who asks that I be given the Wasila, he will be assured of my intercession.» Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Whoever says upon hearing the Adhan ' O Allah, Lord of this perfect Da`wah \(call\) and of the established Salah Prayer, grant Muhammad the Wasilah and superiority, and raise him up to a praiseworthy position which You have promised him', it becomes incumbent upon me to intercede for him on the Day of Resurrection.»

Q 6: When the Mu'dhin (caller to Prayer) finishes the Adhan (call to Prayer) saying, "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)," "Allahu Akbar," "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)," I say, "Abadan La ilaha illa Allah (there will never be another deity but Allah)" twice. Some people have told me that this is not permissible. Is this saying right?

A: It is desirable to follow the Mu'adhin by repeating what he says except when he says, "Hay `ala-al-Salah (come to Prayer)" and "Hay `ala-al-Falah (come to success)," the listener is to say "La Hawla wa-la Quwwata illa billah (There is neither might nor power except with Allah)." After the end of the Adhan, the listener is to ask Allah (Exalted be He) to send peace and blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) and say the following Du`a' (supplication): ﴿O Allah! Lord of this most perfect call \(to Prayer\) and of the Prayer that is to be established, grant our master, Muhammad, Al-Wasilah \(the most superior degree in Paradise\) and a rank of distinction, and resurrect him to the lauded position that You promised him.﴾ Therefore, you are not allowed to say, "Abadan" for this word was not reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him); and saying it is an act of Bid`ah (innovation in religion).

Q 2: is there a specific Du`a' (supplication) to be said after the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) says, "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)" while pronouncing the iqamah (call to start the Prayer)?

A: It is an act of Sunnah (reported from the Prophet) for those who hear the Iqamah to repeat what the Mu'adhin says, except when he says, "Hay `ala-al-Salah, Hay `ala-al-Falah ("come to Salah; come to success"). This is because of the general meaning of the Prophet's saying: \("When you hear the call \(to Prayer\), repeat what the Mu'adhin says."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Al-Hafizh Ibn Hajar said that this is proof of the permissibility of repeating what the Mu'adhin says in the Iqamah, in accordance with the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab (may Allah be pleased with him) from the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(Then when he \(the Mu'adhin\) says, "Hay `ala-al-Salah," he \(one of you\) should say, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah \(There is neither might nor power except with Allah\)." Then when he \(the Mu'adhin\) says, "Hay `ala-al-Falah \(come to success\), he should say, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah."\) (Related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith)

Al-Bukhari related on the authority of Mu`awiyah (may Allah be pleased with him): \(When he \(the Mu'adhin\) says, "Hay `ala-al-Salah," he says, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah."\) On the authority of Abu Umamah who narrated: \(When Bilal started to pronounce the Iqamah and reached the phrase, "Qad Qamat-al-Salah" \(Salah is about to begin\)," the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said, "Aqamaha Allahu wa adamaha \(may Allah keep it established forever\)."\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) repeated the same phrases of the Iqamah as mentioned in the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Umar when pronouncing the Adhan (call to Prayer). Al-Mundhiry commented that there is an unknown narrator in the Sanad (chain of narrators) of this Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Umamah. It also includes a narrator, called Shahr, in its Sanad whose authenticity is questioned.

Al-Nawawy ranked this Hadith as Da`if (weak) and Munqati` (a Hadith with a missing link after the Follower; the generation after the Prophet's Companions), as one of its narrators, Shahr ibn Hawshab, did not hear from Ibn Abu Awfa, another narrator in the same Hadith. Therefore, it is prescribed for the person who hears the Iqamah when the Mu'adhin says, "Qad Qamat-al-Salah" to repeat the same words, because of the general meaning of the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) and other Hadith to the same effect.

Q: Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allâh sends His Salât (Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy) on the Prophet (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم), and also His angels (ask Allâh to bless and forgive him). O you who believe! Send your Salât on (ask Allâh to bless) him (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم), and (you should) greet (salute) him with the Islâmic way of greeting (salutation i.e. As-Salâmu 'Alaikum).﴾ Is it permissible for a Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) to recite this Ayah (Qur'anic verse) after the Adhan (call to Prayer)? Is it a Sunnah (reported from the Prophet), a desirable act, or a Bid`ah (innovation in religion)? Is it permissible for a Mu'adhin to say before the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer): "O Allah! Protect us from the shame of the world and the torment of the Hereafter, O Generous. O Allah, be merciful to me as You were with all the Companions of the Messenger of Allah"?

A: It is prescribed for everyone who hears the Adhan to repeat what the Mu'adhin says, except when reaching the phrases "Hay `ala-al-Salah" and "Hay `ala-al-Falah (come to Prayer, come to success)," they should say "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa Billah (there is neither might nor power except with Allah)." After finishing the Adhan, they should send peace and blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) without pronouncing it loudly. Afterwards, they should say: ﴿O Allah! Anyone who asks Allah to grant me Al-Wasilah, they will be given my intercession."﴾ (Related by Muslim, Abu Dawud, and Al-Tirmidhy) Also, on the authority of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab (may Allah be pleased with him) who narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When the Mu'adhin says, Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest), Allahu Akbar," one should say, "Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar." When he says, "Ashhadu an-la ilaha illa Allah (I testify that there is no deity but Allah)," one should say, "Ashhadu an-la ilaha illa Allah." When he says, "Ashhadu anna Muhammadan Rasul-ul-Allah (I testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah)," one should say, "Ashhadu anna Muhammadan Rasul-ul-Allah." When he says, "Hay `ala-al-Salah," one should say, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah." When he says, "Hay `ala-al-Falah," one should say, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah." When he says, "Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar," one should say, "Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar." When he says, "La ilaha illah Allah," one should say, "La ilaha illah Allah." The one who responds (as such) from the heart shall enter Paradise.﴾ There is no special Du`a' (supplication) to be said before the Iqamah.

Q 4: Is raising the hands upward when supplicating to Allah after the end of Adhan an act of Bid`ah (innovation in religion)?

A: After repeating Adhan and invoking Allah's Peace and Blessings upon Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him), it is recommended to say: ﴿O Allah! Lord of this perfect call and of the regular prayer which is going to be established, bestow upon Muhammad Al-Wasilah \(the highest position in Paradise\) and Al-Fadilah \(extra degree of honor\) and raise him to Al Maqam Al Mahmud \(the best and the highest place in Paradise\), which You have promised him.﴾ This statement is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah Al-Ansary (may Allah be pleased with both of them) in Sahih Al-Bukhari (may Allah be merciful with him). However, raising the hands has no mention in the report, so it is an act of Bid`ah to do it.

Q 2: Is it permissible when one hears the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) saying, "Ashhadu anna Muhammadan Rasul-ul-Allah (I bear witness that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah)" to say, "O Muhammad, you are the joy of my eye"? This saying is widely spread among non-Arabs, especially Indians and Pakistanis.

A: This saying has no basis in Shari'ah (Islamic law). Rather, it is innovated and therefore is not permissible. It is an act of Sunnah (reported from the Prophet) to repeat what the Mu'adhin says without any additions. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("When you hear the Mu'adhin, say as he says."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) However, when the Mu'adhin reaches the phrases: "Hay `ala-al-Salah" (come to Prayer), Hay `ala-al-Falah (come to success)," the listener should say, "La Hawla wala Quwwata illa billah (there is neither might nor power except with Allah)."

Approach of Salah time

Q: On behalf of the residents of Dawmah Al-Jandal governorate located in Al-Jawf region, I ask you whether it is true that a time period of one hour and a half separates the break of the true dawn (the white line which penetrates the darkness of the horizon in the east) and sun rise. Is there any evidence from Shari`ah (Islamic law) to support that? Is it permissible to use a calendar to determine the time of Salah?

Some people found that there is a time period of fifteen minutes. Some people of knowledge paid us a visit and said to us: "The Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) must be delayed by twenty-five minutes from the time of the Adhan (call to Prayer) in the calendar in order that the time of Salah is known to have approached." This means that both the Adhan and voluntary Salah offered before the obligatory Salah and Iqamah are offered before the appointed time. I have read the statement of Muhammad Rashid Rida (may Allah be Merciful with him) in his Tafsir (exegesis of the meanings of the Qur'an) called "Tafsir Al-Manar", (vol. 2, p. 184; Dar Al-Ma`arif edition). Commenting on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) which reads: \(and eat and drink until appears to you distinct\) he said: "It is part of human nature that some individuals are prone to strictness while others are prone to negligence. Most people, however, adopt a moderate course between exaggeration and negligence. One of the things that proves that the ancestors went to extremes in taking care of outward appearance, yet ignoring the reformation of the inner souls is that they would determine the starting time of Fajr by means of hours. As a means of precaution while observing Sawm (Fast), they would announce the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr twenty minutes before its appointed time. As a matter of fact, daylight appears only twenty minutes after the break of Fajr. They delay the Adhan of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer at least five minutes. Some of the Shi`ah (Shi'ites) stipulate the appearance of stars." He kept on stating this issue confirming that this increase should be as a means of drawing people's attention to be ready for the break of the dawn.

We ask Allah that you will guide us so that we will apply the ruling you state. I stated earlier that some people of experience identify the time of Fajr by reference to the time period of one hour and a half before the sun has risen. Is there any proof for this?

A: Determining the appointed times of Salah is based on the Hadiths of the Prophet (peace be upon him). It was authentically reported that the appointed time of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer starts when the sun begins to decline from its zenith and ends when the size of an object's shadow is equal to the size of that object. The appointed time of `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer starts when the shadow of everything becomes equal to itself and ends when it becomes twice its length or when the sun turns yellow. This is the optional time for offering `Asr Prayer. The appointed time of Maghrib Prayer starts from sunset until the twilight disappears.

The appointed time of 'Isha' (Night) Prayer starts from the disappearance of twilight until mid-night. This is the optional time for it. The time when it is necessary to offer 'Isha' Prayer starts from mid-night until the break of dawn. The appointed time of Fajr Prayer starts from the break of the true dawn (i.e. the white line which penetrates the darkness of the horizon in the east) and continues until sunrise.

These are the appointed times of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers. The Muslim is duty bound to offer these Salahs at the times which have been stated by the Sunnah. There is nothing wrong to refer to calendars if they happen to correpond to the appointed times of Salahs.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

A: Each Salah has a certain time at which it begins and ends. It was reported that ﴿Jibril (Gabriel) led the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Salah at the beginning and at the end of the time of each Salah. Then he said: "The time of Salah is in the period between these two times."﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) maintained offering the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers on their due times, and said: ﴿Pray as you have seen me praying.﴾ Accordingly, Muslims are required to observe the due times of Salah

Q 1: we offer Salah (Prayer) at its due time although the Adhan (call to Prayer) is not called on time. Is it valid or should we repeat it?

A: The Five Obligatory Daily Prayers have fixed prescribed times on which they should be offered, according to Allah's saying, \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) which means that it is as proven as the Qur'an and fixed in regular times.

The beginning of the time of Salah is a condition for its validity. If a person offers Salah before the beginning of its time, their Salah is Batil (null and void), as they have offered it in a different time other than that prescribed by Allah (Exalted be He). If anything is done in a way other than that prescribed by Allah, it is Batil.

If you find out that you used to offer Salah before the beginning of its time, you should repeat it. If it is out of your negligence and carelessness, you should also perform Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) for what you did, and insist on not doing it again. If it was out of ignorance of the ruling or the time, there is no harm on you, but you should repeat the Salah. It is not one of the conditions of the validity of Salah to pronounce the Adhan after the beginning of its time; it is valid if it is offered in its prescribed time. However, the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) should repeat the Adhan, unless there is another person who pronounces the Adhan on its time instead of him.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20242

Q 1: There are more than six hundred students in the faculty. We have a fixed daily program that extends from the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer until after the `Isha' (Night) Prayer. We change the time of Salah (Prayer) according to the previously prepared schedule. For instance, we might delay the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer until one o'clock in the afternoon. All the people offer Salah at this time in the same Masjid (mosque). The Adhan (call to Prayer) is said on time, but the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) is delayed. We would like to inquire about the ruling on delaying the Fajr Prayer until the time just before sunrise, and the ruling on staying asleep until the Iqamah before sunrise. Please advise concerning the times of Salah and the ruling on shifting them. In case this is permissible, would it be considered carelessness?

A: It is better to offer the obligatory Salah in the beginning of its time, according to the following Hadith related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim as follows: \(On the authority of `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud \(may Allah be pleased with him\) who said, "I asked the Prophet \(peace be upon him\): What is the deed most liked by Allah?" He said, "Offering Salah in the beginning of its due time."\) If a person delays Salah to the end of its prescribed time, there is no blame on them, according to what was reported in Sahih (authentic) Hadith, such as the following: \(Jibril \(Gabriel\) came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) to inform him about the times of Salah. On the first day, he led him in the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in the beginning of their time. On the second day, he led him in the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in the end of their times and said to him, "The time of Salah is between these two times."\)

However, it is desirable to offer Salah in the beginning of its time according to the previously-mentioned Hadith, except if the weather is too hot. In this case, the Zhuhr Prayer might be delayed until the weather is more bearable, provided that it is offered before the time of the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. The same applies to the `Isha' Prayer, which is desirable to be delayed until the congregation gathers, based on what was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). \(When the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) found the Sahabah \(Companions\) assembled early for the `Isha' Prayer, he would offer Salah early, but when they came late, he used to delay the Salah.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Q 2: what is the time for Zawal? Is it after the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer or `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer?

A: The time for Zawal is when the sun starts to move from the middle of the sky to the western direction. It is the time for the Zhuhr Prayer.

Q: When the Adhan (Call to Prayer) of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer was pronounced, I asked my colleague to go to pray, but he replied that work has the first priority and that the time of Zhuhr Prayer is extended till `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. My colleague asked me why the timing of Prayer is defined? Please, advise! May Allah protect you!

A: A Muslim should hasten to offer Salah when its time is due. It is better to offer Salah at the beginning of its time with the exception of the Zhuhr Prayer when it is very hot.

In this case, it should be delayed until it gets cooler provided that it is offered in congregation. `Isha' (Night) Prayer can also be delayed, till the first third of the night, if it is not difficult for the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer). This is the tradition of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Salaf (righteous predecessors). It is not permissible to say that salah may be delayed to finish work. This is untrue, for Salah is the most important act of worship and this saying indicates that Salah is unimportant. When a person delays Salah, this might lead him to offer it individually when its due time is over. In both cases, this is negligence and a great sin.

Q 3: What is the ruling on delaying the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer until it is less hot? Some countries are hot all year; are they permitted to delay the Zhuhr or should they not delay it except if there is an extraordinary rise in temperature, e.g. from 40 °C. to 50°C.?

A: It is recommended to delay the Zhuhr prayer when it is too hot until it is cooler, even if this is the case year-round. Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(When it is very hot, postpone the Zuhr Prayer until it becomes moderately hot because the severity of heat is of the raging of Hell-fire.\) Reported by the Six Hadith Compilers (Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah).

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) to offer the Maghrib Prayer at the beginning of its due time and it is also permissible to delay it. As for the Hadith that (Jibril led the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Salah...) it is a Hadith Sahih. Al-Bukhari said, "This Hadith is the most authentic narration concerning the times of Salah."

(Related by Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation) and Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith) This is true unless the traveler wants to combine the Maghrib Prayer with the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer; in which case their time limit will extend to midnight.

A: The basic rule states that the maghrib Prayer becomes due when the sun sets. Thus, it is not permissible to offer the Maghrib Prayer until the sun is seen to set or most probably - in case it is cloudy or the like - is thought to have set.

Q 2: We, a group of young men, went on a picnic in a nearby desert. When the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer became due, we got out of our car to offer the Salah (Prayer) in congregation only to be hit by heavy rains. Actually, there were no nearby Masjids (mosques) in the desert; and thus we returned to the car and drove on. The rain stopped only when the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer became due. A controversy then arose; some of us believed that we should offer the 'Isha' Prayer then make up for the Maghrib, while others believed that we should offer the Maghrib Prayer first and then the 'Isha' Prayer. The controversy was so heated that each party offered Salah according to their respective opinion. Please answer us regarding what is proper in such cases so that we might worship Allah (Exalted be He) with deep insight.

A: Observing the order of Salah is obligatory. Thus, anyone who delays the Maghrib Prayer until the time for the 'Isha' becomes due for a valid excuse should offer the two Salahs in order, that is, they should offer the Maghrib Prayer first and then the 'Isha' Prayer.

Q: Praise be to Allah, I offer congregational Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque) of our village, and the people choose me as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). One day, while I was leading the people in the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, and during Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer), I remembered that I had not offered the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer out of forgetfulness. Being ignorant of the ruling on this, I offered the Maghrib Prayer, and then I offered the `Asr Prayer.

First, is this right?

Second, is my Salah Batil (null and void) or not? What about the Salah of the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer), whether they knew this or not?

Third, am I considered sinful? If yes, please tell me what to do.

Fourth, please advise concerning what I should have done.

What should he do? Should he offer the `Isha' Prayer behind the Imam then offer the Maghrib Prayer or is it obligatory to observe the order of Prayers?

A: Anyone who misses the Maghrib Prayer and enters a Masjid (mosque) to find the Imam leading the `Isha Prayer is entitled to join the Imam with the intention of offering the Maghrib Prayer. When the third Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) is over, they should sit and recite the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer). Then, they can either say Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) or wait for the Imam until he finishes the fourth Rak`ah of the `Isha' Prayer to follow him in Taslim. However, it is preferable for the person to offer the Maghrib Prayer alone and then join the Imam in the remaining Rak`ahs of the congregational `Isha' Prayer.

Q: We are a group of national schools for handicapped children. We have a morning and an evening period every day. We have a group of teachers and specialists who work from 5:00 p.m., until 8:00 p.m. We offer the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer congregationally in the school in its prescribed time. However, the time of the `Isha' (Night) Prayer starts during the classes of some children. Out of our keenness on offering the `Isha' Prayer congregationally in the school, we announced that the `Isha' Prayer is going to be fifteen minutes later so that everybody could attend the prayer. We would like to keep up the spirit of the congregation; avoid discrepancy; love and cooperate with each other in righteousness and piety; and prevent those who waste the time of the students, as they are a trust given to us by their parents. However, some teachers want to break the consensus and violate the public interest by offering Salah before the time fixed by the school and urging people to break the consensus and violate the rules of our religion, which causes chaos and breaks the unity.

Please advise and give us a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) Fatwa concerning this issue, so that we are well-informed of the matters of religion and can stick to it. May Allah reward you and protect you.

A: If the situation is as you have mentioned, and you do not have a nearby Masjid where you can offer congregational Salah, there is no harm on you in delaying offering Salah a little out of necessity. Q: I am an employee at the Ministry of Petroleum and Minerals. I would like to inquire about congregational Salah (Prayer). We have a large Musalla (a place for Prayer) on the ground floor of our building, and there are no Masjids (mosques) around the Ministry. The times of Adhan (call to Prayer) differ throughout the days of the year according to the difference in the times of sunrise and sunset. The Adhan in Sha`ban is early, at 11: 37 a.m., and it is delayed gradually until it reaches 12: 07 p.m. in

Dhul-Qi`dah. Accordingly, the times of Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) differ throughout the year. There is no microphone to announce Iqamah among the employees, so we frequently miss the congregational Salah with the first and the second congregation. There might be a third or even a fourth congregation. We heard that some ministries and universities, such as the Islamic University of Imam Muhammad ibn Su`ud and others, fixed the time of Iqamah throughout the year, so that all the employees abide by it. Is there any harm in fixing the time of Iqamah to 12:15 throughout the year, so that all the employees know that it is fixed and there is only one congregation?

Please advise, may Allah support you and guide you to the benefit of Islam and the Muslims.

A: If the situation is as you have mentioned, there is no harm in fixing the time of the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, whether in summer or in winter, to 12: 15 p.m., as long as Salah is offered on time, as this entails ease for the people, helps them offer Salah behind the regular Imam and increases the number of the congregation.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 100)

However, the people responsible for this governmental institution should try to get a microphone for this Musalla, as this entails showing one of the rituals of Islam, reminding the forgetful people, and urging them to offer Salah immediately after the Adhan. Thus, they perform many good deeds, such as the Sunnah Qabliyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed before an obligatory Prayer) performed on a regular basis; repeating after the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer); saying what was reported after the Adhan; offering Salah in the first row; getting closer to Allah through different forms of worship, such as Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), Du`a' (supplication) and reciting the Qur'an; being considered in Salah as long as they are waiting to offer Salah; and the angels ask Allah to forgive them while they are in the Musalla according to what was reported in the Sahih (authentic) Hadiths. This is a great reward not attained by those who come to the Masjid after Iqamah.

Q 2: What is the ruling on a man who, while offering a current obligatory Salah (Prayer), remembers that he has offered a previous one without being in a state of wudu' (ablution)? Is it permissible for him to change his intention or what should he do?

A: If a person remembers, while they are performing a current obligatory Salah, that they offered a previous one while not being in a state of Taharah (ritual purification); they are to stop the current

Salah, pray the previous one, then pray the current Salah. This is because praying Salahs (Prayers) in order is Wajib (obligatory). Besides, it is impermissible for the man mentioned in the question to change his intention from one obligatory Salah to another while he is performing Salah. However, it is permissible for him to proceed with the current prayer intending that it is just a Nafilah (supererogatory) one. He is then to pray the two Salahs in their right order. If he fears the expiry of the time of the current Salah; he is to pray it first.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 18612

Q 9: If a person misses an obligatory Salah (Prayer) due to circumstances beyond their control, is it permissible for them to offer it the following day? if a person does not offer the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and the time for the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer becomes due, should they join the congregational Maghrib Prayer or offer the `Asr Prayer first and then offer the Maghrib Prayer individually?

A: First, it has been authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who misses a Salah because of sleep or forgetfulness should offer it when they remember it; there is no Kaffarah \(expiation\) for it except this.\) The apparent meaning of this Hadith designates the obligation of hastening to make up for the missed Salah. The due time for the Salah, which was not offered because of sleep or forgetfulness, is when it is remembered. Accordingly, it is not permissible to delay it more than that.

Second, making up for the missed Salah should be done respectively, that is, if a person misses the `Asr

Prayer and the time for the Maghrib Prayer becomes due, they should offer the `Asr Prayer first and then the Maghrib Prayer. It is not permissible to offer the latter before the former, and so on.

Third, if a person misses the `Asr Prayer and does not remember that until the prescribed time of the Maghrib Prayer is due, they could offer the `Asr Prayer, then offer the Maghrib Prayer in congregation. If it is not possible to offer the `Asr Prayer before the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) of the Maghrib Prayer is pronounced, they can join the congregational Maghrib Prayer with the intention of offering the `Asr Prayer. In this case, when the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) says Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) for the Maghrib Prayer, they should stand up and offer the remaining fourth Rak`ah of the `Asr Prayer and then offer the Maghrib Prayer individually. It is to be noted that evidence derived from Shari`ah (Islamic law) have indicated that the difference between the intention of the Imam and that of the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) does not affect the validity of Salah.

Q: while leading people in the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, the Imam remembered that he did not offer the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. What should the Imam and the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) do? Please, advise.

A: The Imam should continue the prayer with the Ma'mums and it is considered Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) on his part. The prayer of the Ma'mums is valid, for it is permissible for a person performing a Faridah (obligatory prayer) to be led by a person performing a Nafilah. Besides, is a person excused for not performing Fajr (Dawn) Prayer on time because of being always asleep at that time? Is it permissible for them to make up for Fajr Prayer every day after sunrise? It may be worth mentioning that some people say that Fajr Prayer is not to be made up for in such a case because performing Salah during its regular time is a condition of its validity.

A: Firstly: It is Wajib (obligatory) on whoever misses a Salah (Prayer) to hasten to make up for it as it is authentically narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Whoever misses a Salah because of sleep or oblivion, they have to offer it when they remember it, there is no Kaffarah \(expiation\) for it except this.\)

Secondly: It is Wajib on a person to follow the necessary mediums that help them to wake up early. For example, they have to use an alarm or ask somebody else who usually wakes up early to awaken them for Fajr Prayer. Being always asleep during the time of Fajr Prayer is not a valid excuse for not performing the concerned Salah on time and performing it only when a person wakes up. Doing the foregoing makes the concerned person liable to the threat which is mentioned in Allah's saying: [\(Then, there has succeeded them a posterity who have given up As-Salât \(the prayers\) \[i.e. made their Salât \(prayers\) to be lost, either by not offering them or by not offering them perfectly or by not offering them in their proper fixed times\] and have followed lusts. So they will be thrown in Hell.\)](#) and: \(So woe unto those performers of Salât \(prayers\) \(hypocrites\),\) \(Those who delay their Salât \(prayer from their stated fixed times\).\)

Q 3: In our Masjid (Mosque), people offer Fajr (Dawn) prayer half an hour before dawn. Should we offer Salah with the congregation before its prescribed time or offer it at its due time in our houses?

A: The beginning of the prescribed time of prayer is a condition that makes the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers obligatory and valid. This is a legal ruling and a well-established religious matter. If a person offers Salah before its due time, it is invalid and should be repeated in its due time. If what you have mentioned is true, you should advise those who are in charge of the Masjid.

Q 2: Could you please tell us how many hours or minutes there are between the break of dawn and sunrise so that we can identify the time for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer? As we seek to avoid performing Fajr Prayer before its time starts; what do we have to do from the Shari`ah (Islamic law) viewpoint if such a Salah (Prayer) is held at Masjids (mosques) before the start of its time?

A: Time for Fajr prayer begins when the second Fajr (dawn) starts, which is the white line that spreads horizontally along the skyline. This may be checked either by viewing or daily timing calculations.

Fatwa no. 18052

Q: what is Salat-ul-Ghadah and the time and manner related to its offering? what is the wisdom behind offering it?

A: Salat-ul-Ghadah is the Morning Prayer, that is, the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer which is one of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers due to be offered by Muslims by day and night. It is offered after its time is due, starting from the break of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq (true dawn) until sunrise. It is an act of Sunnah (reported from the Prophet) to offer it while it is still dark, and to prolong it in a way that does not cause fatigue to the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer). It consists of two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) in which the Qur'an is recited loudly.

As for the wisdom behind it, it is one of the obligatory acts enjoined by Allah (Exalted be He) upon His Servants to show obedience to Him, as in all other acts of worship. Therefore, anyone who offers it together with other obligations as legally prescribed will be greatly rewarded; otherwise, they will lose

Q 2: If the Salah (Prayer) is offered before its due time, is it permissible to offer it with the Imam intending it as supererogatory prayer before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer?

A: If you are sure that the Salah is performed before its due time, you have to draw your Imam's attention to that mistake and not intend it as a Sunnah prayer. You should indicate that matter to the Imam and if he admits his fault, praise be to Allah; otherwise, you have to tell his supervisor to save yourself from blame.

Moreover, you should not offer Salah behind him as you know that he is offering Salah before its due time, because by that you agree with him in his mistake and this might tempt people to believe that he is doing the right thing.

Fatwa no. 18684

Q: There is a prescribed time for each Salah (Prayer), for Allah (Exalted be He) says, (Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.) People hold different opinions with regard to Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Group no. (8) offers Fajr Prayer according to the schedule specified by the Ministry. According to this schedule, Salah is offered in the darkness. However, group no. (2) believes that Salah should be delayed. They support their view with the prophetic reports that refer to delaying Salah until the daybreak and before the crack of dawn such as the Hadith reported on the authority of `Aishah, and the Hadith of the man who was inquiring about the time of Salah reported from Salhan ibn Bawdah from his father. This is in addition to other various reports that have the same effect but are too long to be mentioned here. It is worth mentioning that group no. (2) delays performing Fajr prayer until the dawn is breaking and leaves the Masjid (Mosques) when the morning is manifest. They claim that the Salah offered by group no. (8) is invalid and they should repeat it. On the other hand, group no. (8) believes that the time in which they offer Salah is specified by legal astronomers and their Salah is valid. It is worth mentioning that the difference in time between the two groups is twenty minutes.

Is group no. (8) right in following the schedule set by the Ministry? Is their Salah invalid as claimed by group no. (2)? Is group no. (2) right? Should we follow this schedule? What should we do in this case? Should we offer Salah with group no. (8) with the intention of Nafilah (supererogatory) and then repeat it so that we do not miss the reward of congregational Salah? Are we to be blamed if we offer Salah according to the prescribed time?

A: Firstly, the time of Fajr Prayer starts from the crack of the second dawn until sunrise. However, it is better to offer Fajr at the beginning of its prescribed time before the daybreak as stated in the Sahih (authentic) Hadith. It is reported on the authority of Jabir that, ("The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to perform Fajr in the darkness before dawn.") (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). It means that he (peace be upon him) used to observe it in the darkness directly before the crack of dawn.

It is reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that ("The believing women used to offer Fajr Prayer with the Prophet (peace be upon him) while they are covered with their Murut (wool cloth). After finishing the prayer they would return to their houses without being recognized by anyone because of the darkness.") (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). This is in addition to other Hadiths to the same effect.

Scholars state that the reports that apparently support delaying Fajr Prayer until Isfar, i.e. daybreak, indicate that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do this sometimes but he used to offer Fajr in the darkness before the crack of dawn. It is said that the word "Isfar" means to ascertain the start of the daybreak. Others said it refers to the recommendation of prolonging the recitation in Fajr Prayer, so the day would be breaking when Salah is over.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 111)

Secondly, holding different opinions with regard to this matter should not be a reason for dispute and separation of Muslims who live in the same district. You should all unite, cooperate in righteousness and piety, abide by the Sunnah, and explain it to people kindly, not dispute over it. It is better to agree to offer Fajr Prayer at the beginning of its prescribed time as mentioned above. Otherwise, you can offer it in the middle or the end of its prescribed time so as to keep harmony between people.

You should follow the Juristic authority which is responsible for determining the time of Salah to ward off this kind of dispraised difference of opinion.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 19160

Q 5: Is it permissible to delay Fajr (dawn) Prayer until sunrise? What is the ruling on whoever delays it? Is it permissible to offer Nafilah (supererogatory) prayers after sunrise until Zawal (midday)?

A: It is not permissible to delay Fajr Prayer or any other prayer until after its prescribed time.

Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾

It is permissible to offer Nafilah in the time between sunrise and Zawal especially Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise).

The first question of Fatwa no. 19528

Q 1: I have a disease in the spine. Doctors in my country failed to define a clear cause for my disease. Some say there is pus in the spine, and others say there is a gap between vertebrae. The definite cause has not been discovered yet. I would like to tell you that I used to perform Fajr (Dawn) Prayer at its due time. Shortly after marriage, I used to sleep late. At the due time of the Fajr Prayer my wife wakes up to offer it and tries to awaken me but she can not and I do not feel it. When it becomes morning, I ask my wife why she did not awaken me, but she swears she did until I woke up and sat on the bed, but I was unconscious and did not feel this. Accordingly, I can not get off the bed to offer the Fajr Prayer.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 113)

I have not offered the Fajr Prayer in congregation for a long time, and I become accustomed to offering it at the time of Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise). What is the ruling on my Salah? Is there anything due on me in this regard? Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you are honest in what you say, then there is nothing due on you, for Allah (may He be Praised and Exalted) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) However, you should address this matter by sleeping early and seeking what helps you in waking up early when Fajr Prayer is due, whether by an alarm clock, asking your wife to awaken you and, most important, beseeching Allah to help you offer Fajr Prayer at its due time in congregation and ward off any evil from you. Allah (Glorified be He) says: [\(Invoke Me, \[i.e. believe in My Oneness \(Islâmic Monotheism\) and ask Me for anything\] I will respond to your \(invocation\).\)](#) ; \(And whosoever fears Allâh and keeps his duty to Him, He will make a way for him to get out \(from every difficulty\).\) and: \(and whosoever fears Allâh and keeps his duty to Him, He will make his matter easy for him.\) May Allah facilitate your affairs.

Q 9: i miss Fajr (Dawn) Prayer due to sleep. My job is very hard and difficult. I can not wake up to offer Salah in its due time, so I offer it at seven o'clock after sunrise. It is worth mentioning that I go to work without having breakfast because I have no time. What is the ruling on this matter taking into consideration that I offer the rest of Salah in their due time?

A: It is not permissible for you to sleep and miss Fajr Prayer and offer it after its prescribed time. You must repent and offer Salah with the congregation in the Masjid (Mosque) in its due time which Allah has prescribed.

The first question of Fatwa no. 21191

Q 1: What is the meaning of the Hadith of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him):

("Perform the Fajr (Dawn) prayer when it is time for Isfar, for it is great in reward.") ?

A: This Hadith is Sahih (authentic Hadith). It was related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah). The word "Isfar" mentioned in the Hadith signifies the time when the dawn breaks and lights. Al-Qady `Iyad (may Allah be merciful with him) said, the word "Isfar" is derived from "Asfar" and "Safr", i.e. to appear. Thus, the Hadith means: offer Fajr prayer in its due time when the dawn breaks and do not offer it before the break of dawn.

Fatwa no. 17878

Q: I paid a visit to Bergen, the western capital city of Norway after being invited by the Islamic Cultural Centre there. During my stay, I observed how the Islamic community is in great need of a Da`y (Islamic caller) who has both righteousness and religious knowledge. Like most European countries, there is no qualified scholar in Bergen who can undertake the responsibility of Da`wah (calling to Islam) and Fatwa. Some people who lack proper religious knowledge hold the position of a Da`y and issue invalid Fatwas which misguide Muslims there. This poses a great danger to Islam. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: "When honesty is lost, then wait for the Hour." It was asked, "How will honesty be lost, O Allah's Messenger?" He said, "When authority is given to those who do not deserve it, then wait for the Hour."

(Part No. 5; Page No. 116)

For example: The responsibility of making Da`wah efforts and issuing Fatwas in this city is undertaken by a man named Mahmud Al-Sayyad, who is officially responsible for the Islamic Society. He has also been appointed as an Imam in the society for many years. He used to issue Fatwas which lacked proper religious knowledge. One Fatwa stated the following:

Changing Prayer times in the city. He issued what has been called Al-Dahri Calendar. He distorted many religious matters for Muslims. He made them offer Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers before sunset. He also made them break their fast many hours before sunset. He attributed this Fatwa to a group of Saudi scholars and jurists.

However, I happened to read a Fatwa issued by the Fatwa Committee of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia which states otherwise. It says that Muslims are obliged to abide by the regular prayer times as long as night and day continues to alternate. The Fatwa bears No. 2769 issued in 31/1/1400 AH.

The Saudi Fatwa was released many years before this fabricated Fatwa was issued. Some people may imagine that the alleged Fatwa abrogated the Saudi Fatwa. Based on this, we hope that the Fatwa Committee will issue a new Fatwa in this regard.

This is necessary because many people are still convinced of the invalid Fatwa issued by that man. This Fatwa has invalidated the Salah and Sawm (fasting) of the Muslims. It should be noted that the duration of night at this city is almost four hours.

We hope that this incident may motivate Islamic institutions to think about sending qualified Du`ah (Islamic callers) to Islamic centers in Europe. It is a serious matter and all Muslims will bear the evil consequences. Please accept our best regards.

As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

times of Salah. The decree also set the time of dawn and sunset of every day of the month of Ramadan at similar countries. The decree stated:

Following careful examination of the subject, the council decided the following:

Muslims who live in countries where the day continuously alternates with night, but where the duration of the day is longer in summer than in winter, they must offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers at their stated times. This is based on the general meaning of the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (may He be glorified) states:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 118)

﴿Perform As-Salât (Iqamât-as-Salât) from mid-day till the darkness of the night (i.e. the Zuhr, 'Asr, Maghrib, and 'Ishâ' prayers), and recite the Qur'ân in the early dawn (i.e. the morning prayer). Verily, the recitation of the Qur'ân in the early dawn is ever witnessed (attended by the angels in charge of mankind of the day and the night).﴾ In another Ayah, Allah (Glorified be He) states: ﴿Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ It has been reported on the authority of Buraydah (may Allah be pleased with him) that ﴿A person asked the Prophet (peace be upon him) about the stated time of Salah. Upon this the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Pray with us these two; meaning two days. When the sun passed the meridian, he commanded Bilal to announce Adhan (call to Prayer). Then he commanded him to announce Iqama (call to start the Prayer) for Dhuhr (Noon) Prayer. (Then at the time of the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer) he again commanded him to announce the Iqama for the 'Asr Prayer when the sun was high, white and clear. He again commanded him to announce Iqama for the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer when the sun had set. He again commanded him to announce Iqama for the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer when the twilight had disappeared. He again commanded him to announce Iqama for the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer at the break of dawn. The following day, he commanded him to delay the Dhuhr Prayer until the extreme heat had passed and he did so, and he allowed it to be delayed until the extreme heat had passed. He offered the 'Asr Prayer when the sun was high, delaying it beyond the time he had previously observed it. He offered the Maghrib Prayer before the twilight had vanished; he offered the 'Isha' Prayer when a third of the night had passed; and he observed the Fajr Prayer when there was clear daylight. The Prophet (peace be upon him) then said: "Where is the man who inquired about the stated times of Salah?" The inquirer said : "Here I am O Messenger of Allah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "The time for your Salah lies within the limits of what you have seen."﴾ (Related by Muslim).

On the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Amr ibn Al-`As that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿The stated time for the Dhuhr Prayer is when the sun passes the meridian and a man's shadow is the same length as his height, and it lasts as long as the time for the 'Asr Prayer has not come; the stated time for the 'Asr Prayer is as long as the sun has not become pale; the stated time for the Maghrib Prayer continues for as long as the twilight has not ended; the stated time for the 'Isha' Prayer is up to the middle of the average night and the time of the Fajr Prayer is from the appearance of dawn, as long as the sun has not risen; but when the sun rises, refrain from Salah for it rises between the horns of the devil.﴾ (Related by Muslim in his Sahih). There are other similar Hadiths regarding the stated times of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers. These Hadiths do not make a distinction between the long or the short duration of the day and night. The stated times of Salah are identified by the signs that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) specified.

During the appointed times of starting and breaking the fast during the month of Ramadan, adult Muslims have to abstain from eating, drinking and all the things that nullify their fasting from dawn till dusk. This is as long as the day continues to alternate with the night during a period of twenty-four hours. It is lawful for them to eat and drink and engage in sexual intercourse with their wives only during the night even though its duration may be short. The rules of the Shari`ah (Islamic Law) remain one and the same at all places.

Allah (Glorified be He) says: ﴿...and eat and drink until the white thread \(light\) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread \(darkness of night\), then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall.﴾ Those who are incapable of fasting during the day due to the length of its duration, or because of a doctor's advice not to fast, or because fasting is likely to make them ill, or their sickness is likely to aggravate on account of fasting, it is lawful for them to break their fast and make up for the days they miss at a later time. Allah (Exalted be He) says: [﴿So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fast\) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fast\) must be made up\] from other days.﴾](#) Allah (Exalted be He) also says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) also says: ﴿and has not laid upon you in religion any hardship﴾

Second: People who live in countries where the sun never sets in summer and never rises in winter, and those who live in countries where daytime prevails for half a year and where night-time prevails for the half of the year have to offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers throughout twenty-four hours. They have to calculate the stated times of Salah depending on the timing of the neighboring countries. ﴿Allah, the Exalted enjoined upon the people of the Muslim Ummah to perform fifty prayers daily. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) repeated his question to his Lord to make the duty lighter till Allah \(may He be Exalted\) said: O Muhammad! They are fifty prayers daily; every one equals ten, so the result is fifty prayers.﴾

It was authentically reported on the authority of Talhah ibn `Ubaydullah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: ﴿A man from Najd with ruffled hair came to the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\), and we heard his loud voice but could not understand what he was saying. It was not until he had come near to the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) that we knew he was asking about Islam. The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) said: "You have to offer five Prayers each day and night." The man inquired: "Do I have to do anything else?" The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) said: "No, unless you want to offer voluntary prayers....﴾

It was authentically reported on the authority of Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: ﴿We were forbidden to ask the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) about anything \(useless\), so we used to like it when an intelligent person from among the desert people would come and ask him a question while we were listening. Once a Bedouin came and said: "O Muhammad, your messenger came to us and said that you claim that Allah sent you." The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) replied: "He has spoken the truth." The man kept asking the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) until he said: "And your messenger claimed that we have to offer five prayers each day and night." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "He has spoken the truth." The man said, "By the One Who sent you, has Allah commanded you to teach this?" He said: "Yes...."﴾

It was also authentically reported that ﴿The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was talking to his Sahabah

(Companions) about Al-Masih-ul-Dajjal (the Antichrist) when they asked: "For how long will he stay on earth?" The Prophet (peace be upon him) replied: "For forty days, the length of one day is equivalent to one year, the length of another day is equivalent to a month, the length of a third day is equivalent a week's time and the rest of the days will be like normal days." The Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked: "O Messenger of Allah! Would one day's prayer suffice for the prayers of day equal to one year?" Thereupon he said: "No, but you must make an estimate of time (and then observe prayer).” The Prophet (peace be upon him) affirmed that during the day whose length is equivalent to one year, it will not be sufficient to offer the Five Obligatory daily Prayers one time and that one will be obliged to offer these prayers every twenty-four hours.

Muslims in these countries must specify the appointed times of Salah depending on the nearest country where the night alternates with the day and where the appointed times of Salah are known through the signs specified by the Shari'ah (Islamic Law).

They must observe fasting during the month of Ramadan. They must specify the beginning and end of Ramadan. They must also specify the time of starting and breaking the fast for every day. They may depend on the break of dawn and sunset in the nearest country to them. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked about Al-Masih-ul-Dajjal. He instructed his Sahabah about the proper method of specifying the appointed times of Salah. There is no difference between Salah and Sawm (fast) in this regard. The Dahri Calendar mentioned in the question is invalid as it contradicts the explicit Hadiths narrated from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and because it spoils the Salah and Sawm. Therefore, Muslims must be warned about following it.

Q 7: Here in Stockholm, we have prayer-time tables indicating the time of sunrise and sunset. However, observing the sunset and the sunrise with our eyes, we find a slight difference. We contacted the Meteorological Centre in Stockholm to inquire about their way of calculating the time of sunrise and sunset. The employee said that none of the Islamic organizations had contacted them to clarify the Muslim's need to know the timing of sunrise and sunset in their Shari`ah issues such as the time of Prayers.

The timing of sunrise and sunset recorded in the Swedish calendar is calculated for other purposes. They do not calculate the time of sunrise when the edge of the sun rises but when the center of the sun appears. In the same manner, they do not calculate the time of sunset when the edge of the sun disappears but when the center of the sun disappears. Although, it is known that the validity of Salah is conditional on the beginning of the prescribed time.

(Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.) Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) addresses His Messenger (peace be upon him) ordering him to offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in their prescribed times: (Perform As-Salât (Iqamât-as-Salât) from mid-day till the darkness of the night (i.e. the Zuhr, 'Asr, Maghrib and 'Ishâ' prayers), and recite the Qur'ân in the early dawn (i.e. the morning prayer). Verily, the recitation of the Qur'ân in the early dawn is ever witnessed (attended by the angels in charge of mankind of the day and the night).)

According to the employee, they calculate the appearance of the moon using computers. They have never tried to sight the crescent since a long time ago. None of the Muslim officials asked for sighting the crescent in the beginning of Ramadan or any other month.

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ("Fast on sighting it (the new moon) and break your fast on sighting it.") (Related by Al-Bukhari). Scholars are in agreement on the permissibility of using observatories for the purpose of witnessing the crescent. However, they held different opinions with regard to confirming the new moon through astronomical calculations without practical sight. Some believe that it is impermissible to use astronomical calculations to confirm the new moon. Likewise, it is not correct to rely on astronomy, as it is guesswork. However, others believe that sighting the crescent means to make sure of the new moon and that the modern astronomical calculations are more accurate than sighting the crescent. Which of these ways do you prefer in Saudi Arabia?

A: It is not permissible to rely on the calculations or the timing of a Non-Muslim country in order to observe Sawm (fasting) or to offer Salah. This is due to the fact that the testimony of a non-Muslim is not accepted in religious matters. You have mentioned in your inquiry that they have their own calculations with regard to sunrise, sunset, and sighting the crescent that are not in conformity with the Shari`ah (Islamic law). This is an enough reason not to take their calculations into consideration.

You must depend on yourselves in determining the timing of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers and the sight of the crescent. This is a feasible matter, Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah].

It is not permissible to use calculations to determine the beginning or the end of Ramadan. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"Fast on sighting it \(the new moon\) and break your fast on sighting it. However, if the sky is overcast \(and you cannot see it\), complete the term as thirty \(days of Sha`ban\).">﴿"Fast on sighting it \(the new moon\) and break your fast on sighting it. However, if the sky is overcast \(and you cannot see it\), complete the term as thirty \(days of Sha`ban\)."﴾ Many Sahih Hadith (authentic Hadith) have been narrated to the same effect. Shaykh Al-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful with him) said that there is scholarly consensus on this point.

Q 3: I work for a company. Sometimes the time of Salah is due while we are busy with work, and as the head of a team of workers, I might miss the obligatory prayer as a result. At other times, if i leave work to perform prayer, my supervisors punish me. What should i do? Given that the company officials are Saudis and non-Saudis.

A: It is obligatory upon a Muslim to perform Salah at its due time, and it is impermissible to delay or miss the congregational Salah.

The third question of Fatwa no. 15918

Q 3: if someone is not consistent in offering the obligatory prayers at their due time, as they sometimes miss some prayers heedlessly. What is the ruling on this? Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: A Muslim should offer the five daily prayers regularly and at their prescribed time in congregation. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ The Prophet, peace be upon him, said: ﴿Whoever heard the Adhan \(Call to prayer\) and did not come to it \(the prayer\), then there is no prayer for him except with an excuse.﴾ Related by Ibn Majah, Al-Darquthy, Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim with a Sahih (authentic) Sanad (chain of narrators).

(Part No. 5; Page No. 128)

Furthermore, it is impermissible for a Muslim to be lazy to offer Salah at times and be punctual at other times. A Muslim should offer Salah in its prescribed manner and on its due time. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Guard strictly \(five obligatory\) As-Salawât \(the prayers\) especially the middle Salât \(i.e. the best prayer – 'Asr\).﴾ ; ﴿And those who guard their Salât \(prayers\) well.﴾ ; ﴿Those who remain constant in their Salât \(prayers\);﴾ and: ﴿So woe unto those performers of Salât \(prayers\) \(hypocrites\),﴾ ﴿Those who delay their Salât \(prayer from their stated fixed times\).﴾

Fatwa no. 16496

Q: There is a person who is negligent of Salah at its due time, and might even combine two prayers or more at the same time. He might also deliberately sleep before the time of Salah is due or hears the Adhan (Call to prayer) but he does not care and sleeps until the due time of Salah is over. Is he excused for not offering Salah because of sleeping? What is the ruling on befriending such a person or eating and talking with him after he has been advised many times?

A: It is impermissible to delay prayer after its due time without a legal excuse, e.g. combining prayer for a person who is legally permitted to do that. As for a person who neglects Salah until its due time is over, he disobeys Allah (Exalted be He) and commits a great sin. Accordingly, he should be reprimanded and asked to repent to Allah and to offer Salah on its due time in congregation. However, if he insists on his heedlessness and negligence of the religious rulings, he should not be befriended but rather abandoned. The Muslim ruler should be informed to punish this person. Regarding his sleep, it is not an excuse to neglect or delay Salah after its due time, because he deliberately sleeps at the due time of an obligatory Salah or a short period before it. A group of scholars held the view that such a person is considered a Kafir (disbeliever) if he intentionally delays Salah after its due time without a legal excuse, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning prayers.﴾ Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih. The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: ﴿That which differentiates us from the disbelievers and hypocrites is our performance of Salah. He who abandons it, becomes a disbeliever.﴾ Related by Al-Imam Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan (authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) with a Sahih (authentic) Sanad (chain of narrators) on the authority of Buraydah ibn Al-Husayb (may Allah be pleased with him).

Fatwa no. 18095

Q: Those who travel to America to study

are often faced with a problem when the time of `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer is due, as their lectures start immediately before `Asr Prayer and continue till sunset. There is no doubt that it is not easy to get daily permission to be excused from class to offer Salah, given that some activities are difficult for some students to leave the others, such as aviation classes and other subjects which require collective work.

Is it possible to combine `Asr Prayer with Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer at the time of the latter, and the same for Zhuhr Prayer as sometimes lectures extend until after the due time of the `Asr Prayer? Is it permissible to delay Zhuhr Prayer and combine it with `Asr Prayer at the time of the latter as well?

A: They have to offer each Salah at its due time. The difficulty of getting daily permission to offer Salah is not an excuse to delay Salah until its due time is over. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ meaning an obligation to be performed at a fixed time during which a Muslim should offer it.

Fatwa no. 18405

Q: On behalf of my colleagues who work for Saudi Airlines at Tabuk Airport, please issue a legal Fatwa concerning the following:

Due to continuous flights that coincide with the times of Salah (Prayer), such as Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer which we may not be able to offer in congregation for a whole month, we are only able to perform it as Zhuhr (Noon) prayer instead.

As for Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, it happens that on certain days we are overloaded with work and can not leave our working sites unless all flights take off. This compels us to delay the Maghrib Prayer until the due time of `Isha Prayer or later.

As for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, we can only offer it on some days in winter after sunrise, because there are flights that take off at the time of Salah.

A: It is permissible to perform Friday Prayer as Zhuhr Prayer at work sites and at the due time of Zhuhr Prayer if you are unable to perform Friday Prayer in congregation.

It is impermissible to delay Maghrib and Fajr prayers or any other obligatory prayers after their due time; rather a Muslim should offer prayers at their due time even individually if he is unable to perform them in congregation with other work colleagues, because Allah made such prayers prescribed at fixed times. Allah (Exalted be He) says:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 132)

﴿Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ and: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ If a Muslim is able to offer prayer with his co-workers in congregation, they should do so; otherwise they can offer it alternatively or even individually due to the general meaning of the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) mentioned above.

Q 1: A man works in a company from ten o'clock at night until six or seven o'clock in the morning. When he gets back home, he sleeps until three or four o'clock in the afternoon and sometimes he sleeps until sunset. this makes him miss congregational prayers including the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. I awaken him to perform prayers when I am at home with him. What is the ruling on this case? Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you are at home with him, you have to awaken and advise him that it is better for him to sleep between prayers as well as seeking the causes that help him wake up at the due time of Salah. You should remind him of the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and Hadiths which indicate the reward and good end awaiting those who offer Salah regularly and congregationally. Likewise, you should also in the same manner remind him of the torment and bad end for those who are heedless of Salah and keep delaying it.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18850

Q 1: During our cultivation season we have a month which we call the month of "Al-`ilan" or hashish, and during that month men and women harvest the grass from sunrise to sunset, missing Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) prayers. The number of working women exceeds that of men. Those workers do not offer prayers at their due time. When the time of Maghrib prayer is due, they combine with it Zhuhr and `Asr prayers. What is the ruling regarding these people? Please advise.

A: It is impermissible to delay Salah after its due time except if you are travelling or are a patient with prior intention of combining prayers at the time of the latter prayer. But if you are a healthy resident, you have to offer each Salah at its due time. Work conditions are not an excuse for delaying Salah past their due time. Therefore, what these people do is impermissible; rather this is a great sin that they have to repent to Allah from and resolve not to do again. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ i.e. prescribed at fixed times during which they should be performed not delayed until their due time is over. They have to repent to Allah from that misdeed and resolve not to commit such a sin again.

The third question of Fatwa no. 20930

Q 3: a woman delays offering Salah after its due time sometimes with an excuse and sometimes without, especially the Fajr prayer. What is the ruling on her actions? May Allah protect you!

A: It is obligatory upon a Muslim to offer Salah at its due time. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ It is better to offer it at the beginning of its due time. But it is impermissible for a Muslim to delay the Salah until its due time is over without an excuse. Therefore, if this woman delays Salah with a valid excuse, be it forgetfulness or sleep not as a habit, she should offer it whenever she remembers it, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿He who misses a prayer because he sleeps or forgets it should offer it when he remembers it, there is no expiation for it except this.﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). However, if she deliberately delays Salah after its due time or stays up late with no necessity as she is accustomed to that, and she does not take all the necessary means to wake up early such as an alarm clock or asking a member of her family to awaken her at the time of Salah, she is sinful. This woman therefore has to sincerely repent from such misdeed and seek all the possible means to help her wake up at the due time of Salah, because she is in great danger of having a bad end, Allah forbid.

Q 1: Is it permissible for the seekers of knowledge to offer Salah (Prayer) before its due time or delay it, as they are involved in seeking knowledge of the Shari`ah and are unable to leave before the lesson is over?

A: Salah has a fixed time to be offered at, and thus it is not permissible to delay or offer it before its due time. Furthermore, seeking knowledge is not an excuse to delay Salah or offer it before its prescribed time, as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾

The third question of Fatwa no. 20956

Q 3: During our visit to the Ivory Coast in Ramadan, we noticed that twenty minutes after performing Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, people remain in the Masjid (Mosque), then the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) announces the Adhan (Call to prayer) for the `Isha' (Night) Prayer. Directly thereafter, they offer `Isha' and Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) prayers. We also noticed that they pronounce the Adhan early, based on there time devices. What is the ruling in this regard?

A: Each obligatory Salah has a prescribed time at which it is offered, and it is not permissible to offer Salah before or after that time, for Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ The Sunnah also provides many authentic Hadith indicating the times of offering prayers. Therefore it is not permissible to offer Salah before it becomes due. Anyone who offers Salah before its due time, their Salah is invalid and Batil (null and void), unless there is an excuse that permits the combining of prayers, such as an illness or travel. In these two cases, only people who fall under this category are allowed to combine Zuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) prayers at the time of the former, or combine Maghrib and `Isha' prayers at the time of the former. In light of this, if those mentioned in the question offer `Isha' and Tarawih prayers before `Isha' prayer is due, their Salah is Batil and they should be advised and warned against their wrong action.

Covering the `Awrah

Fatwa no. 18260

Q: We often notice that many people offer Salah (Prayer) with light garments that define the body and the skin, and they wear short pants under these garments that only extend to half of the thigh length. As such, a part of the thigh becomes discernable from through their garments. What is the ruling on these people's Salah?

A: If the reality is as mentioned, the Salah of these people is invalid, because covering the `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public) is a condition for the validity of Salah. For men, the `Awrah extends from the navel to the knee, and garments should not be sheer, revealing what is underneath.

Q 2: Is it an act of Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) to cover the head by wearing a turban or headgear during Salah (prayer)? In fact, some blame us for not covering our head in Salah and for not making Du`a' (supplication) with the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) directly after concluding the Faridah (obligatory Salah).

(Part No. 5; Page No. 139)

A: It is an act of Sunnah for the servant offering Salah to be good in appearance, clean, and Tahir (ritually pure). Allah (Exalted be He) says: [﴿O Children of Adam! Take your adornment \(by wearing your clean clothes\), while praying \[and going round \(the Tawâf of\) the Ka'bah,\]﴾](#) meaning when you are going to offer Salah. It is reported that when asked about whoever offers Salah bare-headed, Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them) said: "Allah is worthier to adorn oneself before Him than people." Accordingly, it is Mustahab (desirable) to cover the head during the Salah, for it is considered an adornment. However, it is permissible to offer Salah bare-headed.

As for those who disapprove your abstention from making Du`a' with the Imam after concluding the Salah; if what is meant is to make a collective Du`a', whether the Imam makes the Du`a' and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) pronounce Ta'min (saying: "Amen") or he makes Du`a' and the Ma'mums follow him, you should not pay attention to this objection. Making Du`a' with the Imam or others in a collective way after concluding the Faridah is not Sunnah; rather, it is Bid`ah (innovation in religion), that has no basis in the Book of Allah or the Sunnah of His Messenger (peace be upon him). Acts of `Ibadah (worship) including Du`a' are based upon Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion). Therefore, it is not permissible to introduce innovations in it. Whoever says otherwise it is to be rejected, as the Prophet (may peace be upon him) said: ﴿Whoever performs any act for which there is no sanction from our behalf, it is to be rejected﴾ However, if everyone makes Du`a' by themselves, there is nothing wrong with that if it is without raising their hands after the Faridah.

Q 10: Some people wear a turban, some wear a Qulunsuwah (cap) and many offer Salah with bare heads, I mean men. Which manner is the best in reward? We appreciate your advice, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is desirable for a muslim to wear his full garment when going to Prayer, the head cover included; because Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) enjoined His servants to adorn themselves when going to Salah. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: [﴿O Children of Adam! Take your adornment \(by wearing your clean clothes\), while praying \[and going round \(the Tawâf of\) the Ka'bah,\]﴾](#) Besides, it has not been reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he offered Salah without a head cover. Fatwa no. 18635

Q: I came across a question in a book entitled: (Subol Al-Salam Sharh Bulough Al-Maram) by Al-San`any, in the Chapter of Conditions of Salah (Prayer). The author explained the Hadith reported by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(“Allah does not accept the prayer of a menstruating woman \(i.e., an adult woman\) unless \(she covers her head\) with a head-cover.”.\) The author, Al-San`any, (may Allah be merciful to him) said: (Allah's acceptance of worship may mean the person's worthiness of reward. Hence the non-acceptance of worship means unworthiness of reward not the invalidity of the worship itself as reportedly mentioned in the Hadith: \(Allah does not accept the prayer of a runaway slave or of one in whose abdomen there is alcohol.\))

Here lies the subject of my questions:

The first question: Is this Hadith authentic?

The second question: is the Salah of a runaway slave and the person who drinks alcohol not accepted by Allah, that is, if they pray, Allah will not reward them for this Prayer and is it just their Salah that Allah will not accept, or does this apply to other acts of worship they offer, such as Zakah, Sawm, Hajj?

The third question: Can we compare a fornicator to them and say that the fornicator's Salah is sufficient for him because he is legally competent to offer Salah, yet Allah will not reward him even if he offers Salah his whole life?

Finally, can we compare all the punishable sins such as theft and so on, to the case in this question?

We appreciate your advice, may Allah reward you with the best for what you do for Islam and Muslims!

A: The Hadith is authentic; it means that when a young girl reaches the age of puberty, she has to cover her hair and all her body except her face, unless there are strange men around her while offering Salah (i.e. in that case she has to also cover her face); because a woman's body except for her face has to be covered in Salah. One of the signs that indicate that a young girl has reached the age of puberty is menstruation. In this case, the Hadith is evidence for the invalidity of a woman's Salah without covering her `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public). It does not mean her unworthiness of Allah's Reward for Salah, as mentioned by Al-San`any (may Allah be merciful to him); because Allah's non-acceptance of an act of worship basically means the invalidity of this worship unless there is proof that indicates the unworthiness of the reward, as in the Hadith about the Salah of a runaway slave and the person who drinks alcohol, and as in the other Hadith related by Muslim in his (Sahih Muslim) from the Prophet (peace be upon him) where he said: \(He who visits a diviner and asks him about anything, his prayers extending to forty nights will not be accepted.\) as according to all religious scholars acceptance here means the unworthiness of reward for Salah, not the invalidity of Salah. Therefore a runaway slave, a person who drinks alcohol or visits a diviner and asks him about anything, do not have to repeat their Salah. The opposite case is in the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): «Neither is a prayer accepted without purification nor is charity accepted out of ill-gotten \(wealth\)» Related by Muslim in his book (Sahih Muslim) from the Hadith reported by Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them) and in the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): «The Prayer of none among you will be accepted if he is in a state of impurity until he performs ablution.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim), from the Hadith reported by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him).

Q 4: Is it permissible for a seven-year-old girl to offer Salah (Prayer) wearing revealing clothes and without Hijab (veil)?

A: seven-year-old boys and girls should be asked to offer salah so that they get used to it, and it is considered Nafilah (supererogatory). A young girl should offer Salah in suitable clothes for her, but not revealing clothes; she should wear loose clothes, so that she gets used to them, and as she might cause Fitnah (temptation). As for Hijab, it is not necessary for her, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), \(Allah does not accept the Salah of a woman who menstruates unless she wears the Hijab.\) A woman who menstruates here refers to an adult woman.

Q 4: A man led some people in congregational combined and shortened Salahs (Prayers), but his Wudu' was invalidated during the second Salah (Prayer). However, the concerned man completed the Salah then made up for it alone. What is the ruling on such a man? Is the concerned congregational Salah valid?

A: If an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) knows during Salah that his wudu' is invalidated, it will be Wajib (obligatory) on him to stop his Salah and choose one of the other worshipers to complete leading the Salah instead of him. However, if the Imam under such condition does not do the foregoing and completes the Salah while he is not in a state of Taharah (ritual purification); both his Salah and that of Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) is considered Batil (null and void) and thus they have to make up for it. Proof for the foregoing is a Hadith which is related by Muslim and others that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Allah does not accept prayer without purification.﴾

Q 1: After I offered Salah (Prayer) in congregation, I remembered that I had not performed Wudu' (ablution). Should I perform Wudu' and repeat the Salah?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 147)

A: wudu' is one of the preconditions of Salah, because Allah has commanded us to perform it before Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât \(the prayer\), wash your faces and your hands \(forearms\) up to the elbows, rub \(by passing wet hands over\) your heads, and \(wash\) your feet up to ankles.﴾ It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Allah does not accept Salah from anyone if they invalidate their Wudu' until they perform Wudu' again.﴾ (Related by Ahmad, Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, and Al-Tirmidhy) Therefore, the Salah that you offered forgetfully without performing Wudu' is invalid since it lacks one of the preconditions of Salah; and you have to repeat it after performing Wudu'. You are free from blame for offering Salah without Wudu', for you are legally excused due to forgetfulness.

Fifth question of Fatwa no. 21422

Q 5: On the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah) I entered Masjid Namirah and remained there until sunset. I had a dire need to urinate, but I could not leave the Masjid (mosque) as it was very crowded, toilets were far, and I feared being lost. i prayed Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, recited Qur'an, and made Du`a' (supplication) while i was not in my full Taharah (ritual purification), as I felt that I discharged some drops of urine. May Allah honor you.

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you to make up for the Salahs (Prayers) that you offered while you were not in a state of Taharah. You also have to make Tawbah (repentance) to Allah. However, if you were sitting in the part of the Masjid which is inside the borders of `Arafah, your Hajj would be valid. Otherwise, your Hajj is to be considered invalid, the rituals you did are to be counted as `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), and it is Wajib on you to make up for your Hajj that you missed and to slaughter the appointed sacrifice.

Q: What is the ruling on a man who performed Salah (prayer) while being unaware that he had a wet dream? Does he have to make up for the Salah? Besides, what is the ruling on those who prayed with him as Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) while the concerned man was the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer)? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you.

A: Taharah (ritual purification) is a condition for the validity of Salah. Such an Imam who prayed while not being in a state of Taharah should therefore make up for his Salah. However, the Ma'mums who prayed behind the concerned Imam without knowing that he was not in a state of Taharah do not have to make up for their Salah.

Q 4: A young man attained the age of puberty when he was fifteen years old. However, he did not take Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) every time he had a wet dream because he studied at school that Ghusl is Wajib (obligatory) after sexual intercourse. He only learned that the same ruling applies to nocturnal seminal emission when he became twenty years old. The question now is, what is the ruling on the prayers he offered for five years without performing Ghusl?

A: It is Wajib to take Ghusl after having a wet dream. The Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked about the ruling on a woman having such a dream, he (peace be upon him) said, "She must take Ghusl." (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). This Hadith indicates that if a Muslim, male or female, has a wet dream during which Maniy (sperm/vaginal secretions that are released on orgasm) is emitted, it becomes Wajib to perform Ghusl. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said in another narration related by Al-Bukhari, \("Yes, if she notices a discharge."\) i.e. if she notices Maniy upon awakening. He (peace be upon him) also said, \("Taking Ghusl is \(obligatory\) upon seminal discharge."\) Therefore, if one performs Salah without taking Ghusl after nocturnal emission of semen, it is Wajib on them to make up for any Salah they offered while not being in a state of Taharah (ritual purity). However, the young man in question does not have to make up for his Salah, as he was unaware of the ruling and it would be difficult for him to make up for missed Salah during that five year period.

The second question of Fatwa no. 15904

Q 2: A man spent the night before he traveled back to his country at the home of his friend. He had a sexual dream, but he could not have Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) because it was very cold. As the flight departure time was before the time for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, he boarded the plane before offering the Salah (Prayer). However, the concerned man reached his destination before sunrise. he, thus, performed Wudu' (ablution) and offered the Salah without having Ghusl despite his Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge) lest the time for Salah should expire. It may be worth mentioning that at the very time of his arrival in his country, he had to make another journey to his town.

Is the Salah that this person offered without having Ghusl considered valid? Is he obligated to make up for it? If he has to make up for the Salah, please give more details on the way he has to do so and whether anything else is required. Finally, I would like to thank you for the efforts you exert in answering the inquiries of Muslims. May Allah reward you with the best for your help and safeguard you. Thank you.

A: It is obligatory for the man who is mentioned in the question to make up for the concerned Salah because he offered it while he was in a state of Janabah.

Q: Your Eminence, I have a recurrent problem which bothers me: I usually clean my private parts well after relieving myself but I find traces of feces in my underwear. Sometimes I offer more than one Faridah (obligatory Prayer) with these clothes and I do not repeat what I have performed based on the Hadith of Jibril (Gabriel) when he came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) while offering Salah (Prayer) and commanded him to take off his shoes because they contained filth. Scholars hold this Hadith as proof that when a person offers Salah in a garment that has filth without being aware of that, their Salah will be valid. What should I do about this problem and is it true that I do not have to repeat my Salah?

This problem has kept me away from good actions, such as leading people in Salah under the pretext that I might be Najis (ritually impure) and there is someone who is worthier than me to lead the Salah because his clothes are Tahir (pure). Also, I sometimes find drops of dark fluid in my underwear from the front; does this fluid come out of my penis or it is just dirt from the pubic hair? It is worth mentioning that it does not have a smell. Is it permissible to visit a doctor to examine my private parts? I do not know what to do about this problem. Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh

(May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be with you!)

A: First, a person who wants to offer Salah must purify his clothes from Najasah (impurity) before commencing Salah. When he is sure of his purity and then offers Salah, his Salah will be valid.

Second, if a person is sick, there is no problem if he visits a doctor to diagnose his disease, even if the doctor examines his private parts when necessary.

Q 1: I offered some of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers while my underwear was soiled with blood. I was aware that I was bleeding so I changed my underwear, but the blood did not stop and stained my new underwear. I continued to bleed because of excessive walking. I offered more than five Prayers in these clothes for I could not remove them. I searched for a cure and was treated for this disease that did not occur again, praise be to Allah. What should I do? Should I repeat the Prayers I performed in clothes stained with blood or were my Prayers valid taking into consideration that I was the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in some of these Prayers?

A: If the blood that soiled your clothes was much, you should offer the Salah (Prayer) that you performed while wearing these clothes. This is because blood is Najis (impure) while Salah requires purity of body and clothes. If it is only a small amount of blood, there is no blame on you owing to the troubles you had; and in this case you are not obliged to repeat any Salah.

The Salah of the people you led is valid and they do not have to repeat it.

Q: Most workers in the agriculture and irrigation department have their clothes sprayed by the water used in irrigation. It is colorless water, but not Tahir (ritually pure); it is Najis (ritually impure), as it needs to pass by several stages to be purified. It is very difficult for them to change their clothes, so they offer Salah (Prayer) while wearing them, and say that Allah knows they are unable to do so. They have been doing this for six years.

A: Everyone should offer Salah in clothes that are Tahir, as one of the conditions of the validity of Salah is Taharah (ritual purity) from major and minor ritual impurity, and absence of Najasah (ritual impurity) in the body, clothes and place of Salah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) took off his shoes during Salah when he discovered that they had Najasah on them. These workers should therefore purify their clothes to offer Salah in the future. As for the past years, they are excused for their ignorance.

Q 1: i led people in `isha' (Night) Prayer while my clothes were impure, but i did not know until i pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer); only then did I recall that my clothes were impure. I therefore, asked someone to lead people in Salah again, but some said that they do not have to repeat the Salah; rather it is only the Imam who should do so. What is the ruling in this regard?

A: If you do not detect the impurity of your clothes until after Taslim, or you know it but forget until you finish Salah with Taslim, your Salah and that of those you led is valid and there is no need for either of you to repeat it.

However, if you know that your clothes are impure while leading the people, and it is within your ability to remove the Najis (ritually impure) piece, such as the Bisht and the Ghutra (a traditional cotton headdress worn by men in some Arab countries), then remove it and continue your Salah. But if this is not possible, withdraw and have the nearest person behind you take your place. Once the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) was informed by Jibril (Gabriel, peace be upon him) that there was some impurity on his shoes; hence, he removed them and continued performing Salah. Furthermore, when `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) was stabbed while leading people in Salah, he had `Abdul-Rahman ibn `Awf (may Allah be pleased with him) take his place and complete the Salah.

Q 2: If clothes are Najis (impure) and the person wearing them is Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) and water is not available; is it permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in the same clothes after performing Tayammum (dry ablution)?

A: A person must offer Salah in Tahir (pure) clothes, but if they do not find a Tahir garment or fail to change their clothes because of sickness, they may offer Salah in this condition.

If the clothes are affected by Maniy (sperm that is released on orgasm), they are still Tahir because Maniy is Tahir according to the most correct opinion of the scholars.

water to wash off the blood. Some people told me that I should break my Sawm (Fast) as this blood caused me to be in a state of Najasah (ritual impurity). I did not know whether to break my Sawm or continue. Were I to have broken my Sawm, what is the ruling in this regard?

A: the blood that came onto your clothes resulting from your wife's delivery does not affect in any way the validity of your Sawm (Fast). Although the blood takes the ruling of Najasah, it is not among the things that invalidate Sawm or nullify Wudu' (ablution). Rather, it should be washed and removed from the body, clothes, and the place of Salah. These are among the conditions of the validity of Salah. If you break your Sawm on such a day out of your ignorance, then you are excused and there is no sin incurred on your part, but you must hasten to make up for the missed day of Ramadan and resolve not to do this again. but there is no filth or Najasah (impurity) in this place as a result of his shoes. Is it permissible to offer Salah in this way?

A: Anyone who offers Salah wearing shoes, their Salah will be valid. There are some authentic Hadith which permit offering Salah in footwear. It was reported that Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) was asked: [«Did the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) use to offer Salah in his footwear? Praise be to Allah Alone. Peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet (Prophet Muhammad).

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the query sent to the general president from his Excellency the Undersecretary of the Ministry of Islamic Affairs responsible for Masjids (mosques). The letter no. (6807/7), dated (22/7/1411 A.H.) was forwarded to the committee by the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars on (25/5/1411) with the no. (2399). He requested in this letter that a piece of the Masjid's land be taken. The Masjid is located in Al-Nasim district at Km 5. The request, along with the letter no. (1826/2), dated (6/6/1411 AH), are forwarded to the general director of Da'wa in the country and assistant director of the countries of the Arabian Peninsula to get his opinion after visiting the said Masjid. He replied via letter no. (902/9), dated (3/9/1411 AH), that is attached to a report submitted by the examination committee of the Masjids located in Riyadh. The committee is formed of Suleiman ibn Mansour Abu Hussein and Muhammad ibn `Abdul-`Aziz Al-Dohieshy. The report states the following:

Praise be to Allah Alone. Peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet.

In reference to the enclosed request for permission to build an extension in a Masjid located in Al-Nasim District, at Km 5, to be used for teaching Qur'anic memorization, and according to the letter submitted by the director of the Department of Scientific Research and Ifta', we visited the site and found the following:

First: The said Masjid is not one where Friday Prayer is held, and it does not have a residence for the Imam and Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer).

Second: There are large spaces in the north, west, and south sides of the masjid.

Third: The spaces in the north and west areas of the Masjid can be used in expanding the Masjid in the future or in building a residence for the Imam and Mu'adhin.

Fourth: The best place for establishing the extension is the south area nearby the bathroom for the following reasons:

a- Proximity of an electric meter

b- Proximity of the bathroom

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Having discussed the query, the Committee replied that all the spaces of the Masjid should be kept intact as they may be

Q 1: Is it permissible to dedicate part of the Masjid (mosque) to an Islamic nursery where children are taught the matters of religion, knowing that Salah (Prayer) is not offered in this part, and that it is used for the children to play in.

A: It is impermissible to dedicate any part of the Masjid to a nursery or for any other purpose. A Masjid is a Waqf (endowment) that is impermissible to make use of for any purpose other than the original one. However, you can teach the children Qur'an and matters of religion without letting them play, as this does not befit the sanctity of the Masjid.

Q 1: Many Masjids (Mosques) in non-Muslim countries are considered Islamic centers for the Call to Allah which convey the Message of Islam. They are not only places of prayer or Islamic instruction and lectures; rather, the Masjid facility in non-Muslim countries is usually divided into different sections or departments:

1. A Masjid and a place of Salah (Prayer).
2. A center for calling to Islam, which includes:
 - (i) a telecommunication center offering services to Muslims and non-Muslims;
 - (ii) an Islamic library for reading and borrowing books,
 - (iii) an audio and visual library.
3. A school for children on weekends or during the week.
4. Accommodations for workers in the Masjid, or the center or for students.
5. A kitchen and a dining hall.

These sections are near each other with the same outside entrance to the building.

Some sections may be used to serve another's purposes. The Masjid may need to accommodate additional worshippers, and accordingly they offer the Salah in the corridors, adjacent rooms, the library, or the Islamic centre. Furthermore, the prayer halls may be used for school activities.

In addition to this, many Islamic ceremonies such as wedding dinners, `Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn), and feasts are held in these Masjids because they are the only places which Muslims own and where they can congregate.

Masjid Al-Sunnah Al-Nabawiyah has been established to include all such activities - as mentioned in the first letter - and enclosed is a layout and photos of the building.

It is well known in Islam that sales transactions in the Masjid are not permissible, however, what is the ruling on such Masjids or centers in non-Muslim countries? Our question is:

Is it permissible to sell Islamic cassettes and books and rent video tapes, etc., in the places allocated for that purpose in the centre or the corridors around the prayer halls, given that any kind of selling is forbidden inside such halls?

Is it permissible for non-Muslim men or women to be admitted to the Islamic centre or the Masjid?

Is it permissible for the menstruating woman to enter the Islamic centre?

As such Masjids and Islamic centers are totally established by donations and the Muslims there utilize varied methods in their donation campaigns and fund raisers to avoid becoming monotonous.

Some Muslim families prepare different food dishes or donate clothes and appliances to sell at gatherings. The money collected is used for the benefit of the Masjid and maintaining its facilities, or is given in support of Muslims all over the world, such as Muslims in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Somalia, etc.

What is Your opinion regarding holding such exhibitions in prayer halls, as other areas cannot accommodate them, not to mention that in these non-Muslim countries selling outside the building of the Islamic centre is illegal in addition to the impossibility of selling in the freezing weather in winter.

A: The name of the Masjid and the rulings related to it apply only to the place in which prayers are permanently and regularly offered and which is solely allocated for that purpose. As for places other than that which are inside the general building of the Islamic centre, it is permissible to use them in all kinds of selling, buying, and other permissible activities such as cooking, serving meals and the like.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20828

Q1: There is a Masjid (mosque) which part of its land, about 7 meters in length and 10 meters in width, has been taken to be used as warehouses for the unit's rations. Rooms were built close to the western wall facing the Qiblah from outside the Masjid to be used as warehouses for the unit. Is this permissible?

A: It is not permissible to take any part of the Masjid's land for such purposes, because the land is a Waqf (endowment).

The third question of Fatwa no. 17864

Q 3: What is the difference between a Masjid (mosque) and a Musalla (a place for Prayer)? Is tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) Wajib (obligatory) in the Musalla, or not required, or just Mustahab (desirable) and Mandub (commendable)?

A: a Masjid is the area dedicated for offering the obligatory Salah (Prayer) permanently. As for the Musalla, it is a place where Salah is performed on certain occasions, such as Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), Funeral Prayer, etc., and it is not dedicated for offering the five daily prayers. Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid is not Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) when entering a Musalla, it is Sunnah only when entering a Masjid for whoever intends to stay in it. It should be performed before sitting down as the Prophet (may peace be upon him) said: ﴿When anyone among you enters the Masjid, he should not sit down till he offers two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\).﴾ (Agreed upon by Imam Al-Bukhari and Imam Muslim).

The second question of Fatwa no. 19813

Q 2: is the Musalla (a place for Prayer) in university dwellings considered to be a Masjid (mosque) with respect to offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) and saying the Adhkar (invocations) of entering and leaving the Masjid?

A: The Musalla in university dwellings and elsewhere is not regarded as a Masjid in any respect.

Fatwa no. 17609

Praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' looked into the Fatwa request submitted to the General Mufti, by the Director of

Al-Qunfudhah Hospital, referred to the Committee from the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 348, on 20/1/1416 A.H. in which he asked the following question:

Inside the hospital facility there, is a special place designated for workers to offer Salah (prayer). It had been used as a prayer place for sometime then was closed for work-related purposes. It is noteworthy to mention that there is a Masjid (mosque) inside the hospital. It can accommodate everyone and it is not difficult for staff to offer Salah there. We need the prayer room as space for other departments in the clinic due to expansion of hospital departments.

The question is: is it permissible to use this prayer room as a clinic or offices for work-related purposes in the hospital, given that there is an adequate Masjid in the hospital as we have mentioned?

After examining the Fatwa request, the Committee gave the following answer: If the reality is as mentioned, it is permissible to utilize the prayer room for other purposes. This room does not take the same ruling as Masjids in terms of being a Waqf (endowment) and other aspects.

Fatwa no. 20861

All praise is due to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the letter submitted to His Eminence the Mufty from His Excellency the General Manager of Islamic Affairs in the Armed Forces with the number 2/10/1457 on 2/6/1419 A.H. This letter was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the number 3691 on 13/6/1419 A.H.; and it included the following question posed by His Excellency:

I refer to Your Eminence the question submitted from the manager of my children's high school - King `Abdul-`Aziz Military Academy - regarding the following subject:

There is a Masjid (mosque) inside the same building of the academy. The Masjid is very small, as it is only seven by five meters. Due to its narrow area and the large number of students, Salah (Prayer) is offered in the gymnasium. The academy officials want to turn this Masjid into a computer room to calculate the final results. Is it permissible to use this Masjid as a computer room since no congregational Salah is offered in it? Please advise us in this regard.

After studying the question, the Committee answered: If the reality is as mentioned, it is permissible to change this Musalla (a place for Prayer) into a computer room and designate a larger area to be used as a Musalla. This may be done because it cannot accommodate the number of those who offer Salah and it is not regarded as Waqf (endowment) like other Masjids.

Fatwa no. 18156

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessing be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the letter submitted to His Eminence the Mufty from the Manager of the Secondary School in Ha'il. This letter was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the number 3384 on 13/7/1416 A.H. The following question was posed:

We have mentioned in the previous letter we sent you that we want to build a place in our school to be used as a Musalla (a place for Prayer) like that which is constructed in women faculties within the wall of the building. This place will be used during regular studying hours. Lectures and sermons that touch on subjects of `Aqidah (creed) and Salah (Prayer) and warn against the misleading ways of the time will be held in this Musalla along with study groups for memorizing and teaching the Qur'an. It is worth mentioning that all these activities will be carried out during the free time of students. Moreover, the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer will be performed there. We collected a sum of money equal to 13,500 riyals for constructing this place. If it is not allowable to construct this Musalla, what should we do with this money? We hope that you will elaborate on this taking into consideration that these kinds of Musalla are found in many schools. May Allah reward you with the best!

After studying the question, the Committee answered: There is no harm in specifying a certain place in a school for female students to offer Salah therein. However, it does not take the ruling of a Masjid (mosque). It is allowed to deliver lectures and sermons and teach the Qur'an in this Musalla. This place will be of great benefit for students, for it will help them to offer Salah in its due times and give them the opportunity to learn beneficial knowledge. It should be called a Musalla, not a Masjid. Therefore, a menstruating, a newly-delivered, or a Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) woman can enter it, for it is not considered a Masjid. Furthermore, it is permissible to collect money to construct this place for it is a kind of cooperation in good and righteousness. It is only forbidden to construct special Masjids for women in residential areas.

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 16361

Q 1: My father, may Allah have mercy with him, bequeathed me a piece of land half of which is populated and the other half is used in cultivation. I donated this land for the construction of a Masjid (Mosque) with all its facilities, i.e. car parks around it and bathroom facilities and the like. Praise be to Allah, this was done in the best way, but some people told me that the reward for this deed will go to my father not me, because he is the real owner of the land and I only inherited it from him without effort. Is this correct?

A: you will be rewarded for donating your inherited land for the establishment of a Masjid because you own it and your father will be rewarded for bequeathing it to you. Both of you will be rewarded In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) due to your good intentions.

Q 2: I have been working as a servant in a Masjid (mosque) for a long time. During my first years as a servant, my salary was only 132 riyals and now it has reached 900 riyals. shall I receive reward from Allah (Exalted be He) for serving the Masjid while receiving this salary?

A: Serving the Masjid with a good intention entails a great reward. There is no harm to take a salary from the government to improve your conditions and free yourself for the service of the Masjid.

Fatwa no. 16527

Q: Does Salah (prayer) in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) equal a hundred thousand Salahs performed elsewhere? Is this specific to Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Haram only, or does it apply to Salah anywhere within the Sacred Precincts of Makkah?

A: the reward of offering Salah in Makkah, may Allah protect it, is doubled anywhere within the Sacred Precincts of Makkah not just in Al-Masjid Al-Haram. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿Glorified (and Exalted) be He (Allâh) [above all that (evil) they associate with Him] Who took His slave (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) for a journey by night from Al-Masjid-al-Harâm (at Makkah) to Al-Masjid-al-Aqsâ (in Jerusalem)﴾ The Isra' (Night Journey) began from the house of Um Hani'. Imam Ahmad related in the story of Al-Hudaybiyah that ﴿"The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to offer Salah at the Haram."﴾ Part of the area of Al-Hudaybiyah is Hil (outside the Sacred Precincts of Makkah) and part of which is Haram (within the Sacred Precincts of Makkah).

The third question of Fatwa no. 17393

Q 3: Does offering Salah (Prayer) in any Masjid (mosque) in Makkah Al-Mukarramah (The honored City of Makkah) have the same reward as offering it in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah)? Is all Makkah considered a sanctuary?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 177)

A: The reward of Salah is increased and multiplied when it is offered at any part of the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah and in all Masjids of Makkah. However, offering Salah at Al-Ka'bah is much superior.

Fatwa no. 19729

Q: Your Eminence, I would like your answer to the following question:

First, what is the Islamic ruling on whoever visits Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah to offer Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy Al-Sharif then goes to Masjid Quba', and the Masjid of two Qiblahs (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah), the Masjid of Jumu`ah and the Masjid of Al-Ghamamah, Al-sediik, and the Masjid of `Aly, may Allah be pleased with them, and other ancient Masjids, and after entering them, the visitor offers Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque). Is this permissible for him to do or not?

Second, after the visitor reaches Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy Al-Sharif, is it permissible for him to visit the ancient Masjids in Al-Madinah Al-Nabawiyah with the intention of contemplating over the remains of the righteous Salaf (righteous predecessors) and see the actual embodiment of the information which they read in the books of

Tafsir (explanation/exegesis of the meanings of the Qur'an), Hadith and history concerning the Gazawat (battles) and the abodes of the tribes of Al-Ansar. Please advise concerning this regard.

A: The answer to these two questions necessitates some details as follows:

First, by surveying the masjids that exist in the Prophet's Madinah, peace be upon him, i.e. Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah may Allah protect it, it is evident that they are of many kinds:

As for the first kind, a Masjid that exists in the Prophet's Madinah (peace be upon him) and which has a special merit. There are only two Masjids in this regard:

The first one is the Prophet's Masjid (peace be upon him) and which is mentioned in Allah's saying: ﴿Never stand you therein. Verily, the mosque whose foundation was laid from the first day on piety is more worthy that you stand therein (to pray). In it are men who love to clean and to purify themselves. And Allâh loves those who make themselves clean and pure [i.e. who clean their private parts with dust (which has the properties of soap) and water from urine and stools, after answering the call of nature].﴾ It is the second of the three Masjids to which a journey may be undertaken as authentically proven in the prophetic Sunnah. It has also been authentically proven that offering one Salah in this Masjid is better than one thousand Salahs elsewhere with the exception of Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah).

Second, the Masjid of Quba', for which this Ayah (Qur'aniv verse) was revealed: ﴿Verily, the mosque whose foundation was laid on piety﴾ Furthermore, and in the Hadith reported by

'Usaid ibn Hudair Al-Ansary may Allah be pleased with him, that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Offering Salah in Masjid Quba' is equal in reward to `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage).﴾ Related by Al-Tirmidhy, Ibn Majah and others on the authority of Sahl ibn Hunayf, may Allah be pleased with him, that the Prophet, peace be upon him, said, ﴿He who purifies himself at his house then goes to Masjid Quba' only to offer Salah in it will get a reward equal to that of performing `Umrah) Related by Ahmad, Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah and others, and this was the exact wording of the narration of Ibn Majah.

The second kind refers to the general Masjids of Muslims that are spread in the Prophet's Madinah, peace be upon him, and which have no merit of their own, but offering Salah in them is equally rewarded.

As for the third kind, they are the Masjids that were built at certain places that the Prophet was thought to have offered Salah at, or he himself defined the place where he offered that Salah in, such as Bunu Salim Masjid and Musalla (a place for Prayer) for `Eid (Festival). Such Masjids have no virtues for which they should be singled out, and nothing was reported that encourages visiting them and offering two Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) in them.

The fourth kind is dedicated to some newly built Masjids that were ascribed wrongly to the Prophet's era or that of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs, and due to innovated practices, they were frequented by the people, such as the seven Masjids, and a Masjid in The mountain of Uhud and others. These Masjids are baseless as far as the sanctified Shar` is concerned, and accordingly they should not be visited for the purpose of offering a certain `Ibadah (worship) or other acts of worship, as this is an apparent Bid`ah (innovation in religion).

The basic Shar`i rule is that no one is to be worshipped except Allah and in the manner He enjoined and prescribed as revealed to His Prophet and Messenger, Muhammad (peace be upon him). This is evidently manifested in the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of His Messenger, Muhammad (peace be upon him) and the traditions reported from the Salaf (righteous predecessors) of this Ummah (nation) who authentically reported this religion from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and conveyed it to us as well to warn us against following innovations in obedience to the command of the bringer of glad tidings and warnings (peace be upon him) as he says in the Sahih (authentic) Hadith: (He who did any act for which there is no sanction from our behalf, that is to be rejected.) and in another wording: (He who innovates things in our affairs for which there is no valid (reason) (commits sin) and these are to be rejected.) He, peace be upon him, also said: (You must follow my Sunnah and that of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs after me. Stick to them and hold fast to them. Avoid novelties, for every novelty is an innovation, and every innovation is an error.) and said: (follow the example of those after me: Abu Bakr and `Umar.) The Prophet (peace be upon him) said when (some of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) asked him to make for them a tree from which they seek blessing and hang their weapons on. The Messenger of Allah said: 'Allaahu Akbar! By the One in Whose Hand is my soul, verily these are the ways of the earlier nations. You have said exactly as The Children of Israel said to Musa: (Make for us an ilâh (a god) as they have âlihah (gods).)) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: (The Jews have split into seventy one sects, and the Christians have split into seventy two sects. And this Ummah will split into seventy-three sects, and all of them will be in the Hellfire save one.) Someone asked, "O Messenger of Allah, which one will that be?" He replied, "The one that follows what me and my Sahabah (Companions) follow.) Furthermore, it has been reported by Ibn Waddah in his book "Al-Bid`a wal Nahy `anha", i.e innovations and means of forbidding them, with his Sanad (chain of narrators) from Ibn Mas`ud, may Allah be pleased with him, that `Amr ibn `Utbah and some of his friends built a Masjid in Al-Kufa, but it was ordered by `Abdullah that this Masjid be demolished and that was done. Then it came to his knowledge that the said people were gathering in a corner of Masjid Al-Kufah and continued offering Tasbih (glorification of Allah) Tahlil (saying: "La ilaha illa Allah [There is no god except Allah]") and Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"). It is said that `Abdullah wore a hooded cloak and went to the Masjid to hear what they were saying, and then he unveiled his face to identify himself as Abu `Abdul-Rahman, then he said, "either you surpassed the knowledge of Muhammad's Sahabah, or you have wrongfully introduced a new innovation, etc."

He also warned him and others against following invented innovations, and incited people to understand and comprehend the rulings and teachings of Din (religion) as the Salaf did. It has been authentically reported that `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) cut off the tree under which the Bay`ah (pledge of allegiance) of Ridwan took place between the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Sahabah, when he saw that people began to visit it frequently. Moreover, when he saw that people used to go collectively to a certain place, he enquired about that matter, and was told that they offer Salah in a place where the Prophet, peace be upon him, used to pray in on his way to perform Hajj. He accordingly got furious and said: Those who preceded you were destroyed due to following the traces of their prophets." End quote.

It is an established fact that the purpose of building a Masjid is gathering people to perform their acts of worship in it, and it is an intended gathering in the Shari`ah (Islamic law). Accordingly, the existence of the seven Masjids in one place do not achieve that purpose; rather this will disperse prayers in a way that contradicts the purposes of Shari`ah. Moreover, such Masjids were apparently not built for gathering people because they are so close to one another; rather for seeking a blessing by offering Salah in them and offering Du`a'. This is an apparent innovation. As for the naming of such Masjids i.e. "The Seven Masjids", there is no historical explanation for that at all, but Ibn Zubalah mentioned Masjid Al-Fath, and he is a liar as defined by the Hadith scholars, and he died at the end of the second Hijri century. Then he was followed by Ibn Shabbah, the historian and he mentioned the same Masjid, but it is known that historians tell narrations without confirming the authenticity of the narrators who said it, as they report what they hear and put the responsibility of its authenticity on those from whom they heard it. This was also the opinion of Al-Hafiz Imam Ibn Jarir in his history set. As for the authenticity of the names of these Masjids or one of them, this is not authentically proven. The Sahabah exerted all their efforts to report the sayings of the Prophet (peace be upon him) as well as his actions and deeds; they also reported everything the Prophet did, even on entering the bathroom. They similarly reported the Prophet's visit to Quba' Masjid every week and his performing Salah over the martyrs of Uhud before his death as if he was bidding them farewell, in addition to other narrations mentioned in the books of Sunnah. As for these Masjids, the Hufaz and the historians have searched into the origin of their names, as the knowledgeable scholar Al-Samhudy (may Allah be merciful with him) said that he did not come across any authentic proofs concerning the names of these Masjids. And he said in another part that he did not find any authentic evidences regarding the names of such Masjids, or the other two Masjids mentioned by Al-Mutarry.

As for shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (May Allah be merciful with him), he said: It is meant here that the Sahabah and the Tabi`un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet) did not glorify any of the traces of the prophet, such as a place he went or offered Salah in. They did not intend to build a Masjid to honor the traces of prophets and righteous people; rather their Imams such as `Umar ibn Al-Khattab and others intentionally forbade offering Salah in a place in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) might have offered Salah in once or twice. He also mentioned that `Umar and the other Rightly-Guided Caliphs; `Uthman and `Aly and the rest of the ten Sahabah promised with Jannah (Paradise) as well as others including Ibn Mas`ud, Mu`az ibn Gabal and 'Ubay ibn Ka`b never intended offering Salah in these places. Then shayk-ul-Islam mentioned that in Madinah there are many Masjids, and offering Salah in them is not singled out with a special virtue except for Masjid Quba' and that the Masjids that were built over graves are nothing but mere innovation introduced into the religion of Islam and practiced by those who have weak knowledge of Islam and the Shari`ah revealed to Muhammad (peace be upon him) as to the perfection of Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah) and worshipping Allah alone as well as blocking all avenues with which Satan tempts mankind.

Al-Shatiby related in his book "Al-e`tisam", that `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) saw some people frequently visiting a certain place in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to offer Salah, so he said, 'Those who came before you were perished due to following the traces of their prophets, and they turned these traces into churches and synagogues. He also said: Ibn Waddah said: 'Malik used to hate every innovated Bid`ah (innovation in religion) even if it was a good one lest people ascribe to the Prophet things he never did or considered lawful.

Al-Shatiby (may Allah be merciful with him) also said: Ibn Kinanah was asked about the traces and remnants left in Al-Madinah and he said: that the most authentic narration refers only to Qiba'

It has been authentically narrated that `Umar (May Allah be pleased with him) cut down the trees frequently visited by people to offer Salah under them lest they should be a source of Fitnah (temptation) for Muslims. `Umar ibn Shabbah mentioned in his book "Akhbar Al-Madinah" and also Al-`ainy in his commentary on Sahih Al-Bukhari the names of many Masjids, but they did not mention the said seven Masjids.

In light of this short elaboration, it is known that the existence of the said seven Masjids or what is even called the Masjid of Al-Fath which was given considerable care by Abu Al-Haiga', the vizier of the 'Ubaydi (Fatimid) state with its known school of thought, were not authentically reported and as these Masjids have recently been frequented by people for the purpose of visiting and attaining blessings by offering Salah in them, and this may lead astray many of the visitors to the Prophet's Mosque, it should be known that going to such Masjids is an apparent Bid`ah (innovation in religion), and keeping them contradicts the objectives of Shari`ah and the teachings revealed to Muhammad of devoting worship to Allah alone. Honoring the prophetic Sunnah demands demolishing such Masjids, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: (He who did any act for which there is no sanction from our behalf, that is to be rejected.)

The said Masjids should be demolished so as to avoid Fitnah and to block the avenues leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and to protect the `Aqidah (creed) of Muslims against any innovations as well as the perfection of Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah/monotheism), and following the example of the the Rightly-Guided Caliph, Amir Al-Mu'minin (Commander of the Believers), `Umar ibn Al-Khattab, (may Allah be pleased with him), who cut down the tree of Al-Hudaybiyah Treaty when he saw that people used to frequent it and he feared that they might be tempted in their religion. He also reminded them that the people who came before them were perished by following the traces of the prophets because the Shari`ah of Allah did not prescribe that.

Second, and based upon the above mentioned facts, it becomes evident that people who frequently visit these seven Masjids and other newly built Masjids solely for the purpose of discerning the ancient traces or to rub its walls and Mihrabs (a place where the Imam stands when leading prayer), and seeking blessing by means of that are committing a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) similar to that which disbelievers used to do with their idols in Jahiliyyah (pre-Islamic time of ignorance). Therefore, every Muslim who wants to protect his religion against any temptation must avoid such misdeeds and advise his Muslim brothers to do the same.

Third, this makes it known that what some weak-minded people do regarding deceiving pilgrims and visitors into visiting these innovated places in return for fees, such as the said seven Masjids, is a Haram (prohibited) deed, and the money taken in return for the misdeed is ill-gotten, and the person who commits such an act should give it up. ﴿And whosoever fears Allâh and keeps his duty to Him, He will make a way for him to get out (from every difficulty).﴾ ﴿And He will provide him from (sources) he never could imagine.﴾

Fatwa no. 19196

Q: A man lives in Makkah Al-Mukarramah and rarely sets out on a journey to Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy Al-Sharif (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah). He claims that offering Salah (Prayer) in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) is better than offering it in Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy. So, how should he leave what is most superior to what is less superior? Is his claim right?

A: undertaking a journey to visit Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy is an act of Sunnah (a commendable act) whose doer will be rewarded but there is no punishment for not doing it. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Do not set out on a journey except to three Masjids \(mosques\): Al-Masjid Al-Haram, this Masjid of mine \(Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy in Madinah\), and Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa \(Al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem\).» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Offering Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy is greatly rewarded. However, offering Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Haram is much better for it was reported by Al-Bukhari and Muslim in their Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «One Salah in my Masjid is a thousand times more excellent than a Salah in any other Masjid, except Al-Masjid Al-Haram.»

To stay in Makkah and leave visiting Madinah is not wrong on the part of the man in question, for he regards it sufficient to do what is most superior rather than what is less superior and to get double rewards. Offering Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Haram is multiplied to a hundred thousand Salahs elsewhere. Shaykh Al-Islam, Ibn Taymiyah said in his Fatawa (vol. 27, P. 325): "The Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) agrees that Al-Masjid Al-Haram is the best Masjid and that offering Salah in it equals a hundred thousand Salahs elsewhere." It is reported by Ahmad, Al-Nasa'y, and others through a good Sanad (chain of narrators) with this wording: «A Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Haram is better than a hundred thousand Salahs elsewhere.» Similarly, Al-Bayhaqy and Ibn Majah reported a similar narration.

Q: Does the Salah offered in Masjid Quba' have more reward than that offered elsewhere except for Al-Haramayn Al-Sharifayn (the Two Sacred Mosques: the Sacred Mosque in Makkah and the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah)? If that is true, what is the evidence for it? Is Masjid Quba' the first Masjid (Mosque) built in Islam as stated in Allah's saying, ﴿Never stand you therein. Verily, the mosque whose foundation was laid from the first day on piety is more worthy that you stand therein (to pray). In it are men who love to clean and to purify themselves. And Allâh loves those who make themselves clean and pure [i.e. who clean their private parts with dust (which has the properties of soap) and water from urine and stools, after answering the call of nature].﴾

(Part No. 5; Page No. 188)

A: it is recommended to visit Masjid Quba' but without having to undertake a journey such as those who are living in Madinah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to go to Masjid Quba' every Saturday on foot or riding. Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them) used to do so too. (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

It is recorded by Al-Tirmidhy and Ibn Majah on the authority of Usayd ibn Hudayr Al-Ansary (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Offering prayer in the Masjid of Quba' is equal in reward to performing Umrah.﴾ It is recorded by Al-Nasa'iy and in Al-Musnad on the authority of Sahl ibn Hunayf that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Whoever purifies himself in his house, then comes to Masjid Quba' and offers a prayer there, will have a reward like that of 'Umrah.﴾ This Hadith is ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Al-Hakim; such a view is supported by Al-Dhahaby. Moreover, this Ayah indicates that Masjid Quba' is the first Masjid whose foundation was laid from the first day on piety.

According to the authentic Hadith, the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah is the Masjid whose foundation was laid on piety. There is no contradiction between the Ayah and this Hadith because if the foundation of Masjid Quba' was laid from the first day on piety, then the Prophet's Masjid is most worthy of this merit.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19307

Q 2: It is said that Al-Shara'i` District in Makkah Al-Mukramah is a few meters outside the Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah), though the inhabitants of this district work and buy their effects from Makkah. Will they receive the same reward as those who offer Salah inside the Haram?

A: al-Shara'i` District is divided into two sections; one inside the Haram and there are signs to show its boundaries.

The other part is outside the Haram. The part that is inside the Haram enjoys the same rulings such as the double reward of offering Salah. However, the part that is outside the Haram has the same rulings of Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) such as the permissibility of assuming Ihram (ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) for the people of Makkah and the like.

Q: We have a Masjid (mosque) that is built from the donations of benevolent people. The person in charge of the Masjid wants to decorate the Mihrab, the ceiling, and the pillars inside the Masjid with Qur'anic verses. I told him that this is not permissible as I heard from some shaykhs. The man's reply was that many Masjids include decorations and Qur'anic verses. Is this permissible or not? We appreciate your advice!

A: It is not permissible to decorate the Masjids or write Qur'anic verses on the walls because this involves exposing the Qur'an to abuse. Besides decoration of Masjids is prohibited and distracts those who see these decorations and writings from their Salah.

Q: I would like to inform you of my Islamic project for which I intend to establish a special factory to export this personal model of a Masjid (mosque) to the whole world, especially to Europe and the USA as The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is the pioneer country in exporting the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). I am really honored that Your Eminence would support me with an opinion, consultation and spiritual support. It is worth mentioning that the girls who manufacture these models are the girls of this country, who graduated from technical departments in institutes and colleges which opened the first specialist center for feminine decoration. The goal of the center is to achieve female participation in economic development and to solve the unemployment problem for many talented female graduates. Our goal is to serve our religion, country and the king; proving that Saudi women can work, benefit others and benefit from others with their abilities, skills and knowledge, while keeping to the teachings of their religion and Arab traditions. I thank you in advance for your support. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: This work is not permissible because of the authentic Hadiths reported concerning the prohibition of decorating Masjids. Moreover, this decoration will distract those who offer Salah (prayer) by engaging themselves in looking and reflecting on these decorations and drawings.

Q: In the Masjid (mosque) of Prince Salman ibn Muhammad Al Sa`ud, we suffer from the narrowness of the place, which does not accommodate the number of those who offer Salah (Prayer) and does not include a place for women to offer Salah therein. During Ramadan, we pitch a large tent for women on a piece of land behind the Masjid, but it is exposed to cats, children, and even rain, not to mention the possibility of women being harmed by anybody. Therefore, we have searched for the owner of the land to buy it from him, but we have not found him. We have put a poster on the land indicating that it is required for buying, but no one has responded to us. We have, thus, thought of erecting a temporary construction from iron that will have no foundation inside the ground to serve as a Musalla (a place for Prayer) for women and to be used for other purposes as well. In case the owner of the land appears, he can choose either to sell it or we will leave it. We have got the approval of the sons of the Prince, but they want a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) concerning the permissibility of this. It is worth mentioning that this land has never been used for anything before and if there is an owner of it or its owner needs it, we would have found him after our thorough search. Please issue a Fatwa in this regard. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: The basic rule states that it is not permissible to use others' properties in any way, whether by constructing buildings on them or by using them for any activity, without the permission of their owner. Therefore, you should search for an alternative other than this land. Moreover, it is not permissible to build a Musalla outside a Masjid and make those offering Salah unable to see their Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). Likewise, it is not permissible for the one who offers Salah in this place to be led by that Imam.

Fatwa no. 20131

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the final Prophet!

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' read the letter submitted to His Eminence the Grand Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) by the Vice President of the Subsidiary Waqf Council in Riyadh and the General Manager of the Ministerial Division in Riyadh, which was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. (7327), dated 24/12/1418 A.H. The letter stated the following:

Please find attached the request submitted by the Municipality of Al-Zulafy to demolish part of the Masjid (mosque) that lies to the east of `Alaqah Garden, whose area is 350 square meters, as it obstructs the road, in return for annexing to the Masjid part of the governmental land located in the south western side of the Masjid, whose area is 1300 square meters, as a compensation.

The Subsidiary Waqf Council in Riyadh issued the decree no. (6/207/M/Q/R), dated 27-28/8/1418 A.H., which recommends acceptance of the suggested exchange after Your Eminence's approval.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 194)

Please advise concerning the permissibility of the decree of the Council so that we may act accordingly.

The Permanent Committee also read the decree issued by the Subsidiary Waqf Council. It states the following:

The Subsidiary Waqf Council in Riyadh considered the request submitted by the Municipality of Al-Zulafy which is described below:

First, the Municipality of Al-Zulafy, in its letter no. (168) dated 28/3/1417 A.H., which was submitted to the manager of Waqf and Masjids in Al-Zulafy, requested to take part of the Masjid whose area is 350 square meters lying east to `Alaqah Garden, as it cuts off the flow of the street, which is 30 square meters wide, so that it is connected to the main street.

Second, in return for this, part of the governmental land located in the south western side of the Masjid, whose area is 1300 square meters, will be annexed to the Masjid as a compensation. An additional area of 638 square meters will be annexed to the Masjid as lodging for the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer).

Third, the part of the Masjid that lies to the east of `Alaqah Garden will be removed only if the Ministry issues a decree to rebuild it.

Fourth, after presenting this case to His Eminence President of the Court of Al-Zulafy Governorate,

His Eminence ruled that there is nothing wrong in removing that part of the Masjid if this proves to be beneficial to the Masjid.

Fifth, manager of Al-Zulafy Waqf said that annexing an area of 1300 square meters to the Masjid, as a compensation, as well as annexing an additional area of 638 square meters, as lodging for the Imam and the Mu'adhin, is in the benefit of the Masjid.

Sixth, bringing the matter before the Shari`ah (Islamic law) board member, he recommended in a letter no. (10), dated 17/6/1418 A.H., that the Masjid should remain intact. It is stated in Kash-shaf Al-Qina`, under the heading "Selling or exchanging endowed land": "It is prohibited to sell endowed land, donate it, or even exchange it for even a better piece of land as per the abovementioned Hadith." The Hadith referred to is the following: \(It is prohibited to sell land that has been endowed, give it away as a gift or bequeath it\) The Municipality should allocate part of the governmental land to the Masjid and another part to provide lodging for the Imam and the Mu'dhin without demolishing any part of the Masjid in return. The Municipality of Al-Zulafy is following up its request since the execution of the project is conditional upon approval of the Ministry of Waqf to allow the land exchange, which will benefit the neighborhood in particular and the entire Municipality in general.

Seventh, the land, on which the Masjid is built, is owned by the Ministry of Waqf as per bond no. (3/154), which was signed on 19/8/1404 A.H. After reviewing and exchanging views over the issue in question, the Council reached a decision approving the land exchange provided that further permission is granted from His Eminence the Grand Mufti of the Kingdom. The relevant decree of the whole case shall be referred to the Supreme Council of Waqf, as per instructions set forth in Paragraph (1), Article (6) of the system applied by the Supreme Council of Waqf.

After the Permanent Committee examined the inquiry, it issued a Fatwa recommending that the Masjid should remain intact. No part of the Masjid should be demolished until a new Masjid is constructed over the neighboring governmental land. The remaining area on which the current Masjid is located will be part of the new Masjid after it is demolished.

Q: We, the Muslim community in Aksil city, wanted to engage in Islamic activities. We applied to the French authorities to grant us a piece of land to build a Masjid (mosque).

(Part No. 5; Page No. 197)

The authorities took a long time to respond to us, so we bought a villa and allocated it for performing Salah. When the authorities gave us a piece of land, we did not have enough money to build the Masjid. We are keen to follow the teachings of the Qur'an and Sunnah and know the ruling on all our actions according to Shari`ah. My question is: Is it permissible to sell the villa and use its value to build the Masjid?

A: There is nothing wrong with selling a villa and using its value to build the Masjid if you can dispense with it. If not, you can keep using this villa for performing Salah until you can afford to build the Masjid or find a Muslim donor to fund it.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Praise be to Allah, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has looked into the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence the General Mufti from the Judge of Al-Bakiriyyah Court, Dr. `Abdullah ibn `Ali Al-Dakhil, no. 747 on

8/5/1419 A.H. referred to the Permanent Committee from the General Secretariat to the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 2998 dated 11/5/1419 A.H. It includes the decision on the request submitted to the chief of municipality of Al-Bakiriyyah about the possibility of benefiting from the municipal land on which a Masjid (mosque) is built, after demolishing it, as it is no longer used by the municipality and no one offers Salah (Prayer) in it currently.

The Permanent Committee studied the request and looked into the report attached to it, which was prepared by the committee formed to look into the issue of the Masjid in question. The committee is comprised of a representative of Al-Bakiriyyah Court, `Abdul `Aziz Al-Muhammad Al-Luhaydan, representative of the Endowments Department, `Abdullah Al-Muhammad Al-Luhaydan, a representative of the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV), Hamad ibn Sulayman Al-Rajhy, and a representative of the Municipal Authority of Al-Bakiriyyah, `Abdul `Aziz Al-Salih Al-Luhaydan.

The report reads as follows: Based on the letter of His Eminence, Judge of Al-Bakiriyyah Court no. 467/1 on 13/3/1419 A.H. based on the letter from the General Mufti of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and the Chairman of the Council of Senior Scholars, and the Department of Scholarly Research, Ifta', Daw`ah, and Guidance no 2/1345 on 4/3/1419 A.H. with regard to forming a Committee including the legal court, the Endowments Department, the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV), and the municipality to consider the situation of the mentioned Masjid, the following is reached:

- 1- The Masjid is built for the employees in the municipality and is inside the municipal buildings.
- 2- The Masjid does not have doors overlooking the street.
- 3-Only the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer is offered in it until Al-Hadithy Mosque was built adjacent to it.
- 4- Salah has not been offered in it for a year and a half now, since the other Masjid has been built.
- 5- The adjacent Masjid is less than 40 meters away from it.

After studying the request, the Permanent Committee issued a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) that states there is no harm in the municipality benefiting from the mentioned Masjid because the Masjid is not a public Endowment. In fact, it is a property of the municipality and only the Zhuhr Prayer was being offered in it. It has been a year and a half now since any one has offered Salah in it because people offer Salah in the newly built Masjid that is close to the municipality.

Fatwa no. 15570

Praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet,

to commence:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' looked into the request for Fatwa submitted to his Eminence the general Mufti from his Eminence deputy of the emirate of `Asir no. 10557 dated 18/2/1413 A.H. from the general secretariat of Council of Senior Scholars no. 930 dated 25/2/1413 A.H. in which his Eminence asks for a Fatwa for demolishing two Masjids (mosques) from the Masjids built close to each other in Bishah. A report is enclosed to his Eminence letter; it is the report of a Committee formed to look into the issue of the mentioned Masjids. It reads as follows:

All of us the representatives of the court of Bishah, the municipality, the Endowments, and the police have gone to the mentioned place and found that there are three Masjids built very close to each other according to the following:

1- The Masjid that is built by (T.A.D) is affiliated to the Endowments; it is built on the land granted to the Endowments in deed no. 17 dated 22/2/1412 A.H. It is affiliated to the Ministry of Endowments.

2- There are two other Masjids close to the first Masjid: the first is built on a piece of land owned by (A.R); the general asphalted road that leads to Al-Hazimy separates it from the Masjid, and the second is built with zinc on a piece of land belonging to the municipality. It is 100 meters away from the Masjid that is affiliated to the Endowments.

3- There is a small Masjid built on a piece of land owned by (M.M.M); it is 500 meters away from these Masjids.

The decree of the Committee:

The decree of the Committee is that the Masjid built by the people on a piece of land belonging to the municipality has to be demolished because it is very close to the Masjid affiliated to the Endowment. The person called (A.R.) should close and demolish the Masjid that is built on his piece of land because it is very close to the house of the mentioned person. The Masjid built on the land owned by Munays should be left as it is because it is far from the Masjid affiliated to the Endowments and serves the people of a separate alley. The people in the neighboring area should be informed that they have to offer Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid that is affiliated to the Endowments which is built by (T.A.D) to prevent division. May Allah grant us success!

Here is also the decree of his Eminence Judge of the supreme court in Bishah in his letter addressed to the emirate of Bishah no. 80/1 dated 4/1/1413 A.H. It reads as follows: We hereby inform you that since there is a Masjid with the deed no. 17 in 22/2/1412 A.H. and since it is built by the person called (T.A), it should remain as it is. As for the two Masjids that are separated by 100 meters i.e., the Masjid built on the land of Abdul-Rahman ibn Rakban and the other Masjid that is built on the land belonging to the municipality, both should be demolished. The people who offer Salah there should be asked to offer Salah in the fourth Masjid that is affiliated to the Endowments; because it is not permissible to build a Masjid close to another Masjid unless this is necessary. As for the Masjid that is built on the land owned by (M.M.M), since it is far from the old Masjid, it should stay as it is for people to offer Salah in it as long as the distance separating the two Masjids is 500 meters. We hope you will consider the issue and address those who it may concern. May Allah protect you.

After examining the request for Fatwa, the Committee gave a Fatwa with their acceptance of the decree of the committee.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

We have an old Masjid (mosque) in our village (it was built six years ago) where we offer the five daily Prayers. There are no toilets or water in that Masjid which makes some people go back without offering Salah in the Masjid because of the lack of water. Some benevolent people managed to build another Masjid with toilets and plenty of water, but that is not the problem. The problem is that some people say that the money used for building the Masjid is unlawful money, while other people say it is lawful and its donor is from another village. People differed on the permissibility of offering Salah in it. Is this Makruh (reprehensible)? We appreciate your advice, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: There is no harm in building a new Masjid in the village from the money donated

Fatwa no. 15572

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed a question submitted to His Eminence the Mufty, which was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with no. 5065 on 7/10/1413 A.H. The questioner requested considering the remains of the Masjid (mosque) located in the backyard of his home in Uhud Rufaydah.

The request was referred to His Eminence, Judge of Uhud Rufaydah, in letter no. 2/2405 on 22/8/1413 A.H. to form a committee consisting of the Court, the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV), and the Ministry of Waqfs (Endowments). The formed committee is to consider the location of the said Masjid and to prepare a detailed report in this regard. The reply came back in letter no. 1702 on 20/9/1413 A.H. It was accompanied by a report from the committee that examined the location of the said Masjid. It reads as follows: In reply to the request of a citizen in Al-Darb Village, who has remains of a Masjid in the backyard of his home, you ordered that a committee consisting of the Ministry of Waqfs, the Court, and the CPVPV be formed to consider the said location. The committee has been formed and has examined the location on 16/9/1413 A.H. It hardly found any visible remains of the said Masjid. It is fifteen meters long from east to west and eight meters wide from north to south. It is approximately fifty meters away from the Masjid where the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and congregational Salah (Prayer) are performed although anyone who sits beside the remains of the Masjid in question hears the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) when it is pronounced in the nearby Masjid. It is futile to utilize it at present and in the future. Moreover, it endangers the owner of the home. It was constructed in a place where a sense of security was absent among people.

After studying the question, the Committee answered that the land of the Masjid should be estimated by two fair experienced persons and the owner of the home is to pay the price and own the land. The money is to be spent by His Eminence, the Judge, in constructing or rebuilding some Masjids, as the report entails that the Masjid in question is futile since there is another Masjid nearby.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 205)

Fatwa no. 17610

Q: I built a small Masjid (mosque) with an area of (8 x 7), with a bathroom annexed to it in a part of the wall of my house. It has a door that leads to the street. I have been offering Salah (Prayer) in it with my neighbors for twelve years. A large Masjid was built by his royal highness the Crown Prince `Abdullah ibn `Abdul-`Aziz Al-Su`ud, may Allah reward him and those who helped him do this. The new Masjid is 500 meters away from our Masjid. My children and I now offer Salah in the small Masjid on our own, as all our neighbors left us and went to offer Salah in the new Masjid, being closer to their houses. I left the small Masjid and went to offer Salah in the new one seeking the reward of congregational Salah.

First, is it permissible for me to desert my Masjid and offer Salah in the new Masjid seeking the reward of congregational Salah, or should we offer Salah in the old Masjid?

Second, is it permissible to demolish the small Masjid and make use of its land?

Please advise and give me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) concerning this issue, may Allah reward you, protect you and make your end a good one. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

The request was referred to His Eminence the Head of the Supreme Court in Khamis Mushait in letter no. (2/2734), dated 28/10/1415 A.H., and the reply was given in letter no. (162), dated 8/1/1416 A.H., attached therewith is the report of the committee established to consider the situation of the mentioned Masjid. The letter stated the following:

In reference to your letter no. (7/739), dated 12/11/1415 A.H., based on the letter of the Grand Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and Head of the Council of Senior Scholars and the Department of Scholarly Research and Ifta', His Eminence Shaykh `Abdul-`Aziz ibn `Abdullah ibn Baz, no. (10738), dated 4/11/1415 A.H., which included the recommendation to form an inspection committee and another committee from the Ministry of Awqaf (Endowments) and Affairs of Masjids, to inspect two Masjids that lie in Al-`Ujayr village in Tendahah, one of which is old and small, and the other is new and large, and advise whether it is better to keep the old Masjid or demolish it and go to the new one instead.

Please be advised that both the old and the new Masjids were inspected, and it was found that Y.A.Y.D. dedicated a room in his house to be a Masjid that is built in the backyard that leads to the street.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 207)

Its area is (6 x 7 = 42 meters). The mentioned man and his neighbors used to offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers congregationally in it. Since the Crown Prince has built a large Masjid that is three meters away from this one, we recommend that it is better to replace the old Masjid with the new one, as it is large, made of concrete, established in a convenient place and it has a car park. This is our opinion, so please advise. Salam (Islamic greeting of peace).

According to what has been previously mentioned, the Permanent Committee for Ifta' decided that the mentioned place is considered an endowed Masjid, as its door leads to the street so that all the Muslims can offer Salah in it. Thus, it is judged according to the rulings of Waqf as decided by the late scholars.

Due to the reasons mentioned above, and due to the closeness of the new Masjid from him, the Waqf administration concerned with Masjids should estimate its value so that the house owner pays it, and it is spent in furnishing or building another Masjid. Thus, the house owner becomes free to use the land of the Masjid as he likes, as he will become its owner.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19470

Q 2: A man paid 563 Riyals as a contribution for building a Masjid (mosque), but this Masjid was not built. Is it permissible to spend this sum in another charitable project, bearing in mind that the payer of that amount can not be identified?

A: This amount should be spent as specified by the payer; it is not permissible to spend it in any other way. It should be spent on covering the needs of any Masjid in order to carry out the intention of the donor.

Q: I raised funds to build a Masjid (mosque) in the village. The building of the Masjid was constructed, and then charitable people donated to furnish it, as the remaining funds were not enough. Now the rest of the donations are still with me.

Is it permissible for me to spend them in building a fence around the Musalla (a place for Prayer) of the Two `Eid Prayers and the village cemetery?

Is it permissible to spend them in buying air conditioners and furnishing other Masjids in the village?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 209)

Is it permissible to spend them as support for the married, the needy and the poor in the village, with the intention of giving the reward to the donors? Given that some of them are residents of the village and others are not.

A: It is permissible for you to spend the rest of the money raised for furnishing the Masjid in furnishing another Masjid if the first one does not need anything anymore. However, it is impermissible to spend the money on anything else other than furnishing Masjids, as this is considered spending it in a way other than the donors intended.

Q: Over four years ago, the citizens of this town donated a sum of money to build a Masjid (mosque). After that, a charitable society covered the building costs estimated at four million Riyals. The money collected from people was kept with us. We are in a dire need to expand another Masjid. On Fridays many people have to pray outside the Masjid and suffer the heat of the sun because the space inside is not big enough. Is it permissible to use this sum for expanding this Masjid? We hope that your Eminence will enlighten us.

A: You may, if possible, ask the donors' permission to use their donations for maintaining a different Masjid. If you cannot ask their permission, spending this sum on restoring another Masjid will be recommended as this does not go against the donor's objective. We ask Allah to reward everyone for this act.

Q: We refer to your Eminence a request for Fatwa submitted by a citizen who asks about a Masjid he built close to his house with the area of 24 square meters. During the course of time there was urban development and neighbors increased. People in the neighborhood agreed to build a bigger Masjid in the middle of the suburb instead of the old Masjid. is it permissible for him to pull the old Masjid down and use it for another purpose other than Salah?

A: He has to spend the value of the small old Masjid on building another Masjid in a place that needs a new Masjid or in the purpose of the other new Masjid.

Fatwa no. 15331

Q: There is an old, deserted Masjid (mosque) among their possessions. It was previously replaced with a piece of land they owned, as it was not suitable for use.

The request was referred to His Eminence the Judge of Al-Juwah Court in the letter no. (2/1037), dated 21/4/1412 A.H., and the reply was given in the letter no. (13), dated 4/1/1413 A.H., attached therewith a report about the mentioned Masjid. It stated the following:

As a court judge and Waqf (endowments) supervisor, please be advised of the following:

The mentioned Masjid was built by the father of the summoned in his own land, and he endowed it to offer Salah (Prayer) by force of document no. (15) in 16/8/1397 A.H. In 1405 A.H., the Waqf Ministry wanted to demolish it and rebuild it as a 15 x 15 meters Masjid. However, it was found that the place of the Masjid was not suitable for this project, so a Masjid with the mentioned area was constructed in the middle of the district on a piece of land that was 120 meters away from the mentioned Masjid. The people of the village began to offer Salah in the new Masjid, and the old one became deserted. Being made of stone and its roof made of wood, and being affected by rainfall, the roof fell, part of the southern wall was demolished and only the columns are left. It is now unsuitable to offer Salah in. The mentioned Masjid lies in the north eastern terminal part of the summoned late father's properties, and its door leads to a narrow corridor that is not more than two meters wide that is also among the late father's property. There is no need for it in the meantime. This is what we saw ourselves. Please advise concerning what you see suitable. May Allah protect you.

A: You should repair the mentioned Masjid or spend the money in furnishing another one if the new Masjid does not need it.

Fatwa no. 16459

Q: In our city, there is a shrine ascribed to a righteous man called Sayyid Al-Shaykh. There are boxes in this shrine in which visitors who come from all over Algeria, even from neighboring countries, to visit this tomb put money and jewels. At the end of every year, these boxes are opened. A part of this money is distributed to the seven Masjids (mosques) of our city to be used to complete the buildings of some of these Masjids or to purchase the requirements of others that are already built. It should be noted that the money is distributed among all the Masjids whereas the other costs that could not be fulfilled by this money are gathered from individuals. What is the ruling on building Masjids using this money? What is the ruling on offering Salah (Prayer) in them?

A: constructing buildings on graves and using them as Masjids is not permissible. It is one of the means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). The Prophet (peace be upon him) cursed those who did so and said that they are among the worst of people. in addition, putting money in the boxes of shrines as a kind of donation is an act of major Shirk, for donation is an act of worship that should be dedicated to Allah Alone. As for the money that is collected from these boxes from the visitors, it is Haram (prohibited) and those visitors should be prevented from doing so and should be informed that this is a kind of major Shirk. However, the money already collected can be spent on the poor and needy but it is not permissible to spend them on Masjids for they are ill-gotten gains that Masjids should be purified from.

Q 1: A man who is strongly suspected of practicing sorcery donated some of his money for building a Masjid. When people asked him about the source of that money, he said that it was his pension that he dedicated for building the concerned Masjid. My question now is whether it is permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in such a Masjid?

A: If the reality is as what is mentioned in the question, we hope that practicing `Ibadah (worship) in the concerned Masjid is permissible and that the Salah which is offered in it is valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

The first question of Fatwa no. 19008

Q 1: In our village, there are two nearby Masjids (mosques). The distance between them is less than 200 meters. This resulted in sedition and people split into two groups. Someone suggested building a Masjid in the middle of the village. Actually, a Fatwa was given to this effect and people started to build it. The Masjid consists of a ground floor containing toilets and an apartment for the Qur'an tutor and an upper floor containing prayer spaces for men and women.

Upon finishing the upper floor, some of the seekers of knowledge told us that it is not permissible to make a lodging under the Masjid, and that we should remove it. You should bear in mind that this lodging is dedicated for public interest and its building has been completed. It can not be used except for this purpose. We hope Your Eminence can resolve this problem, bearing in mind that many Masjids have lodgings underneath.

A: There is no problem in having a lodging under the Masjid for the tutor or the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer), for this is considered of the charitable utilities that the Masjid needs.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet and his family and Companions!

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the question submitted to His Eminence, the Mufty, from His Excellency, General Head of Authorities, in letter no. (1/195) dated 4/7/1411 A.H. It was referred to the Permanent Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with no. 3137 on 11/7/1411 A.H. His Excellency had a question attached to his letter which reads as follows:

I refer to Your Eminence the question submitted by the representative in charge of the General Presidency of the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV) in Makkah with no. (2/557) on 21/6/1411 A.H. It brings to notice that there is a headquarters of the National Bank in the building, above which there is a Masjid (mosque). Since there is a pressing need for a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), I present it to Your Eminence for study to guide us to the correct action. May Allah safeguard and support you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

After studying the question, the Committee answered that it is permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in a Masjid built above a bank, for we know of no proof from Shari`ah (Islamic law) that prohibits this.

Fatwa no. 19462

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the final Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the letter submitted to His Eminence, the Mufty, from the General Manager of the office of the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Da`wah, and Guidance in Riyadh, `Abdullah ibn Muflih Al-Hamid. It was forwarded to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with no. 974 on 11/2/1418 A.H. The letter reads as follows:

I refer to Your Eminence the request of a citizen concerning establishing a Masjid (mosque) on the land donated by him in the Industrial Zone. The donor will bear all the costs of building. However, he says that the Masjid will be on the first floor, and that the ground floor will be used for establishing shops for him, and the second floor will be a lodging for the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer). We hope Your Eminence could point out your opinion in this regard.

The request was accompanied by the letter of the donor which reads as follows:

I own the piece of land no. 20 located in the Industrial Zone by the end of Al-Jam`iyyah St. to the east. It overlooks `Ishrin St. at the end of the Industrial Zone eastwards. This area is crowded with stores and workshops. I have looked for a piece of land designated as a Masjid in this area, but I have found none. At the present time, there is no Masjid in this area in which Salah (Prayer) can be offered. I, thus, want to build a Masjid on this land, which is now rented for shops and workshops. I want to build a Masjid on the first floor and two apartments for the Imam and Mu'adhin. The ground floor is for shops. I am ready to bear all the costs required for building the Masjid as soon as possible. May Allah make it beneficial for Muslims! May Allah grant you success and whoever contributes to this charitable project!

Having studied the request, the Committee answered that if the case is as mentioned that the donor owns the said land, which is not originally a Waqf (endowment) for a Masjid, there is no harm in building a Masjid on the first floor and designating the ground floor for shops whose income will return to the donor and the second floor for apartments for the Imam and the Mu'adhin as the donor so intends. Building a Masjid in this crowded area serves the interest of Muslims who live in this area and have no other Masjid to offer Salah therein. However, the way up to the Masjid must be facilitated to spare the people, particularly the old ones, the pain when going up to it. May Allah reward the donor with the best because of this charitable project and increase his good deeds on the Day of Resurrection.

Q: We want to submit an application for buying a piece of land under my name, as I will contribute some money towards its price as well as some benevolent men who will also contribute to its price. The area of the land is small as it amounts to 150 square meters. We will, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) build a Masjid that consists of two floors; the first will be for men and the second for women. Furthermore, the Masjid is located in a low-class area in which there are many schools and other old houses, and more Masjids can be built in this area as it exists near a highway which is 15 meters wide, and another subsidiary road which is 7,30 meters wide. Is it permissible, Your Eminence, to build other floors above the two floors allocated for the Masjid, and make use of them as apartments offered for rent? The Masjid consists of only two floors, and I want to build another three or four floors to use them as apartments offered for rent, given that the piece of land will be registered under my name and some benevolent people will donate the rest of the expenses concerning paying the price of the land and building the Masjid, and you should note that such Masjids have spread abundantly in countries, such as Egypt, Sudan and others, is this permissible? Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: The land bought for the purpose of establishing a Masjid over it, is endowed to the Masjid, and even the space above the Masjid is within its parameters and accordingly it is impermissible to use it in other activities related to investment; but you may build another floor or more if the first two floors do not accommodate the people any more. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: I built a house and I resolved, before constructing it, to build a Masjid (Mosque) under the house. The construction works were done, the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah) was defined and the toilets of the Masjid were also built, in addition to the carpentry and nothing was left except for the paint work. The Masjid adopted its Islamic shape, but I heard from some people that it is impermissible to build a Masjid under a house, and therefore I stopped all the construction activities and closed the Masjid five years ago until I can discern the truth in this regard. What is Your Eminence's opinion regarding building a Masjid under the house, bearing in mind that there are other small Masjids that were built beside it during that period, and they are now many? Kindly give me the legal Fatwa in this regard. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: There is no impediment to build a Masjid under the house, if the original construction was designed that way, or a space under the house was later allocated to be a Masjid. However, if a house is planned to be built over an established Masjid, then this is impermissible because the space above the Masjid falls under its boundaries and is endowed to it.

Q: We have in our village, in the Arab republic of Egypt, six Masjids (Mosques) located in different parts of the village. Due to the fact that I own a piece of land that is 700 meters away from the nearest two Masjids, and that there are almost one thousand five hundred Muslims living in the districts around this piece of land, I want to build a house over this land and single out the ground floor to be a Masjid, while the second and the above floors will be my private house or apartments for rent.

My question is: Is it permissible for me to build a private house to live in, or for rent, above the Masjid? Given that the Masjid contains many copies of the Mus-haf (Arabic Qur'an) as well as books of Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence) and Hadith.

A: If this land was not a Waqf (endowment) for the Masjid, and you own it, then there is no impediment to build a house with two floors or more and make the ground floor a Masjid for the Muslims in the neighborhood while the second and above floors will be your private house or offered for rent, because you intended to build the house and the Masjid in that way and for the benefit of the

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the query sent to His Eminence the Mufty from His Excellency the minister of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Da`wah, and Guidance and head of the Supreme Council for Endowments. The query no. (1126/4/5), dated 14/4/1421 A.H., was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars on 23/4/1421 A.H. with no. (2459). His Excellency said in the query:

Every now and then, the branches of the ministry submit many proposals concerning the investment of parts of `Eid Musallas (places for Prayer) for a number of reasons. These reasons include the following:

- 1. Some Musallas are located in the middle of crowded areas and are no longer used as they are replaced with new and wide Musallas established in the outskirts of residential areas.
- 2. Some of these Musallas have large spaces that exceed the number of persons who come to perform Salah (Prayer) there. Furthermore, the Musallas are not used during the rest of the year.
- 3. The ministry seeks to find a fixed income that can be spent on the Musallas through making use of its unused parts.

Similarly, the Masjids (mosques) and the Musallas need a fixed income to be used in maintaining them. I hope you will examine the issue and give us your opinion on the following:

- 1. the permissibility of investing an area, no more than 10% of the lands of the Musallas, that is not used by the persons who perform Salah. The income earned can be used in meeting the needs of the Musallas and maintaining other Masjids.
- 2. The permissibility of dedicating parts of the Musallas to establish a new Masjid and its utilities.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 225)

May Allah grant you success to do what pleases Him!

Having discussed the query, the Committee replies that performing the Two `Eid Prayers and Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain) at Musallas is an old practice observed from the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him) until the present day. The Musallas established for this purpose in these countries were popular in the past and the present. Thus, Muslims must preserve and guard them, and they are not to take any part of them to build a Masjid or anything else thereon, because their land is a Waqf (endowment) dedicated for offering Salah. Every Muslim anywhere and in this country in particular should boast of keeping this Islamic ritual that has been inherited from the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and is practiced until the present day.

Fatwa no. 20454

All Praise is due to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet. To commence:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has perused the letter sent to his Eminence, the general Mufti, from his Eminence, the director of the Call and Guidance Center in Jeddah no. 267/9/20/G which was referred to the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars no.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 226)

3348 on 24/5/1419 A.H. The questioner presented the following question:

Your Eminence, Shaykh `Abdul `Aziz ibn `Abdullah ibn Baz, the general Mufti of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, may Allah protect you! Peace be with you:

The person in charge of Awqaf (Endowments) and mosques in Jeddah came to us and brought a form and design of a Masjid (mosque) affiliated to Al Salama hospital in Jeddah. The man in charge asked for a Fatwa concerning the shape of the Masjid, which is designated in the shape of the honorable word (Allah) before starting to construct it. So, we ask Your Eminence to issue us a Fatwa in this regard. We sent you the form and design of the Masjid along with the letter. May Allah keep you in good health and peace of mind! We ask Him to benefit us by your knowledge. May Allah's peace and blessings be with you!

After the Committee has studied the question, its answer is as follows: designating and constructing a Masjid in the shape of the honorable word (Allah) in a way that the letters of the word will form the frontage and roof of the Masjid is not permissible and it is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) and a kind of immoderation in religion which is not permitted by Allah or His Messenger (peace be upon him). It also does not befit the exalted status of the Divine Names. We know that the Names and Attributes of Allah were revealed in His glorious book and explained by Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) in his purified Sunnah. Therefore, the people believe in them, praise Allah with them and attribute them to Allah in a way that suits His Majesty. We are ordered to believe in what these Attributes and Names indicate of meanings and rulings without Tahrif (distortion of the meaning), Takyif (questioning Allah's Attributes), Tamthil (likening Allah's Attributes to those of His Creation) or Ta`til (denial of Allah's Attributes). But using the Names of Allah as an aesthetic form is a deviation from the purpose for which these Names were revealed and contradicts the guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him), his Sahabah (companions) and the Salaf (righteous predecessors) who did not do so. In addition, this leads to exposing the Names of Allah to humiliation with time, such as what children and ignorant people do with the walls of buildings. This also may bring to the sense of the common people that Allah is represented in this body or that Allah's worship is restricted to this Masjid only, not to mention the evil consequences of exaggerating the status of this Masjid and thinking that it has a virtue over other Masjids for its unique designation to the extent that people may intend it for getting blessings, as well as other things which contradicts with Allah's Shari`ah. Therefore, you should abandon the designation of the Masjid in this way and the executive authority responsible for constructing this Masjid should build it in the normal way without affectation or immoderation.

Fatwa no. 18506

Q: We are the inhabitants of Sadrid Banu `Amr Valley, Al-Nimmas Governorate. have a large Masjid (mosque) which is currently under construction. Because of the uneven surface of the land on which the Masjid is constructed, we have coordinated with the engineering office to use the depression in the land in constructing lodgings for the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer), toilets, and chambers for washing and enshrouding the dead, so that the roof of these utilities will be on the same level of the floor of the Masjid.

Currently, we are working on this basis. However, some Muslim brothers dislike seeing lodgings and toilets under the Masjid and others maintain that this is even not permissible.

Now, is it permissible to allocate this depression for the purpose stated in the design accredited by the Endowments Office in `Asir Directorate, that is, as lodgings for the Imam and the Mu'adhin, toilets, chambers for washing and enshrouding the dead, and a warehouse? Please advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the reality is as mentioned in the question, there is nothing wrong with allocating this depression for the mentioned purpose, that is, for building lodgings for the Imam and the Mu'adhin, toilets, and chambers for washing and enshrouding the dead in order to level the roof of these utilities with

All Praise is due to Allah, Alone. May peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has studied what was referred to the General Mufty by His Eminence the undersecretary of Hajj and Awqaf (endowments) for the Masjids (mosque) affairs No. (10157/7), dated (9/8/1413 A.H.), which was referred to the Committee of General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars No. (4239), dated 16/8/1413 A.H. His Eminence asked to consider the request of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of Masjid `Uthman ibn `Affan in Al-Shifa' in Riyadh for building a home for the Imam and the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) on part of the remaining grounds after building the Masjid. A draft site plan for the Masjid and the remaining land is attached to the letter of His Eminence. The request has been referred to the committee of Masjids in the department of Scientific Research and Ifta' to survey the grounds and submit a report. The Committee examined the land and submitted the following report: We set out on Thursday

10/11/1414 AH to the Masjid of `Uthman ibn `Affan in Al-Shifa' and observed the following:

1- The mentioned Masjid is not a Masjid Jami` (where Friday prayers are performed) and currently is sufficient for those who offer Salah there.

2 - The square area of the Masjid was not built exactly on the original four directions where the edge of the Masjid faces the direction of the Qiblah, so there is a huge triangular area in the southern side from which the Masjid can not be expanded without ruining another angle. It is suitable for establishing a home for the Imam and the Mu'adhin, for no home is there now.

After the Committee had studied the case, it gave its approval for building a home for the Imam and the Mu'adhin in the triangular part from which the Masjid can not be expanded.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 231)

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has looked into the request for Fatwa submitted to His Eminence, the general Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the general manager of the branch of the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Da`wah and Guidance with the letter no. (S/6/6792), dated, 5 Jumada Awal, 1417 A.H., and referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. (2532), dated 11 Jumada Awal, 1417 A.H. The question submitted to His Eminence reads as follows: Enclosed are the papers related to the application of the citizen (A. A. Q) that includes the ratification on building an abode for the Imam and Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) of Al-Ziny Masjid (Mosque) in Al-`Aziziyyah on the land which has previously been given up for the benefit of enlarging the said Masjid. However, the said land could not be made use of for that purpose due to the deviance of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah). Your Eminence, I hope that you would inform us of the permissibility of exploiting such land for building a house for the Imam and Mu'adhin of the said Masjid, as they have none in the present time.

After examining the said request, the Committee answered as follows:

If the reality is as you have mentioned regarding the difficulty of enlarging the Masjid on the said land, due to the deviance of its Qiblah, and that the person who donated the land as Waqf (endowment) expressed his consent on making use of the said land as a house for the Imam and the Mu'adhin of the Masjid instead of enlarging the Masjid, there is no impediment in that regard.

Fatwa no. 20299

Q: We are a group of worshippers at a Masjid (Mosque) where there is a toilet inside the building of the Masjid that is almost adjacent to the Musalla (the place for prayer) and is only separated by a wall. As a result, those who enter the toilet to relieve themselves face in the direction of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah) when doing so. Your Eminence, we would like you to give us the legal opinion on whether there is any objection to keeping it this way. What do you advise in this regard? Kindly give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) for the benefit of all. May Allah reward you!

A: The toilets should be separated by a wall to be located outside the Masjid. Thereafter, it does not matter which direction it is adjacent to in the Masjid. As for facing the direction of the Qiblah when being in the toilet, there is no harm in that, as it is inside the building of the Masjid according to the soundest opinion of the scholars. It has been authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in a Hadith narrated by Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both), which indicates the permissibility of facing the direction of Qiblah or turning one's back towards it while urinating or defecating, as long as the toilet is inside the building.

Q: In Al-Marwah district, north of Jeddah, there is a Masjid (mosque) under construction. it is built in the latest architectural style. However, a residence for the imam and Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) is built in its front. The residence has four bathrooms in the direction of Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah). What is the ruling on performing Salah while facing the bathrooms in the front of the Masjid? Kindly, take a look at the attached sketch and tell us your opinion. May Allah protect and support you!

A: The presence of the residence containing bathrooms in the direction of the Masjid's Qiblah can not be an impediment for performing Salah in this Masjid. There is nothing wrong with facing this residence that has bathrooms as long as it is separated from the Masjid and causes no harm; such as bad smells or water leakage to the Masjid. There is no Shar`y (Islamically lawful) evidence that prohibits this act.

Q 1: Is the library of a Masjid (mosque) considered part of the Masjid even though it is not inside the main Prayer hall? is the courtyard of the Masjid regarded as part of it? in other words, does it entail the rulings of Masjids, such as the desirability of offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque), the prohibition of selling inside it, and so on?

A: All that is inside the premises of a Masjid, such as its courtyard or library, is part of it and entails its rulings. Nevertheless, it is not permissible for a person to offer Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid's courtyard or library and abandon performing the congregational Salah among the rows behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer).

Q: I am an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in one of the Masjids (Mosques) in Buraydah which is always crowded with worshippers due to its location on a main road and the markets spreading around it. Thirty years ago when this Masjid was established, and before the increase of population, it was able to accommodate everyone in the neighborhood and it had three toilets and a place for performing Wudu' (ablution) in its southeastern corner. However, due to this increase in the population, it can no longer accommodate all the worshippers and the same applies to the three toilets. This forced some people to go to nearby Masjids lest they should miss the Salah (Prayer) while waiting to perform Wudu'. The inability of some to enter the insufficient number of toilets causes them to miss some Rak`ahs (units of prayer), let alone Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer). Furthermore, passers-by no longer enter the Masjid to offer Salah, as they are aware of the inadequate facilities. These conditions have created an annoyance for the people of the neighborhood and the nearby shop owners who cannot find a proper place to offer Wudu'. In addition, it has made people reluctant to offer Salah there anymore.

My question is: Is it permissible for me as the Imam of that Masjid to ask for the building of new toilets in its eastern corner, given that this part of the Masjid is not fully utilized because worshippers prefer to offer Salah inside and not outside the Masjid, whether in Summer or Winter. The toilets to be constructed in the eastern part will only occupy an area of (4 × 15 M) in a way that will not narrow the space of the eastern part; rather, it will benefit worshippers and the person who donated the land as Waqf (endowment). Furthermore, I put to your knowledge that all the expenses of building these facilities will be donated by a benevolent person who has taken the responsibility upon himself to build them in a proper way.

The letter was referred to His Excellency the President of the Courts of Buraydah with no. 1525M1, on 24/4/1419 A.H. to form a committee to examine the conditions of the said Masjid and write a detailed report concerning the justification for allocating a part of the land upon which the Masjid is built for building new toilets. The answer was delivered in letter no. 2545/1, on 21/6/1419 A.H. and was attached to the report of the deciding committee concerning the said Masjid. It states:

Referring to Your explanation no. 1/2491, on 27/4/1419 A.H. on the letter of the General Mufty of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, no. 1/1525, on 24/4/1419 A.H. including the inquiry of the Imam of Al-`Ishab Masjid in Buraydah, and His Eminence's request to form a committee of two experts in addition to a representative from the Ministry of Endowments to examine the Masjid, and file a deciding report in this regard, etc. In light of the above-mentioned recommendations, the concerned committee accompanied by an engineer appointed by the court as well as a representative from the court and two experts, `Abdul-`Aziz ibn `Abdul-Rahman Al-Khudir and Ibrahim ibn `Abdul-`Aziz Al-Khudir and according to their examination of the said Masjid,

it was found that the Masjid really is in need of new toilets, and due to the vast space of the eastern corner of the Masjid which is 16×16 M, it has been unanimously agreed by all the persons concerned that taking advantage of the eastern corner of the Masjid which faces Al-Sina`ah street for the building of ten toilets with external dimensions of 4.30×11.65 M and in accordance with the parameters and the design attached, would achieve considerable benefit for the Masjid and the owner of the Waqf.

After examining the inquiry submitted, the Committee issued a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding the permissibility of building the new facilities in the eastern corner of Al-`Ishab Masjid in Buraydah based on the availability of facts required to take this step.

Q: The society for teaching the Glorious Qur'an in Jubail Industrial City, in the eastern district, printed an annual calendar including Salah (Prayer) times during the year. This calendar is attached to a big sheet, of which I submitted a copy with the question. These sheets include pictures of the Sacred House, Maqam (place) of Ibrahim (Abraham). Some of these pictures are old and others are recent as shown under every picture. They contain groups of people offering Tawaf (Circumambulation of the Ka`bah). Please, give us a Fatwa in this regard. Is it permissible to hang such pictures and sheets inside mosques and their lobbies considering that some Imams (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in our industrial city of Jubail hung them inside the mosque thinking that it is permissible to do so? May Allah grant you the best reward for what you do for Islam and Muslims!

A: Putting these calendars inside mosques is impermissible as they include pictures of animate objects and occupy praying people during Salah by looking at them and pondering on their colors and forms, that contradicts with the purpose of Salah which is Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship), and focusing on Salah while one is standing before Allah (Exalted be He).

Q: Is it permissible to hang ordinary calendars and Ramadan fasting calendars issued by some banks in Masjids (mosques) or not?

A: It is not permissible to hang calendars and Ramadan fasting calendars that are issued by some banks or commercial institutions in Masjids, for it results in some violations of Shari`ah, such as promoting forbidden transactions and making the Houses of Allah an object for advertising for commercial products. This violates the sanctity of Masjids and the purpose for which they are built, meaning offering Salah (Prayer), reciting the Qur'an and teaching people goodness and urging them to do it and warning them against evil. All this comes under the Saying of Allah (Exalted be He): [﴿Help you one another in Al-Birr and At-Taqwâ \(virtue, righteousness and piety\); but do not help one another in sin and transgression. The third question of Fatwa no. 17453

Q 3: Is it permissible to hang magazines including pictures of some well-known Muslim personalities in Masjids (mosques)? What should we do about whoever does so?

A: It is not permissible to hang pictures neither in Masjids nor elsewhere. Hanging pictures in Masjids is more severely prohibited, for this is a means to commit Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). Whoever does so should be advised to reject this. It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The angels do not enter a house wherein there is a picture.\) It is authentically reported that he (peace be upon him) also said to `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) \(Spare no portrait unwiped out.\) Many Hadiths have also been narrated to this effect.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 241)

the grave should be exhumed and moved to the public graveyard. However, if the grave was there first and then the Masjid was built over it, the Masjid should be demolished, because this area belongs to the occupant of the grave.

Q 2: A Masjid (mosque) is located inside the boundary of a cemetery. The Masjid and the cemetery share the same fence, so worshippers can not get in the Masjid unless they first pass by the cemetery. No other way to the Masjid is available. What is the ruling then on such a Masjid? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Salah is neither permissible nor valid in Masjids (mosques) which are built over graves. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited offering Salah (Prayer) by the graves and building Masjids over them and cursed whoever does so. The reason behind this prohibition is that Salah (Prayer) there may lead to offering 'Ibadah (worship) to graves instead of or besides Allah. It is thus Wajib (obligatory) to keep the Masjid away from the graves and to fence in the cemetery to protect it from being used as footpaths or desecrated.

Q: We are from Bangladesh and our capital is Dhaka. We are from Naogaon province whose capital is Safahir. P.O. Nisjint Fawr. Our village Giwal Garam has a small Masjid (Mosque) that does not have enough room for all worshippers who are on the increase. We want to expand the Masjid, in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), but the problem is that there are five Muslim graves in the north side of the Masjid. If we expand it, the graves will be included in it. These graves have been built seventy-two years ago. Is it permissible to expand the Masjid on the graves or what should we do? Please, clarify with evidence from the Qur'an and the Sunnah. Thank you!

A: It is obligatory on you to seek another place for the Masjid free and away from any graves, because it is not permissible for you to exhume the graves as they were founded first in that place and so have the right to remain in it. It is not permissible to offer Salah at the graves, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade this act, as this can be a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). It is obligatory to fence off the graves to protect them from abuse.

Q 2: What is the ruling on offering Salah in a Masjid (mosque) lying next to a cemetery, without a barrier in between except the Masjid's wall?

A: There is nothing wrong with offering Salah in a Masjid separated from the grave by a road or space beyond the Masjid's wall. It is not prohibited for absence of the cause of the prohibition, namely, this Masjid is not built on a grave. But if the grave or the cemetery is contiguous to the Masjid's wall, the Salah performed in it is invalid, because it is performed at a grave, which counts as a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship).

The Masjid has been built from concrete and covers an area of 9 x 6 meters and it is 2.5 meters high. This is a Masjid where congregational Salah (Prayers) are performed; not Fridays. It is worth mentioning that there is no other Masjid close to it. Is it permissible to complete its construction or should we change its location near the first site? May Allah protect you!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned; that the cemetery

It may be worth mentioning that there is a fence that separates the Masjid and the cemetery which is to the east of the Masjid. Also, people who are in charge of the cemetery refuse to exhume their dead.

A: If these graves are entirely detached from the Masjid, i.e. a street or an open space separates between them, offering Salah in this Masjid is permissible. This applies whether the graveyard is for Muslims or non-Muslims.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19381

Q 1: In India, there are many Masjids (mosques) with graves inside them in the direction of Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) or otherwise.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 245)

I used to go to distant Masjids, because they do not contain graves whose landmarks are distinct.

Discussing the validity of Salah in these Masjids with some people, Imams or others, they assert that the whole district where we live is located in the Muslims graveyard. Like all houses and stores, the Masjids are built over graves whose landmarks are not visible. For fear that Hindus may destroy some of these graves whose landmarks remain, they are placed in the courtyard of the Masjid. If they mainly refuse to build anything over these graves whose landmarks are effaced, Hindus will capture them all.

In the light of these circumstances, is it permissible to offer Salah in such Masjids or it is better to offer Salah at home? Indeed, it is hard for some of us to go to the Masjids far from homes, if there are any such Masjids that are free from graves.

A: The basic principle is that it is impermissible for a Muslim to offer Salah in a Masjid that contains a grave, be it in the middle or at any of its corners, as long as it is inside the Masjid's wall. Offering Salah in a Masjid with a grave at the Qiblah is worse. So, it is incumbent upon those in charge of the Muslims' affairs not to leave these Masjids in their existing condition, with graves inside them, but must interfere to remove this Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) according to the situation of the Masjid which is one of two:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 246)

First: The Masjid was built over the graves. The graveyard existed before the Masjid was built. The basic principle states that any Masjid built over graves should be demolished, because it is a building that is not established according to what Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him) ordained. Leaving it in its existing state and taking no action about it and offering Salah in it is persistence in committing one of the major sins, for it is built over the graves. It also involves committing excesses in religion and veneration of the dead person on whose grave the Masjid was built, which are among the means that lead to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship).

Second: The Masjid was built before the graves and then the graves were placed inside it. In this case the Masjid should not be demolished. These newly placed graves must be exhumed and the remains should be buried in the Muslim graveyard to eliminate this evil, in compliance with the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) who prohibited offering Salah in Masjids containing graves or taking the graves as places of worship. He (peace be upon him) even cursed those who do so. It is authentically narrated in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said in his terminal illness, "May Allah curse the Jews and the Christians; they have taken the graves of their Prophets as Masjids \(places of worship\)." 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) added, ﴿“He (peace be upon him) was warning against (doing) what they did. But for that, his grave would have been raised above the ground, but it was feared lest it might be taken as a place for worship.”﴾ It is narrated in the Sahih of Muslim on the authority of Jundub Ibn ‘Abdullah that the Prophet (peace be upon him), five days before his death, said, ﴿“Beware! Those who preceded you used to take the graves of their prophets and righteous people as Masjids (places of worship). Do not take graves as Masjids; I forbid you to do that.”﴾ It is also narrated in the same book,

(Part No. 5; Page No. 247)

﴿“Do not sit on graves or pray towards them.”﴾ It is narrated in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith on the authority of ‘Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that Um Salamah told the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) about a church she saw in the land of Abyssinia (Ethiopia) and the graves it contained. He (peace be upon him) said, ﴿“When a righteous man among these people dies, they build a place of worship on his grave and make such pictures in it. These are the vilest creatures in the Sight of Allah.”﴾

Another is the Hadith narrated by Ibn ‘Abbas (may Allah be pleased with both of them) who said, ﴿“The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) cursed the women who visit graves and those who build Masjids over them or place lights upon them.”﴾ (Related by the compilers of Sunan)

Accordingly, it is impermissible to offer Salah in the Masjids with graves inside them. You must try hard to find a grave-free Masjid where you can perform congregational Prayer. If you fail to find such a Masjid, you may perform Salah in congregation at home until you can afford to establish a Masjid with no grave. May Allah make things easy for you, bless your efforts, and use you in making Islam victorious!

Q: I live in a village where most of its people are greatly attached to customs and traditions;

this village has a small Masjid (Mosque), praise be to Allah. However, the problem with that Masjid is that there is a shrine of a Waliy (pious person) whose name is 'Aly Ibn Khazan in the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) of that Masjid. There are also two graves that are said to be for the sons of this Waliy. Moreover, in the northern corner of the Masjid there are a group of other graves whose number is unknown. Is it permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in that Masjid? Given that these graves are placed outside the walls of the Masjid. If it is impermissible, where can I offer Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, bearing in mind that there is another Masjid that is 3 kilometers away, but it is established on usurped land? Please advise in this regard, because I do not want to miss the congregational Salah.

A: Offering Salah in the said Masjid is impermissible, because the body of the shrine is connected to it. The Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade offering Salah by graves and forbiddance denotes the invalidity of Salah there. Furthermore, he (peace be upon him) forbade building Masjids over graves, because this is a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). May Allah guide us and you to know the truth and act upon it!

The first question of Fatwa no. 18224

Q 1: What should one do when one is compelled to offer Salah (Prayer) in Masjids (mosques) where there are graves inside, behind or beside them? It should be taken into consideration that these graves are very old and forgotten and there are no other Masjids in this district or village except this one?

A: It is not permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in Masjids that contain graves, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"May Allah curse the Jews and the Christians; they have taken the graves of their Prophets as Masjids \(places of worship\).">﴿"May Allah curse the Jews and the Christians; they have taken the graves of their Prophets as Masjids \(places of worship\)."﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) He (peace be upon him) also said: ﴿"Do not offer Salah \(Prayer\) facing the graves and do not sit on them."﴾ (Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Book of Hadith]) Moreover, this is a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) by taking the occupants of the graves as partners with Allah and worshipping them along with Him. As for a person who does not find a Masjid except this Masjid built on a grave, they should offer Salah in another place free of graves. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"The whole earth has been made for me a Masjid \(place of worship\) and a Tahur \(purifier\).">﴿"The whole earth has been made for me a Masjid \(place of worship\) and a Tahur \(purifier\)."﴾

Q 1: A man performed Salah (prayer) several times in a certain Masjid (mosque) before he learned that it contains a grave. He did not know as he was not familiar with the Masjid area. Is his Salah considered valid because he did not know about the grave? If it is invalid, how can he make up for it, bearing in mind that he does not know the number of times he has performed Salah in this Masjid, as he travels a lot?

A: If the reality is mentioned, this man is excused based on the generality of Allah's

Q 1: We have a great Masjid (mosque) where we offer most of the Fara'id (obligatory prayers) and it is the closest Masjid to us. After a while, I discovered that there was a grave prepared for the owner of this Masjid in the ground floor in order to bury him in, after his death. Could you kindly advise us about the ruling on offering Salah in this Masjid. Please, substantiate your answer with proofs from the Qur'an and the Sunnah. Moreover, what is the ruling on those who deliver Khutbah (sermon) there?

A: It is not permissible to bury the dead in the Masjid. The Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited this and informed his Ummah (Muslim nation) that this was the deed of the Jews and the Christians and the reason behind cursing them, as a warning against doing what they did. Consequently, it is not permissible to offer Salah in the Masjids established on graves. Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade taking graves as Masjids; because this is a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). As for the Masjid you ask about, Salah is valid before anyone is buried there. It is obligatory not to bury anyone there or in any other Masjid. However, once somebody is buried in the Masjid, it becomes prohibited to offer Salah therein because of the proofs we have mentioned until the dead body is exhumed and moved from the Masjid.

Fatwa no. 13905

Q: Five hundred years ago, the first and only Masjid (Mosque) of Al-Siqal village in South Yemen was founded. The lands surrounding the Masjid in three directions were used as graveyards and the road occupies the fourth direction. As the village expanded and the population increased, the Masjid could no longer provide enough room for all the people praying. The villagers then decided to expand their Masjid in 1385 A.H. They consulted the judge of the village and some senior scholars concerning the expansion of the Masjid by annexing a part of the graveyard to it. Since it is impossible to expand it from the fourth direction occupied by the road, the scholars suggested the following: Establishing reinforced concrete columns in the direction of the graves where the Masjid is to be expanded as outlined in the attached drawing. The columns were established around and not above the graves. When digging, we avoided putting the columns where there is an old or new grave. A ceiling was set a meter above these columns, so that the graves, numbering about twelve, were under the ceiling which became a part of the Masjid as indicated in the outline. It should be noted that the graves were leveled and the ceiling is a meter above the graves. What is the legal ruling in this regard?

A: The Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) you referred to is incorrect, if the case is as you have mentioned, for it is not permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in or above graves, on account of the generality of the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): “May Allah curse the Jews and the Christians; they have taken the graves of their Prophets as Masjids \(places of worship\).” It is well-known that the air space above graves is pursuant to them (subject to the ruling on them). Accordingly, it is obligatory to demolish that additional part built as an expansion for the Masjid on the stretch of the air space above graves and to keep to the original space of the Masjid. However, if it is too narrow to offer the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer in it, you can look for another Masjid in another place in the village where there are no graves.

Q 2: Is it permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) in cemeteries?

A: It is impermissible of offer Salah in cemeteries; whoever does that, their Salah is invalid and they should repeat it and that is based on the Mutawatir (a Hadith reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon a lie is impossible) Hadiths from the Prophet (peace be upon him) which forbid taking graves as places of worship, except for Funeral Prayer which is permissible to be offered in

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 15633

Q 1: Is it permissible to perform Salah in a Masjid where Sufi circles of Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) are held?

Q 2: There are two Masjids in our village. Sufi circles of Dhikr are held in one of them while the other contains the grave of a Waliy (pious person) whom they commemorate his Mawlid (birthday) every year. This Masjid was built over the graveyard of the village. Is it permissible to offer Salah in it?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 254)

What should we do if there are no other Masjids except these two? should we pray in a Masjid where a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) is practiced or pray in a Masjid built over graves?

A 1: There is nothing wrong with offering Salah in the Masjid where Sufi circles are held. However, you should express disapproval of their action and try to prevent these circles from being held, any way possible. Yet, this does not prevent holding congregational Salah in this Masjid.

A 2: It is invalid to offer Salah in a Masjid containing a grave. The Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited taking graves as Masjids. The prohibition denotes invalidity. Moreover, it is a means to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) committed by taking the occupants of the graves as partners with Allah. The same applies to the Masjid built over graves. It is obligatory on the people of this village to find a Masjid in a land that has no graves to offer congregational Salah as Allah has ordained. They should also cooperate in righteousness and piety and be careful of Shirk and the means leading to it.

Q 2: During last Ramadan some young men went with us to offer Salah (Prayer) in a Masjid (Mosque) other than the one in which we usually offer our Salah, because the latter one witnesses, before 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, what is called "Masbahah" i.e. gathering to offer tasbih (glorification of Allah) in a manner not prescribed.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 255)

We advised them that what they do is not in accordance with the Sunnah, but they denied our advice, and this made us decide to offer our Salah in another Masjid. Is what we did right or not? What is your advice to us and them?

A: There is no offence in what you did, because the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of the said Masjid practices a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and does not accept advice as you mentioned.

Q: We are a group of people who offer Salah (prayer) in 'Umar Masjid (mosque) in France, in Lille city. The mayor of the city gave us a piece of land and built a Masjid for us at the expense of the municipality in 1975. Ever since, we offer Salah in this Masjid. However, some people now say that it is not permissible to offer Salah in this Masjid, for it is built by the money of the Christians. They then abandoned offering Salah in it and made their own Musalla (a place for Prayer). Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: There is nothing wrong with offering Salah in the said Masjid, since building it by the government is a fulfillment of one of the rights the subjects have over their government. Therefore, those who abandoned offering Salah in it have no reason to do so and their argument is not true.

Q: The city of Kinamyu is 25 kilometers away from Nairobi. Sadly, Kinamyu has neither a Masjid (mosque) nor a school. Q: We would like to inform you that the Philippine government is likely to agree to fund a project of some religious national organizations. The project includes:

- 1. A Masjid (mosque) for Muslims.
- 2. A church for Catholics.
- 3. A church for Protestants.
- 4. A church for the followers of the Cristo Evangelical Church.

The project will be built in the National Airport in Manila. What is the ruling on establishing a Masjid together with these three temples in one place? Please, advice us, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: This is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) that Muslims have not known since the mission of Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him). This thought stems from the crafty contemporary calls like the call to unite religions, by overlooking the difference between truth and falsehood, the true Islam and other distorted, altered, and abrogated religions. Accepting and approving of this action puts Islam, which abrogated all the religions that came before it, on equal footing with the other changed and abrogated Shari`ahs (Divine laws). It deceives people on the Earth. This is falsehood that is rejected by Allah, His Messenger and the believers. Accordingly, it is not permissible to build a Masjid, church, and synagogue in one place under the same roof and within the same fence. Muslims should not share in this building or invite to it. The Masjid should be built separately away from other temples.

Q: Is it permissible for a person to have a fixed place in the Masjid (Mosque) in which he always offers Salah (Prayer)?

For example, if this person enters the Masjid, he always confines himself to the same place, given that he is always keen on coming early to the Masjid before other worshippers to take this place. Is that permissible or not? Kindly give us the legal opinion supported with proofs.

A: If the said person wants to stand behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and is keen on that place for its nearness to the Imam, there is nothing wrong with sitting in it as long as he preceded others to it. Rather, it is prescribed for the Muslim to be eager to stand in the first row and close to the Imam, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said in the Sahih (authentic) Hadith: “If people were to know what is in the call to prayer and the first row, then they found no other way but to draw lots over it, they would draw lots.” provided that he does not make another person get up from this place, if he preceded him to it.

As for insisting on a certain place and forbidding others from sitting in it or asking others to get up from it, this is impermissible, because this is a kind of reserving for one's own use something they do not own. Masjids are the Houses of Allah and anyone who precedes another to a place, has more right to it. Furthermore, it has been authentically narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Umar that he said: “The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) forbade that a man should make his brother get up from his seat in order to sit there.” It is prescribed that those who stand directly behind the Imam in the first row are the knowledgeable and the wise people in order to correct where the Imam might go wrong or forget, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said in the Hadith narrated by Muslim: “Let those \(standing\) nearest to me of you \(in congregational prayer\) be the mature and the wise, then those next to them, then those next to them.”

Q: What is the ruling on a person who enters the Masjid (mosque) while being Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity)?

A: There is no sin on a Junub person if they enter the Masjid just for passing through; whereas entering the Masjid for sitting and staying in it is not permissible for the Junub, because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿O you who believe! Approach not As-Salât (the prayer) when you are in a drunken state until you know (the meaning) of what you utter, nor when you are in a state of Janâba , (i.e. in a state of sexual impurity and have not yet taken a bath) except when travelling on the road (without enough water, or just passing through a mosque), till you wash your whole body.﴾

Q: Is it permissible for a menstruating woman to enter the Masjid (mosque) for the purpose of study, whether she is a student or a teacher? I do not mean the place where Salah (Prayer) is offered, but there are other sections in the Masjid that are used for teaching boys and girls. Sometimes, the Masjid is not enough for the people, especially in the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), so these rooms are used for Salah. Female students and teachers might pass by these rooms or sit there to do an assignment or take a lesson. Please advise in writing. May Allah protect you and keep you!

A: It is not permissible for a menstruating woman or a person who is Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity) to sit in the Masjid or the sections connected to it, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("I do not deem the Masjid lawful for a menstruating woman and for a Junub."\) (Related by Abu Dawud and ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Ibn Khuzaymah) However, it is permissible for menstruating women to go into the masjid to fetch something, for Allah (Exalted be He) says:

Q 2: Some people in our Masjid (mosque) used to leave after the Mu'adhin (caller to prayer) finishes announcing Adhan (call to prayer) along with the Mu'adhin and they stay in the courtyard of the Masjid under trees talking about matters of life and people's concerns. These people do not respect the dignity of the Masjid and may leave their children playing inside it. When we warned them against doing so, they said that there is no Shar'y (Islamic legal) text that forbids this. What is the ruling in this regard?

A: It is obligatory to respect the Masjids and prevent children from playing inside them. Leaving the Masjid after Adhan is Makruh (reprehensible) except for a necessity such as performing Wudu' (ablution) or going to another Masjid for an urgent matter and the like.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 262)

As for leaving Masjids after Adhan for the sake of talking and sitting in markets, it should be given up and condemned. It is narrated that “Abu Hurayrah \(may Allah be pleased with him\) saw a man who left the Masjid after the Adhan. Abu Hurayrah said, ‘Indeed, this \(man\) has disobeyed Abu Al-Qasim \(Muhammad, peace be upon him\).’” This will be the ruling if the courtyard is outside the Masjid, but if it is inside the Masjid, it takes the ruling of the Masjid. Accordingly, speaking about matters of life or evil talk such as backbiting and calumny should be avoided. after hearing the adhan it is prescribed for those who perform Salah (prayer) to occupy themselves with directing the rows, completing the first row then the one next to it and so on, performing the prescribed supererogatory acts of worship such as Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) and others, supplicating to Allah and reciting the Qur'an as indicated by the Sahih (authentic) Hadith mentioned in this concern. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “Complete the first row then the one next to it.” Also, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “If people were to know what is in the call to prayer \(Adhan\) and the first row, then they found no other way but to draw lots over it, they would draw lots.” and: “Du'a' \(supplication\) between the Adhan \(call to Prayer\) and 'Iqamah \(call to start prayer\) is not rejected.” Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “Anyone who keeps on praying regularly four Rak'ahs \(units of Prayer\) before Zuhr \(Noon\) Prayer

(Part No. 5; Page No. 263)

and four after it, Allah will make them forbidden to the Fire.” and: “May Allah show mercy to a person who offers four Rak'ahs before 'Asr \(Afternoon\) Prayer.” Also, he (peace be upon him) said: “Between every two calls \(Adhan and 'Iqamah\) there is a \(supererogatory\) Salah! 'Between every two calls there is a Salah!” And in the third he (peace be upon him) said, “To those who wish \(to offer it\).”

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 18188

Q 1: Is it permissible for children to enter Masjids (Mosques)? How do we respond to those who consider it not permissible?

A: It is recommended to bring children to the Masjid so they will become accustomed to offering Salah (prayer) in congregation, if the child has reached the age of discernment. It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"Command your children to pray when they are seven years old and beat them for \(neglecting\) it when they are ten years old, and do not let \(boys and girls\) sleep together."﴾ .

As for the account that the Prophet (peace be upon them) said, ﴿"Keep your children and the insane away from your Masjids",﴾ it is unauthentic.

However, if a child has not reached the age of discernment, it is best not to bring him to the Masjid, as he is unaware of the meaning of Salah or congregation. Also, the child may disturb those offering Salah.

Q 1: Someone in our village brings his minor children who have not reached the age of seven to the Masjid (mosque). Sometimes, they raise their voices and distract those who offer Salah and cause them to lose concentration. When some of our Muslim brothers advised him not to bring them, he said: The Companions used to bring their children to the Masjid during the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and when the Messenger heard the cry of a baby, he used to not lengthen Salah. A: It is obligatory to maintain Masjids and keep them safe from the playing of children and their annoyance because Masjids are built for worship. Those who bring their children with them to teach them Salah (prayer) should discipline them and train them not to play in the Masjids or play with the Mushafs (copies of the Qur'an) there.

Q: I am the director of British Columbia Muslim Association. We work in the field of Da`wah (calling to Islam) among Non-Muslims. I have been working in this field for three years. Sometimes, non-Muslims visit Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held). I take them on a tour round the Masjid and lecture them on Islamic teachings. These lectures are given inside the Masjid where the non-Muslims willingly sit on the carpets. Some fellow Muslims criticize this. They believe that I should not allow non-Muslims to enter the Masjid or to sit on its carpets for several reasons. First, they believe that non-Muslims are Najis (ritually impure). Second, non-Muslim women are not dressed according to the Islamic dress code.

I know that you are a very busy man but I hope you would have time to reply to my question.

A: The basic rule is that it is permissible for non-Muslims to enter Masjids except Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah). This is especially acceptable when there is a legal considered interest, such as listening to lectures and watching the common solidarity, compassion, and mercy among Muslims. Abu Sufyan (may Allah be pleased with him) visited the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the Masjid before embracing Islam. The Prophet (peace be upon him) also confined Umamah ibn Uthal in the Masjid. He (peace be upon him) also accommodated Thaqif delegation and the Christian delegation of Najran in the Masjid before they embraced Islam.

The second question of Fatwa no. 21349

Q 2: The Prophet (peace be upon him) declared intertwining the fingers in the Masjid (mosque) as Makruh (reprehensible). Does the same ruling apply to clicking joints of fingers, though no Hadith explicitly states so?

A: According to many scholars, clicking joints of fingers in the Masjid is Makruh as it resembles intertwining fingers and the two are too trivial acts to be done in the Masjid.

Fatwa no. 20729

Q: What is the ruling on a host inviting people in the Masjid (mosque) for coffee and dinner at his house, and it is not a Sadaqah (voluntary charity) to be announced or offered in the Masjid. It may be worth mentioning that these invitations are made in a loud voice which disturbs the Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) of people inside the Masjid. Moreover, such a practice has spread and become a custom, though no one knows except Allah (Exalted be He) what the real purpose behind it is. I privately advised some of those who do this to adhere to Allah's statement: ﴿And the mosques are for Allâh (Alone): so invoke not anyone along with Allâh.﴾ It is also related from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) that ﴿"When a man enquired in the Masjid about something that he had lost, the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade him and said to his Sahabah (Companions), 'If anyone hears a man inquiring in the Masjid about something he has lost, say to him, "May Allah not restore it to you," for Masjids are not built for this purpose.'"﴾ However, such people replied that as far as they know, this practice is permissible.

A: It is permissible for a Muslim to invite people in the Masjid for lunch or dinner, as doing so neither violates the etiquettes of Masjids, nor resembles the prohibited act of inquiring about a lost item. Rather, these invitations increase harmony and love amongst people of the Masjid. In addition, it is narrated that one of the Sahabah invited the Prophet (peace be upon him) while they were in the Masjid to take food with him and he (peace be upon him) accepted the invitation.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: Officials at private schools become very active in advertising their schools with the start of every academic year. Among the different means they follow, is that they distribute leaflets that tell about programs of such schools, advantages of joining them, fees, and encourage the greatest number of people to hasten to apply to such schools, etc. Some of the concerned private schools distribute the leaflets mentioned above inside Masjids (mosques) and Jami's (large mosques where Jumu'ah [Friday] Prayers are held). They put such leaflets on shelves where Mushafs (copies of the Qur'an) are put, on the notice board, or beside the internal parts of the Masjids' doors.

What is the ruling then on the foregoing and what should a person do when they find such leaflets inside Masjids?

A: Using masjids as places for displaying commercial advertisements and leaflets is impermissible whether this is done by schools, commercial foundations, etc. This is because Masjids are built for offering 'Ibadah (worship) to Allah such as Salah (Prayer), making Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), learning and teaching knowledge, reciting Qur'an, and other religious matters. Conversely, it is impermissible to use Masjids as places for propagating what is mentioned above and to take advantage of the existence of large numbers of people in the Masjids by placing leaflets and advertisements inside them. Muslims have to keep the Masjids far above such practices, maintain the sanctity of Masjids, and be keen not to distract people away from offering 'Ibadah to Allah and not to disturb their Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And the mosques are for Allâh \(Alone\): so invoke not anyone along with Allâh.﴾ This is also supported by the Hadith authentically reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿“When you see someone buying or selling in the Masjid, say: ‘May Allah not make your trade profitable!’”﴾ (Related by Al-Nasa'y and Al-Tirmidhy who classed it as a Hadith Hasan [good Hadith]) It is noteworthy that placing such advertisements in Masjids is a sort of trade.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: Please be advised that some advertisements of private lessons and programs that are hung in the Masjids (mosques) include the name or the telephone number of the advertisement designer, or the name of the print house that issued it, which makes it a publication.

Please advise concerning the ruling on hanging such advertisements inside the Masjid, outside it or on the door. May Allah reward you.

A: It is impermissible to use Masjids, their yards or walls as a place for commercial advertisement, whether it is done on purpose or accidentally in the charitable brochures. Masjids are built to be places of 'Ibadah (worship), whether Salah (Prayer), Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), seeking knowledge, teaching it and reciting the Qur'an. We should keep Masjids away from forms of trade that do not befit them, such as commercial promotion, whether they are intended or just mentioned in charitable brochures. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"When you see someone buying or selling in the Masjid, say: 'May Allah not make your trade profitable!'"﴾ It should be noted that display of commercial advertisements is a sort of trade.

Fatwa no. 21541

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter sent to His Eminence the Mufty by His Excellency the Minister of the Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Daw'ah, and Guidance under no. S546/2/1 on 15/15/1421 A.H. referred to the Committee by the General Secretary of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 40/S on 23/05/1421 A.H. The question reads as follows:

May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you! The Head Department of Monitoring Transportation of Pilgrims has begun an ambitious plan to employ Saudi drivers for the buses that will serve as transportation for pilgrims during the year 1421 A.H. This is in response to the will of the government of the Custodian of the Two Sacred Mosques - may Allah support it - to offer citizens job opportunities in all fields and to act upon what has been decided in the meeting that was held under the presidency of His Royal Highness the Minister of the Interior and the Minister of the Supreme Committee of Hajj at the office of His Highness in Jeddah on 30/12/1420 A.H. This meeting was attended by myself along with His Excellency the Minister of Hajj and was consequently followed by issuing the telegram of His Highness under no. A/SH/1584 on 14/01/1421 A.H. concerning employing Saudi drivers for the buses that work in the transportation of pilgrims.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 272)

Attached to my letter is a photocopy of the telegram that I received from His Royal Highness the Prince of Makkah Region and the President of The Supreme Department of Monitoring the Transportation of Pilgrims under no. A/M/254628 on 22/04/1421 A.H. along with a photocopy of the job announcement for bus drivers and technicians to work during the 1421 Hajj season, which His Highness asked to be posted visibly inside Masjids (mosques) so that citizens can benefit.

I hope that Your Eminence will give us the ruling on posting such announcement inside Masjids.

After the Committee studied the question, it answered that announcing Jobs in Masjids is not permissible. The same ruling applies whether the announcements are made verbally or through signs. This is because Masjids are only for offering 'Ibadah (worship) to Allah (Exalted be He). Masjids are for performing Salah (Prayer), saying Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), teaching, learning, reciting Qur'an, and similar Islamic affairs. Accordingly, Masjids are not to be used for announcing jobs. Rather, we must safeguard the sanctity of Masjids and not disturb worshipers or interrupt their Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And the mosques are for Allâh \(Alone\): so invoke not anyone along with Allâh.﴾ Moreover, it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"When you see someone selling in the Masjid, say to him, 'May Allah not make your bargain profitable!'"﴾ Placing such announcements inside Masjids is a form of conducting business.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 21510

All Praise is due to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last Prophet. To commence:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has perused the case submitted to his Eminence, the General Mufti by his Excellency, the Minister of Islamic Affairs, Awqaf, Call and Guidance no. 1/4/1134 on 15/4/1421 A.H. which is referred to the Committee by the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 2458 on 23/4/1421 A.H. in which his Excellency asked the following question:

I would like to inform you about an offer submitted by one of the commercial companies specialized in publicity and advertising which is interested in using some of Masjids (mosques) utilities in placing some advertisements; on the fences of Masjids as well as the courtyards in return for fees which will be spent on the utilities of Masjids.

The case has been studied in the special department in the Ministry and there were two views; supporters and rejecters, and each party has its own justifications which are as follows:

Firstly, justifications of supporting it:

- 1- Masjids do not need the courtyards which are not used in any of their utilities and such courtyards do not take the same ruling of Masjids. Moreover, they are lands made for Waqf (endowments) and it is better to use them in the best interests of Masjids and good actions.
- 2- These Masjids are already exploited by placing advertisements without previous permission, regulations or revenue for Masjids and the project will regulate this and prevent exploitation.
- 3- Getting benefit from the revenue of this investment for the utilities of Masjids such as increasing the building, fixing the damaged areas, maintenance, employing and fixing a certain percentage - after negotiation with the company as a result of using these advertisements - in distributing messages to call people to Islam and guide them through the Ministry.
- 4- The statement issued from the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' regarding Shar'y (Islamic) disciplines for advertisements states the permissibility of commercial advertisements as long as they do not contain anything against the Shari'ah (Islamic law) and abide by the Shar'y disciplines mentioned in the statement. A copy of the Committee statement is attached to this letter.

5- The Fatwa of the Permanent Committee no.3842 includes the following: [It is permissible to place notices outside the doors of Masjids in a certain, permanent place that people can know]. The question of the Fatwa was about the ruling of sending some notices by courts about the properties of some people to the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in order to announce them to the villages. Some Imams read these notices inside the Masjid after Salah, then idle talks and disputes take place.

6- The contract signed by the executing company must include precise conditions to maintain the Islamic disciplines set by the Permanent Committee of Ifta' and in the same time guarantee the right of the Ministry of general supervision, control, fulfilling rights and imposing sanctions.

Secondly, justifications of refusal:

1- The reality of advertising which is full of violations of the Shari'ah such as dissipation, fraud, illicit images, inappropriate words and so on. Such a fact makes it difficult to maintain control and careful observation all the time to ensure abidance by the Shar'y disciplines in each advertisement, especially that they are constantly changed.

2- Filling the facades and sides of Masjids with commercial advertisements contradicts the purpose of building Masjids.

They also distract the hearts of Masjid visitors and affect the beauty of Masjids which should be free from the vanities of life.

3- With the passage of time, things might go beyond control, the supervision may decrease and actions against the Shari'ah may be committed.

Due to the importance and sensitivity of the subject and the difference of opinions, I decided to write to Your Eminence to issue us a Fatwa in this regard and tell us about what we should do.

May Allah reward you the best and grant you success!

May Allah protect you!

After the Committee had studied the case, its answer comes as follows: It is not permissible to use Masjids or any of their utilities or courtyards as a field to display paintings, propaganda leaflets and commercial advertisements whether this is being done for schools, factories, institutions or the like. Masjids are built for worshipping Allah, performing Salah (prayer), making Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), teaching and learning knowledge, reciting the Qur'an and other religious matters. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And the mosques are for Allāh \(Alone\): so invoke not anyone along with Allāh.﴾ Using Masjids and their utilities in worldly affairs contradicts the purpose for which they were built.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 277)

Therefore, they must be free from what you have mentioned. They should be safeguarded and it is not permissible to engage people in things which distract them away from the worship of Allah and weaken their attachment to the Hereafter. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When you see someone buying or selling in the Masjid, say: 'May Allah not make your trade profitable!'﴾ Displaying these propaganda leaflets and advertisements is a kind of trade (which is mentioned in the Hadith).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 18951

Q: What is the ruling on playing lawful games and joking in the Masjid (mosque) to combat boredom?

A: The purpose of building Masjids is for Muslims to perform Salah (Prayer), say Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), recite the Qur'an, teach Islamic subjects, etc. Therefore, what violates this purpose should be avoided in Masjids. As for joking and short talks about worldly affairs, there is no harm in this, provided that it does not disturb those offering Salah and reciting the Qur'an.

Q 2: It is known that Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah) was not furnished with carpets. According to an authentic report on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudry concerning the account of their I'tikaf (seclusion for worship in a Masjid) with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him), he (peace be upon him) said: 'Anyone who was in I'tikaf should return to his place of I'tikaf, for I saw (i.e. was informed about the date of) this Night (of Qadr) and saw myself prostrating in mud and water.' I (Abu Sa'id Al-Khudry) saw the trace of mud and water over the nose of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and its tip. Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful with him) said in "Al-Fatawa Al-Kubra," (Dar Al-Ma'rifah edition, Lebanon; vol. 3, p. 32-34; edited by Hasanayn Makhluf) in his reply to a question: All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of the Worlds. Offering Salah (Prayer) on a prayer rug was not practiced by the Muhajirun (Emigrants from Makkah to Madinah), Ansar (Helpers, inhabitants of Madinah who supported the Prophet), or their Tabi'un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet). Indeed, they used to offer Salah on the ground in Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy. None of them used to offer Salah on a prayer rug. It was reported that when 'Abdul-Rahman ibn Mahdy came to Madinah, he laid a prayer rug. Malik gave orders to imprison him. When he was told that he was 'Abdul-Rahman ibn Mahdy, he said, "Did not you know that laying a rug in our Masjid is an act of Bid'ah (innovation in religion)." Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful with him) then mentioned the Hadith of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudry in addition to other Hadith that are narrated to the same effect.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 279)

Does this mean that furnishing Masjids with carpets is a Bid'ah or only the use of a personal prayer rug is the Bid'ah? Our Masjid is not tiled, but it is clean. In summer, a white carpet is laid. It is half a meter wide with enough space for those offering Salah to place their hands and heads. Is this a Bid'ah, especially when there is no necessity for it? Please, be concise and to the point.

A: There is nothing wrong with offering Salah on a personal rug or on the carpets found in Masjids. The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to offer Salah on mats and on the ground. He (peace be upon him) did not confine himself to anything in particular but to whatever was available to him.

The statement of Shaykh-ul-Islam refers to a specific case regarding an act that is adopted by some innovative persons who believe that offering Salah on a special rug is better than any other Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

(Part No. 5; Page No. 280)

Q: What is the ruling on using incense and on incensing Masjids (mosques)?

A: incensing and perfuming Masjids is a good act, as it is part of observing the cleanliness of the Masjid. The eminent Tabi`y (Follower, belonging to the generation after the Companions of the Prophet) Nu`aym Al-Mujmir (may Allah be merciful with him), who was one of the persons reporting from Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him), was called "Al-Mujmir" (i.e. an adjective describing the equivalent of the Arabic word incense) because he used to incense the Masjid of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him).

Fatwa no. 17845

All praise be to Allah Alone and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet. The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the question submitted to His Eminence the Mufti by His Excellency the minister of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Daw'ah, and Guidance with no. (334/416/1) on 11/2/1416 A.H. It was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the no. (1395) on 20/3/1416 A.H. Following is the wording of the questioner:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 281)

In reference to letter no. (163/K/M), dated 11/2/1415 A.H., with regard to asking for the issuance of a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) with respect to naming Masjids (mosques) after Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) or prominent Muslim figures and after the names of some benevolent people who want to name the Masjids they build after their names, we would like to know the opinion of Your Eminence on this issue.

Here is the wording of the letter: The ministry is to discuss the naming and numbering of Masjids in the Kingdom. What is the ruling on naming the Masjids after the Sahabah, prominent Muslim figures, or the benevolent people who want to name the Masjids they build after their own names?

After studying the matter, the Committee replied:

First, Masjids are named according to the following:

1. naming a Masjid after the person who built it. Naming Masjids after those who built them is a way of attributing charity works to their doers; and this is permissible. It is a real attribute in recognition of their valuable actions. For example, the Prophet's Masjid is attributed to the Prophet by being known as the Masjid of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him).
2. Naming a Masjid after he who offers Salah (Prayer) inside it or after the place where it is located; and this is also permissible. Examples are Masjid Quba'

and Masjid Banu Zurayq as related in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with them) concerning the race to Masjid Banu Zurayq and Masjid Al-Suq. Also, Al-Bukhari (may Allah be merciful with him) entitled a chapter, "Al-Salah fi Masjid Al-Suq i.e. Prayer in the Market Mosque."

3. naming a Masjid after a distinct attribute, such as Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) and Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa (the Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem); and this is permissible. Allah (Exalted be He) says: [﴿Glorified \(and Exalted\) be He \(Allāh\) \[above all that \(evil\) they associate with Him\] Who took His slave \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) for a journey by night from Al-Masjid-al-Harâm \(at Makkah\) to Al-Masjid-al-Aqsâ \(in Jerusalem\)﴾](#) It was authentically reported from a different chain of narrators that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿A journey should not be undertaken except to three Masjids: Al-Masjid Al-Haram, Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa, and my Masjid.﴾ Similarly, Al-Masjid Al-Kabir (i.e. the Great Mosque), is also given as a name for some Masjids on the road between Makkah and Madinah as related in Sahih Al-Bukhari. Al-Jami` Al-Kabir is also a similar name.

Second, giving nicknames to Masjids to distinguish them is a widespread phenomenon in our time, because of the large number and the spread of Masjids that are being built, Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah], in the Islamic countries, cities, villages, and towns. Masjids are given names to be distinguished by them. There is nothing wrong with attributing Masjids to prominent Muslim figures, such as the Sahabah and Tabi`un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet) (may Allah be pleased with them all), like Masjid Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) and Masjid `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him). It is known that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to name his sword, furniture, animals, and clothes as mentioned by Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful with him) in the beginning of his book "Zad al-Ma`ad."

Third, naming Masjids after one of Allah's names, such as Masjid Al-Rahman, Masjid Al-Quddus, or Masjid Al-Salam, is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). Allah (Glorified be He) says: \(And the mosques are for Allâh \(Alone\): so invoke not anyone along with Allâh.\)

All the Masjids are for Allah (Exalted be He). Therefore, naming a Masjid after one of Allah's Names is to be recognized as an innovative practice and is better to be abandoned. Allah (Exalted be He) is the One Who guides to the Straight Path.

Q: what is the ruling on naming the Masjid (mosque) of our district "Masjid Al-Mustafa"? Is this name approved of as being the name of our Masjid? There are some people who oppose this name claiming that it is the special name of the Masjid of the Prophet (peace be upon him), but we want to name our Masjid like this. We hope that you will issue us a written Fatwa in this regard.

A: It is not permissible to designate the name of Masjid Al-Mustafa to your Masjid or any other one. This name is exclusively specific for the Masjid of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Madinah. There are many forbidden matters that may result from giving this name to any Masjid other than that of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 1: We have a Musalla (a place for Prayer) in our district where we observe the Two 'Eid Prayers and Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain) as well. It is surrounded by a fence which is over two meters high from all sides. The Masjid (mosque), where we observe the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, lies near this Musalla. This Musalla that is allocated for observing the two 'Eid Prayers was established about ten years ago and even more, on a site that satisfied all the people of the district. Moreover, it has been fenced by the people of the district in this very place.

2- A clinic has been opened by the Ministry of Health by renting a place in a building that belongs to a citizen. A period of time after the opening of the mentioned clinic, the Ministry of Health asked us to grant it a piece of land owned by the inhabitants of the district to establish a separate building for the clinic. Because there was no land owned by the inhabitants, we could not afford that. Meanwhile, the Ministry of Health, represented by the Health Affairs Department in Abha, informed us of its decision that in case there is no available free land upon which they could establish the clinic, the Ministry of Health may move the clinic to any other district where there will be an available free land. Since moving the clinic from its current place represents a source of danger for the inhabitants of the district, especially the old and disabled people who do not have cars to enable them to go to the clinic if it is somewhere else,

Some people of the district went to see the notary public of Khamis Mushait. They told him that there was vacant land and that they would like to get an evacuation bill on behalf of the Ministry of Health to establish a clinic. The municipality cooperated with them to get it. Afterwards, we knew that the piece of land for which the bill had been gotten was that of the aforesaid Masjid and the Musalla allocated for observing the Two 'Eid Prayers and Salat-ul-Istisqa'. We disapproved of such a procedure which aims at the demolition of the two above-mentioned Masjids and the establishment of the clinic in place of them, due to the great harm that shall be caused by the demolition of such Masjid. Moreover, there is a girls' school of all stages; the primary, preparatory and secondary, comprising about one thousand and five hundred female students near the place of the Musalla. So, if the Masjid and the Musalla are demolished and the clinic established in their place, this will be a sort of besieging the students and the teachers by the visitors of the clinic who could be weak-souled.

Your Eminence, we told you what happened to free our conscience. We will be grateful if you could issue the Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) which permits or forbids the establishment of the clinic in place of the two mentioned Masjids after demolishing them. We really want the two Masjids to remain without being demolished by the Ministry of Health as it can look for another land even by dispossession, if necessary. It is really capable of doing so. Please tell us the right action about the issue

we clarified to you, may Allah protect you!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, it is not permissible to build a clinic on the land of the two Masjids.

Fatwa no. 20651

Q: An Islamic Association in Germany has hired a floor in a building and used it as Masjid (mosque) for performing Salahs (Prayers). Since it was hard for the Muslims to afford such rent, a member of the board of directors in the said Association, being authorized to purchase the place and register it in his name, has spoken to some of his charitable relatives to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for the Masjid. They agreed to pay the needed money as a part of their Sadaqah to buy this Masjid with the intention of it being a Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity). They set a condition which stated that the mentioned Masjid should be registered in the name of the person mentioned above, not the Association on account of their trust in him. It should be known that this Association is a legal personality which has the right of ownership and its possession is preserved. Besides, its constitution which is its principal law certified by the German Authority, stipulates that if the Association is dissolved, all its possessions will pass to another Islamic center in Germany.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 288)

A jurisprudential controversy has erupted among those who perform Salah (prayer) in this Masjid about the permissibility of registering the ownership of the Masjid in the name of this person. Some people said that this is not permissible; because Masjids belong to Allah Alone. They think that the sound action is that the ownership of the Masjid should be registered in the name of the association provided that such a person should manage the Masjid's affairs in conformity with the condition of the donors. Others said that this issue (referring to the registration of the place of the Masjid as a property of this person) is permissible; thus he will be able to carry out the condition of the donors by himself.

Is the above-mentioned condition set by the donors permissible according to Shari'ah (Islamic law)?

Is the abidance of the above-mentioned person to this condition permissible according to Shari'ah?

Is it permissible to register the floor made as a Masjid under the ownership of the above-mentioned person?

A: If the reality of the Islamic Association is as mentioned, it is obligatory to make the floor used as a Masjid under this association and to register it in its name. This will make the follow-up process of its affairs much easier and will protect its rights. It is not permissible to register the ownership of this place used as a Masjid in the name of any person and it should not be attributed to anyone. This may lead to the loss of its endowment, as the person in whose name the Masjid is registered, his inheritors or some of them, a long time after his death, may claim their ownership of the Masjid, and this may lead to dispute and harm.

The first question of Fatwa no. 21653

Q 1: If a Masjid (mosque) is built with a height less than the height of the multi-floor buildings surrounding it; is this forbidden by Shari'ah (Islamic Law) or not?

A: There is nothing wrong if the buildings surrounding the Masjid are higher than its level; as there is no evidence that forbids such a matter.

The first question of Fatwa no. 15218

Q 1: My father (may Allah be Merciful to him) died in 1374 A.H. He left behind an estate including a house, courtyard made of clay. In the courtyard, there is a room with total area (3x3 m) specialized for Salah (Prayers), so it is like a Masjid without a mihrab. Since the house got old and is no longer available for residence, it was deserted. The village where I live has a Masjid Jami' (a large mosque where Jumu'ah [Friday] Prayers are held) since the age of my father (may Allah be Merciful with him). The building of this Masjid has been renewed and we observe Salahs therein. I would like to benefit from the area of the house and its clay courtyard which I mentioned.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 290)

As the room was specialized for Salah since the lifetime of my father it has been kept in good condition, I would like you to give me your legal opinion concerning the right thing to do with it:

should I value its price then spend the money on Al-Masjid Al-Jami' in the village? knowing that it is included in my private properties, or should I keep it as it is?

A: The ruling on this room is the same as that of the rest of the house and it does not come under the same ruling as the Masjid. Actually, it is included in the estate.

The second and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 16843

Q 2: There are some Muslims who do not observe Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, the two 'Eid Prayers and Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in this Masjid (mosque), but they go to another Masjids. They do so because the two Imams (those who lead congregational Prayer) leading Salah in these Masjids are not knowledgeable in the Prophetic Hadiths and they do not memorize the Book of Allah. They work as teachers in the Arabic school for the Arabs and Turkish language for Turkish people. So, are those who abandon this Masjid and go to another one sinful?

A: It is preferable for a Muslim to observe Salah behind an Imam who can perform it perfectly and properly, whether he is the Imam of the neighboring Masjid or another one, provided that nothing bad results from going to the Masjid which is distant from his house.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 291)

As the Imam of the neighboring Masjid or his people may feel embarrassed because he abandoned them and went to other people.

Q 4: There are two rooms in our Masjid (mosque); a small room where we observe Salah (Prayer) if we are few in number, and the other room is a bigger one and we use it to observe Salah if we are many. Each room has a Mihrab and a wooden panel. Some people said that this is not permissible. What is the ruling in this regard?

A: If putting a wooden panel in the Mihrab in a Masjid is intended for a good purpose such as putting the Mus-hafs (Qur'an-books) and the books on it, or it is in the form of a closet for keeping the special things of the Masjid, or it is used to indicate the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) or the Mihrab, this will be permissible. If it is intended for a bad reason such as believing in it and wiping themselves against it to seek blessing, it will not be permissible and it must be removed.

Q 4: Which supplication should a person say upon entering and leaving the Masjid (mosque)?

A: When a Muslim enters a Masjid, they should put forward their right foot and say, "Bismillah was-salatu was-salam 'ala Rasulillah. A'udhu bi-lahil 'azim wa bi-wajhihil karim wa sultanihil qadim min al-shaytan il-rajim. Allahuma iftah li abwab rahmatika

Fatwa no. 20585

Q: Your Eminence, my father and I built a Masjid (mosque) near my house about fifteen years ago; as we live together alone in the area. After some time, a neighbor of mine built a house then he built a Masjid bigger than mine. It is built of concrete and it occupies a large area and lies on a line. Upon finishing the construction of this Masjid, we offered congregational Salah (prayer) together. But I have doubt concerning my Masjid where I previously used to offer Salah, so I asked Shaykh Sa'd Al-Hijri about it and he said, "You should not abandon your old Masjid and you should offer Salah therein until you ask the opinion of Sahykh 'Abdul-'Aziz. Therefore, I would like you to tell me: should I offer salah in the old Masjid or with my neighbor in the new one? If your legal opinion is that I should offer congregational Prayer in the Masjid of my neighbor, what about my old Masjid; should I keep it in case I may need it or should I demolish it? May Allah protect you!

A: All of you should offer Salah in the same Masjid; because Islam calls for gathering and forbids separation. Regarding your old Masjid which you substituted with the new one, you should refer to the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Daw'ah, and Guidance because it is specialized in such matters.

Qiblah

Fatwa no. 16003

Q: I am a Muslim young man and I have been living in the Netherlands for a year. Now, I reside in an area where there is no Masjid (mosque) at all, so I offer Salah (Prayer) at home. I do not know whether the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) is right or not, what should I do? It should be known that I can not find a job in any other city.

A: Facing the Qiblah direction is one of the conditions of the validity of Salah for those who are far from it (Qiblah). So, you should ask the Islamic centers about it or use a compass or any other means that could determine the Qiblah direction.

Fatwa no. 17279

Q: What is the ruling on a person who arrived at a country (other than his own country) and offered Salah (Prayer) without facing the right Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) unintentionally, though he knows the Qiblah direction? Then he remembered what he did after the due time of the Salah he offered had passed.

A: Whoever offers Salah in a direction other than towards the Qiblah due to negligence, as they neither asked nor searched for the indicators of the Qiblah direction, should repeat the Salah.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 295)

Facing the direction of the Qiblah is one of the conditions of the validity of Salah, so far as it is in one's power. Therefore, whoever forgetfully offers Salah in a direction other than towards the right Qiblah, should repeat the Salah due to violating one of the conditions of its validity.

Q 2: What is the ruling on turning away slightly from the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) outside Makkah, to avoid pillars affecting the straightness of the row for congregational Salah (Prayer)?

A: It is obligatory on those performing Salah, who cannot see the Ka'bah, to face the direction of the Ka'bah. Turning slightly away from the Qiblah does not matter. However, it is Makruh (reprehensible) to stand between pillars for salah if they interrupt the rows, except in the situation when the Masjid (mosque) is small and there are many worshippers performing Salah.

Q: Is the Hadith that states: ("Whatever is between east and west is Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah),") just related to the East or it is a generally applicable Hadith? For example, we in Algeria can perform Salah (Prayer) from the east to the west, according to a shaykh in one of the learning circles. This shaykh is a student of knowledge, not having reached the level of a scholar yet. I heard others who are better than him saying the opposite; that this is a matter related to 'Ibadah (worship) and the basic rule is that all acts of 'Ibadah are Tawqifiy (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion). Please advise us and may Allah protect you!

A: The Hadith you mentioned concerns the people of Madinah and residents of places lying in its direction, either to the north or south of the Ka'bah. Qiyas (analogy) is to be made in relation to other directions. So, the Qiblah for the people to the east and the west lies between the north and the south. This is by way of making things easy for the Muslims, because facing the exact direction of the Ka'bah for those who can not see it will be difficult. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(so turn your face in the direction of Al-Masjid-al-Harâm \(at Makkah\). And wheresoever you people are, turn your faces \(in prayer\) in that direction.\)

Intention

The first question of Fatwa no. 18184

Q 1: Is it permissible to make the intention for Salah (Prayer) in a language other than Arabic?

A: The place of intention is the heart, so it is not required to say it in words, whether in Arabic or any other language. In fact, expressing it in words is Bid'ah (innovation in religion). As for the recitation of Qur'an and the prescribed Adhkar (invocations) during Salah (Prayer), it is obligatory for them to be recited in Arabic, and it not valid in any other language. So, those who do not know them in Arabic must learn them.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18371

Q 3: I pronounced Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and then started the Salah (Prayer) with the intention of it being an obligatory Salah. I then remembered that I had not yet performed the two Sunnah (supererogatory) Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). Is it permissible for me to change my intention from obligatory to supererogatory Salah without ending the Salah I am performing? May Allah bless you and grant you all goodness!

A: It is permissible for a Muslim who started to perform an obligatory Salah to change it to supererogatory Salah for a sound reason. For example, if someone started to perform Salah alone and then a group of people came and he wanted to perform Salah in congregation with them or for another similar valid reason, such as

Q 3: Is the phrase: "I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan," said at the beginning of the Salah (Prayer), suffices to express the set intention?

A: the place of intention is the heart, and it is a condition for the validity of 'Ibadah (worship). The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("Actions are only according to intentions, and every person shall have but that which they intended."\) Therefore, Isti'adhah (seeking refuge with Allah from Satan) does not suffice instead of intention. The sixth question of Fatwa no. 20308

Q 6: In preparation to offer the obligatory Salah (Prayer) before pronouncing Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), we say: "O Allah! I make the intention to offer the four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer facing the direction of the Ka`bah, the Sacred House of Allah and following the faith of Ibrahim (Abraham) and Muhammad, Hanifa [Islamic Monotheism, i.e. to worship none but Allah (Alone)], and I am not a Mushrik (one who associates others with Allah in His Divinity or worship)." What is the ruling on this?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 299)

A: Intention is an act of `Ibadah (worship) and acts of `Ibadah are Tawqifiy (bound by a Islamic text and not amenable to personal opinion). The intention is to be in the heart and pronouncing it is a sort of Bid`ah (innovation in religion). Neither the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) nor his successors and Companions pronounced it ever. It has been confirmed in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) and other books that \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said to the Bedouin who offered Salah incorrectly, 'When you stand to offer Salah, pronounce Takbir and then recite whatever Ayahs \(verses\) you can from the Qur'an.'"\) In the Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes), it was narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("The key to Salah is Taharah \(ritual purification\); its beginning is Takbir and its end is Taslim \(salutation of peace ending the Prayer\)."\) It is related in Sahih Muslim on the authority of `Aisha (may Allah be pleased with her) that \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to commence prayer saying, 'Allahu Akbar \(Allah is the Greatest\)' and recite Surah Al-Fatihah."\) It has been authentically reported in Hadith Mutawatirah (Hadith reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon error is impossible) and in the consensus of all Muslims that the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Companions used to begin the Salah with Takbir. It has never been reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) pronounced the intention. Anyone who alleges the permissibility of pronouncing it must be reproved. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("Anyone who does something that we have not ordered \(in worship\) it will be rejected."\) In another narration, \("Anyone who does something in this matter of ours \(the religion\) that is not from it, it will be rejected."\)

The third question of Fatwa no. 18884

Q 3: Upon standing to perform the Salah (Prayer), I usually inaudibly express my intention to offer such and such Salah in congregation, pronounce Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and then say: "Subhanaka

Allahumma wa bihamdika wa tabaraka ismuka wa ta`ala jadduka wa la ilaha ghayruk (Glorified be You, O Allah! And all praise is due to You, Blessed is Your Name and Lofty is Your Majesty, there is no deity but You)." Afterwards, I recite Surah Al-Fatihah and other Ayahs (verses) from the Qur'an. Is the intention I make in this manner correct? I would appreciate your guidance, may Allah bless you!

A: pronouncing the intention is an innovated matter which neither the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) did. Therefore, it is not permissible to pronounce it, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("Anyone who does something in this matter of ours \(the religion\) that is not from it, it will be rejected."\) In another narration, \("Anyone who does something that we have not ordered \(in worship\) it will be rejected."\) Indeed, the intention is to be held in the heart.

Q 1: When Imams (those who lead congregational Prayer) in the Two Sacred Mosques lead the congregational Prayer, what should be their intention for the people (who follow them in the Prayer)? Should their intention include the women who offer Salah (Prayer) behind them? According to Hanafi Madh-hab (school of thought), the intention is necessary and if the Imam does not include women in his intention, their Salah is deemed invalid.

A: If what you have mentioned about Hanafi Madh-hab is true, it has no evidence in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to lead the Muslims while both men and women were standing behind him. Men used to stand directly behind the Prophet (peace be upon him), while women stood behind them. The Prophet (peace be upon him) never mentioned that the intention should include so and so. Indeed, the guidance of Muhammad (peace be upon him) is the best guidance.

Description of Salah

The first question of Fatwa no. 16062

Q 1: A person entered the Masjid (mosque) to offer 'Isha' (Night) Prayer. He offered five Rak'ahs (units of Prayer), so some Muslim brothers asked him why had he done so. His response was that he had not offered Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, so he offered Magrib Prayer (which is three Rak'ahs) and its two supererogatory Rak'ahs together with the same Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), following the example of Abu Al-Darda', the great Companion (may Allah be pleased with him). Is this permissible?

A: It is obligatory upon whomever offers the Maghrib Prayer and its supererogatory Salah (prayer) as five Rak'ahs with one Taslim to offer the Magrib again as three Rak'ahs separately from its supererogatory Salah. Offering both of them with one Taslim is not permissible. Obligatory Salah and supererogatory Salah should be offered separately by concluding the obligatory Salah with Taslim.

Q 3: Sometimes an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) upon starting Salah (prayer) says: "Ya Allahu Akbar (O Allah! the Greatest)" instead of "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)". What is the ruling on his Salah, as he has been warned against this?

A: If anyone says Takbirat-ul-Ihram (upon starting Prayer) as "Ya allahu akbar", this person's Salah and the Salah of those who follow will be Batil (null and void). They must repeat the Salah, because this phrase takes the form of an appeal. If he says Takbir as "Ya Allahu Akbar" in the intervals between parts of Salah, his Salah will be deemed sound. He should make up for this mistake by offering Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) if it was done out of forgetfulness.

Q: What is the ruling on someone uttering Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) before the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer)? Would their Salah (Prayer) be correct in such a case or not? What is the legal evidence on this?

A: If the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) utters Takbirat-ul-Ihram before the Imam, their Salah is not correct. This opinion is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: [\("The Imam is appointed to be followed, so when he says the Takbir \(saying: "Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]"\), you should say it; and do not say the Takbir until he has said it."\)](#) However, if the Ma'mum realizes it and repeats Takbirat-ul-Ihram after the Imam says it, their Salah will be correct.

Q 2: Which is the closest opinion to the Sunnah of the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) regarding raising the hands and pronouncing "Amen" loudly during Salah (Prayer)? Is it that of the scholars of Hadith or that of Al-Hanafiyyah (supporters of the school of Abu Hanifah)?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 304)

The scholars of Hadith confirm raising the hands and pronouncing "Amen" loudly after the Imam in Salah whereas Al-Hanafiyyah do not have that.

A: raising the hands in Salah is authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and it should be done in four positions only: Upon saying Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer), upon Ruku' (bowing), upon raising from Ruku' and upon standing from the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer) to offer the third Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). So, a Muslim should act upon this Sunnah, following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him) even if this disagrees with the juristic school which they support. A Muslim is enjoined to follow the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and take him as their ideal. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Offer Salah \(Prayer\) the way you have seen me offering Salah." If an Imam stated an opinion that contradicts the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him), he may be excused if the Hadith that elaborates on such an issue has not reached him. However, if one knows this Sunnah of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him), he must act according to it and must not neglect it, because whatever is stated in the Qur'an and the Sunnah is the criterion. With regard to saying "Amen" in Jahri salah (Prayer recited out loud) after reciting (what means): \(not \(the way\) of those who earned Your Anger \(i.e. those who knew the Truth, but did not follow it\) nor of those who went astray \(i.e. those who did not follow the Truth out of ignorance and error\).\), it was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: "Say, 'Amen', when the Imam says, 'Amen', for if anyone's utterance of 'Amen' coincides with that of the angels, they will be forgiven their past sins." Moreover, it is narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) and Al-Tirmidhy in his book Al-Jami' Al-Sahih on the authority of Wa'il ibn Hujr (may Allah be pleased with him) \(Whenever the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) said: \(nor of those who went astray.\) he used to say "Amen" raising his voice with it.\) Having that Al-Hanafiyyah do not say "Amen" loudly in Jahri Salah, their opinion is of no value for the preceding Hadiths which represent evidence against them.

The first question of Fatwa no. 14724

Q 1: I lead people in Salah (Prayer). Sometimes, I raise my hands before and after making Ruku' (bowing). One day, a well-known knowledgeable Shaykh offered Salah behind me. After Salah, he went to my father and said to him, "Your son does not follow your Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence)." I asked my father about his Madh-hab, he said that he is a follower of the Hanafy school that does not advocate raising hands after making Ruku'.

Now, what is the ruling on my Salah? Am I obliged to follow this Madh-hab or any of the four well-known Madh-habs (Hanafy, Maliki, Shafi'y, and Hanbaly)?

A: raising one's hands upon pronouncing Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and saying Allahu Akbar on performing ruku' and on rising from it are of the Sunan (supererogatory acts of worship following the example of the Prophet) of Salah. It is authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) did so, as it was narrated by Al-Zuhry on the authority of Salim that his father said: "I saw the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) raising his hands opposite his shoulders upon the beginning of Salah and before making Ruku' and after" lifting his head from Ruku'. But he \(peace be upon him\) did not raise them on making Sujud \(prostration\)." (Reported by Al-Bukhari) 'Aly ibn Al-Madiny said: "Muslims should raise their hands on the grounds of this Hadith."

On the authority of Muhammad ibn 'Amr ibn 'Ata': He said: "I heard Abu Humayd Al-Sa'id, while being in the company of ten of the Companions of the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) including Abu Qatadah, saying: "I know best the way the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to offer Salah. They said: "Show us." He said: "The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to raise his hands opposite his shoulders upon the beginning of Salah. Then he says Allahu Akbar until every bone is settled in its position. Then, he recites the Qur'an. Then he says Allahu Akbar and raises his hands opposite his shoulders. Then he makes Ruku' putting his palms on his knees holding his head erect without raising or lowering his head too much. Then, he raises his head and says: "Sami'a-l-lahu liman hamidah" \(Allah listens to those who praise Him\). Then, he raises his hands opposite his shoulders. After that they said: "You are right. This is how the Prophet offered Salah." (Reported by Abu Dawud and Al-Tirmidhy) He classed the Hadith as Hasan (good) and Sahih (authentic). Your Salah is valid whether you raised your hands or not, as raising the hands is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). A Muslim should follow what was authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) whether it is in accordance with his Madh-hab or not.

Q 1: I see some people putting their right hands over their left hands while offering Salah (Prayer); why and what is the supporting evidence on this?

A: placing the right hand over the left on the chest while standing during Salah is an authentic Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet): (Wa'il ibn Hujr said that he saw the Prophet (peace be upon him) raising his hands when starting Salah and made Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"). Then, he (the Prophet) wrapped his cloak around himself and placed his right hand over his left hand.) (Reported by Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Habban and Ibn Khuzaymah) The Hadith is supported by the Hadith narrated on the authority of Qabisah ibn Halb Al-Ta'iy from his father and reported by Al-Imam Ahmad in his Musnad through a Hasan (good) Sanad (chain of narrators).

Q 2: There is a Masjid (mosque) that does not permit whoever places the right hand over the left when standing in Salah (Prayer) to offer Salah in it. Is it permissible, due to this, to leave this Masjid and offer Salah at home? Guide me, may Allah guide you!

A: placing the right hand over the left on the chest during Salah when standing is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) that can be left and Salah is valid without it. It is not permissible for you to break away from the congregational Salah for this reason.

Q 1: Is it permissible for the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) to supplicate for themselves in the obligatory Prayer, while leading the Salah (Prayer) in Sujud (prostration) and while sitting to say Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: It is permissible for the Imam and Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) to supplicate for themselves in the singular mode, such as by saying: O My Lord! Forgive me; have mercy upon me; guide me; grant me health; support me; and grant me sustenance. (The Prophet (peace be upon him) taught Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq (may Allah be pleased with him) to say in his Salah: "Allahuma ini zhalamtu nafsi zhulman kathiran wa la yaghfir al-dhunuba ila anta faghfir li maghfiratan min 'indika warhamni inaka anta Al-Ghafur Al-Rahim [O Allah! I have done many injustices to myself (by committing many sins), and no one forgives sins except You. Grant me forgiveness from You and have mercy on me, for You are the Oft-Forgiving, the Most Merciful].") (The Prophet (peace be upon him) advised Mu'adh (may Allah be pleased with him) to say after finishing every Salah: "Allahuma a'ini ala dhikrika, wa shukrika, wa husni ibadatika [O Allah! Help me remember You, thank You and worship You in the best manner].") The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say while in Sujud: ("Allahuma ighfir li dhanbi kullahu, diqahu wa jilahu, wa awalahu wa akhirahu, wa 'alanyatahu wa sirrahu [O Allah forgive me all my sin, small and great, first and last, open and secret].")

But if the Imam is supplicating out loud for themselves and for others in Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer), or while invoking Allah during Friday Khutbah (sermon), they should not supplicate to Allah for themselves only while ignoring the others. Rather, they should supplicate in the plural mode for everybody. Imam Al-Tirmidhy related on the authority of Thawban (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ("It is not lawful for a person to look into the inside of a person's house until he seeks permission; if he looks, he has let himself in (without permission).")

(Part No. 5; Page No. 309)

Nor leads people in Salah (Prayer) and make a supplication to Allah specifically for himself, without (including) them; if he does so, he has betrayed them. Nor stand for Salah while suppressing an urge to urinate/defecate."

The fourth and fifth questions of Fatwa no. 18722

Q 4: There is an Imam who recites the Saying of Allah (Exalted be He):

﴿and say: "My Lord! Bestow on them Your Mercy as they did bring me up when I was young."﴾ in the Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud) then says: "My Lord! Bestow on them Your Mercy as they did bring me up when I was young." And when he recites: ﴿Say (O Muhammad ﷺ): "He is Allâh, (the) One.﴾ he says: "He is Allah, the One," then continues reciting, what is the ruling on this deed?

A: If he does so in obligatory Salah (Prayer), then it is Sunnah to abandon this deed; because, as far as we know, it is not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he did so. But if the reciter does so in a supererogatory Salah such as Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer), it is desirable for him that when he recites an Ayah (Qur'anic Verse) about Mercy to ask Allah for Mercy and when he recites an Ayah about torture, to ask Allah to protect him from torture and when he recites an Ayah about Tasbih (glorification of Allah) to do Tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"). Because it is related by Muslim in (Sahih Muslim) ﴿That Hudhayfah (may Allah be pleased with him) offered Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) one night then described the recitation of the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying he used to recite leisurely and if he recited an Ayah which mentioned Tasbih (glorification of Allah), he would glorify Allah; if he recited an Ayah which mentioned begging, he would beg from Him; if he recited an Ayah which mentioned seeking refuge with Allah, he would seek refuge with Him.﴾ As for the deed of some Imams who, on reciting: ﴿Say (O Muhammad ﷺ): "He is Allâh, (the) One.﴾ they say: "He is Allah, the One," it is not permissible. In fact, it is Tasbih that is permissible in Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayer as we mentioned before.

Q 5: Is it obligatory for a person who is offering Salah (prayer) to say isti'adhah ("A'udhu-Billahi mina Al-Shaytan-ir-Rajim [i seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan]) and Basmalah ("Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [in the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]) in each Rak'ah before Surah Al-Fatihah and the following Surah or should he mention Isti'adhah and Basmalah only in the first Rak'ah?

A: It is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) to recite Isti'adhah in the first Rak'ah before reciting Al-Fatihah. It should not be repeated in each Rak'ah because there is no pause between the two recitations (recitation of the first Rak'ah and recitation of the second Rak'ah), but they are only intervened by Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) which is the same as one recitation when intervened by praising Allah, glorification, Tahlil (saying: "La ilaha illa Allah [There is no god except Allah]) or invoking peace and blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) and suchlike.

As for Basmalah, it is prescribed to recite it in each Rak'ah before reciting of Al-Fatihah and before reciting each Surah, except Surah Bara'ah (Al-Tawbah). However, it should not be said loudly in Jahri Salah (Prayer pronounced out loud) as indicated by the authentic Sunnah.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 15455

Q5: If I catch up to the Imam in a Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud) while he is reciting the Surah to be recited after Fatihah, do I have to recite Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) then Surah Al-Fatihah or do I have to recite Du'a'-ul-Istiftah only? Also, if I catch up to the Salah while the imam is in the pose of Ruku' (bowing), do I have to recite Du'a'-ul-Istiftah and Al-Fatihah or the supplication of Ruku'? Also, what should I do in a Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation)? I hope you will explain this to me; May Allah protect you.

A: du'a'-ul-Istiftah is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), but if you fear to miss reciting Al-Fatihah before moving to the Ruku', then recite Al-Fatihah and leave Du'a'-ul-Istiftah. If you fear missing the Ruku', you do not have to recite Du'a'-ul-Istiftah nor Al-Fatihah.

The third and fifth questions of Fatwa no. 14240

Q 3,5: Is it obligatory to recite a Surah (Qur'anic chapter) after Al-Fatihah or it is sufficient to recite Al-Fatihah only in Salah Al-Nafilah (Supererogatory Prayer)? Is it obligatory to say Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) in Salah Al-Nafilah and if it is required, is it obligatory to say it again in the Fard Salah (obligatory Prayer)? It should be noted that I offer Salah Al-Nafilah immediately before or after Salah Al-Fard.

A 3-5: It is an act of Sunnah to offer Du'a'-ul-Istiftah after saying Takbirat-ul-Iharam ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) in Salah Al-Nafilah and Salah Al-Fard. Likewise, it is an act of Sunnah to recite a Surah or some verses of the Qur'an after Al-Fatihah in Salah Al-Nafilah. If a person abandons any of this, they do not have to make up for it.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19383

Q 2: Should Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) be made in every two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of the Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) such as Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) or is it sufficient to say it once at the beginning of praying them?

A: It is not sufficient to offer Du'a'-ul-Istiftah when offering Tarawih in the first Rak'ah only. Du'a'-ul-Istiftah is prescribed at the beginning of each two Nafilah Rak'ahs just as the Faridah (obligatory Prayer). The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say Du'a'-ul-Istiftah when offering Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) which is a Nafilah. The basic ruling is that the Nafilah equals the Faridah except in cases where there is specific evidence, on account of the generality of the Prophet's (peace be upon him) saying: "Pray as you have seen me praying." The same ruling applies to all kinds of Nafilah, such as Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet), Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise), etc.

However, if the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) started reciting the Qur'an out loud before the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) says Du'a'-ul-Istiftah, the latter should listen and should not say Du'a'-ul-Istiftah, based on the general meaning of Allah's Saying: ["So, when the Qur'an is recited, listen to it, and be silent that you may receive mercy. \[i.e. during the compulsory congregational prayers when the Imâm \(of a mosque\) is leading the prayer \(except Sûrat Al-Fâtihah\), and also when he is delivering the Friday-prayer Khutbah\]. \(Tafsir At-Tabari\)."](#) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: ["The Imam is appointed to be followed, so do not be at variance with him; when he says, 'Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\],' say, 'Allahu Akbar'... till he \(peace be upon him\) said, 'and when he recites \(the Qur'an\), listen attentively.'"](#)

Q 5: A woman asks about the ruling on offering Salah (Prayer) and forgetting Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer). Should she repeat the Salah or is Salah valid without it?

A: Du'a'-ul-Istiftah is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), so the Salah of whoever leaves it out is valid; since they do not abandon a Rukn (Pillar) or a Wajib (obligatory act).

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 18591

Q 5: should Du`a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) be said in any salah (prayer) or in the Faridah (obligatory one) only?

A: Du`a'-ul-Istiftah should be said in every Faridah and Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) in the first Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) before reciting Surah Al-Fatihah. It is reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said, ﴿"When offering Salah, the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to keep silent for a short while between Takbirat-ul-Ihram and the recitation of the Qur'an. When I asked him \(about that\), he answered, 'I say: O Allah! Separate me from my sins, as You have separated the East and the West. Purify my heart from sins as You purified the white cloth from stains. O Allah! Wash away my sins with water, snow, and hail.'"﴾ Salah here means both the Faridah and the Nafilah. It has been confirmed from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that ﴿"He used also to say when beginning the Salah: 'Glory be to You and all praise is due to You. Blessed is Your Name, and exalted is Your Position, and there is no other god but You.'"﴾

Q 1: What is the ruling on reciting Basmalah (saying, "Bismillah Al-rahman, Al-rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]") loudly when reciting Surah Al-Fatihah in Salah (Prayer)?

Is it of Al-Sab'-ul-Mathany (Seven Oft-repeated Verses, Surah Al-Fatihah) or not?

A: According to the soundest opinion, the Basmalah is not part of the Fatihah or any other Surah (Qur'anic chapter); rather, it is an independent Ayah (Qur'anic verse) and part of an Ayah in Surah Al-Naml in Allah's Saying: ﴿Verily it is from Sulaimân (Solomon), and verily, it (reads): In the Name of Allâh, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful:﴾ It is Mustahab (desirable) to recite it at the beginning of each Surah save for Surah Bara'ah (At-Tawbah). The Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) is to recite the Basmalah silently before the Fatihah. It is reported that ﴿the Prophet (peace be upon him), Abu Bakr and 'Umar used to begin Salah with "Al-Hamdu lil-lahi Rabbil-'Alamin (All praises are for Allah the Lord of the Worlds).﴾ This provides evidence to the fact that they did not recite the Basmalah loudly. However, if it was an Ayah of the Qur'an, they would have recited it loudly.

Q: What is the ruling on the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who says in Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud) "Bism Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]" instead of "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]"?

A: A Muslim should say, "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim" in Salah or elsewhere as it is mentioned in the Ever-Glorious Qur'an and Prophetic Hadiths. It is wrong to omit the word "Allah" and say "Bism Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim", for this contradicts what is mentioned in the Qur'an and Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). However, the Salah of whoever omits it is valid in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), for the Basmalah (saying, "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]") is an independent Ayah (Qur'anic verse) at the beginning of each Surah (Qur'anic chapter), except for Surah Bara'ah (At-Tawbah). It is not part of Al-Fatihah or any other Surah according to the soundest scholarly opinion. However, it is part of an Ayah in Surah Al-Naml.

"Al-Hamdulilah Kathiran" (All Praise is due to Allah in abundance) thrice. "Subhan Allah Bukratan wa Asila" (Glorified be Allah in the morning and in the evening) thrice or is it sufficient to say each one of them one time? Should we say after this Du'a': I seek refuge with Allah from the devil, from his his evil insinuation, his puffing up, and his pride or not?

A: It was authentically reported that one of du'a'-ul-Istiftah is the following: "Allahu Akbar Kabiran, wa al-Hamdulilah Kathiran, wa Subhan Allah Bukratan wa Asila." (Allah is the Greatest, All Praise is due to Allah in abundance, Glorified be Allah in the morning and the evening). Q 7: What is the ruling on the person who knows that he should recite Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) at the start of Salah (Prayer) but does not recite it because he cannot memorize it due to forgetting much? If he remembers it, he recites it, but when he forgets, he starts Salah with reciting Al-Fatihah after Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer). He does not recite it out of negligence, but out of forgetfulness and bad memory. Is his Salah valid without the recitation of Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer)? Also, what is the ruling on a person who recites the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer) but with a little difference from the same description reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him)? Is this valid? As for invoking Allah's blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) after Tashahhud, is it permissible to recite a shortened form of it, that is, "O Allah send your peace and blessings upon Muhammad" which is different from the formula of the invocations the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to teach his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet)?

As for the sitting between the two times of prostration, is it permissible to recite any invocation instead of the authentically reported invocations to be recited in sitting? What is the ruling on a person who extends his two feet and sits on them in Salah without making Iftirash (placing the left foot to the side and sitting on it between the two prostrations, keeping the right foot vertical) when he should nor Tawarruk (placing the left foot under the right leg and sitting on the posterior during the last Tashahhud) when he should because he cannot make Iftirash or Tawarruk?

A: First: Every Muslim has to learn the matters that are essential for a valid Salah such as the pillars of Salah, its obligatory acts, and conditions of Salah. It is desirable for a Muslim to learn the rest of the desirable supplementary matters in Salah such as Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) based on the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \("Pray as you have seen me praying."\) (Related by Al-Bukhari) But whoever cannot learn some supplications of Salah (Prayer) due to old age or illiteracy, his Salah is valid because of the Saying of Allah (Exalted be He): \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) and the Saying of Allah (Glorified be He): \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) and the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \("When I command you to do anything, do of it as much as you can."\) But a Muslim has to do his best with regards to observing the obligatory matters in Salah and repeat them until he masters them, even if after a while.

Second: The person offering Salah should adhere to the authentically reported invocations from the Prophet (peace be upon him) between the two prostrations. He may say: "O My Lord, forgive me" and repeat it or say: "O Allah! Forgive me, have mercy on me, correct me, guide me, protect me and provide for me."

Third: The manner of sitting in salah whether Iftirash or Tawarruk are acts of Sunnah as authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

If the person performing Salah can not do them because of a disease or old age or the like, there is no blame on him and his Salah is valid.

Q: If a person sneezes while offering salah (Prayer), should they say "Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah]"? Also, if a person yawns while offering Salah, do they have to say Isti`adhah (saying: "A`udhu-Billahi mina Al-Shaytan -ir-Rajim [I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan]"?)

A: If a person offering Salah sneezes, they should say, "Alhamdu lillah" in a low voice; because there are authentically reported Hadith from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that indicate the permissibility of saying so. As for Isti`adhah after yawning, there is no origin for it in the Shari`ah (Islamic law). However, the person who yawns should hold themselves from yawning as much as they can, but there is no problem if they say Isti`adhah while yawning in or outside Salah.

Q 2: It is recorded in Sahih Muslim (on the authority of 'Uthman ibn Abu Al-'As (may Allah be pleased with him) came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said, "O Messenger! Satan comes between me and my Salah (Prayer) and my recitation of the Qur'an and confounds me." The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, "That is a devil called Khanzab! If you sense him, seek refuge with Allah from him and spit dryly to your left three times." He (Uthman) said, "So I did and Allah rid me of him.")

My question now is: how can I seek refuge with Allah from the cursed Satan and spit dryly to my left thrice during Salah? Should I turn and spit dryly and seek refuge with Him during Salah, although I know that moving the head right and left is one of the things which are reprehensible during Salah? What is the meaning of the Hadith? Could you kindly explain?

A: The Hadith should be acted upon according to its apparent meaning, as it is reported. Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful to him) commented on this Hadith in his book "Zad Al-Ma'ad" vol. 3 p. 29 as follows: Among that - its benefits - is that when a person seeks refuge with Allah from the cursed Satan and spits dryly to his left, nothing of that will harm him. This will not interrupt his Salah, but this leads to its perfection and completion.

Recitation

Q 8: Some people say that there is nothing wrong in saying this supplication: "subhan Allah" (Glory be to Allah), "Al-Hamdu-lillah" (Praise be to Allah), "La-Ilaha Illa Allah" (There is no god except Allah) and "Allahu Akbar" (Allah is the Greatest) three times instead of Al-Fatihah during the last two Raka'ahs of the four-Rak'ah salah (Prayer consisting of four units) and the third Rak'ah of Maghrib (sunset) Prayer. Is this correct?

A: Reciting Al-Fatihah is one of the pillars of every Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of Salah (Prayer). The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "No Salah \(Prayer\) for the one who does not recite Fatiha-tul-Kitab \(the Opening of the Book, i.e. Al-Fatihah\)." Moreover, this is substantiated by the deed of the Prophet (peace be upon him), for he (peace be upon him) used to recite it in every Rak'ah. Therefore, no other supplication can stand for it except for a person who cannot recite or learn it.

Q 5: if i doubt that i have read Al-Fatihah, should i repeat it?

A: If you are a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) and you doubt whether you have recited Al-Fatihah or not, you do not have to repeat Salah (Prayer), as the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recites it on your behalf.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 323)

However, if you are the Imam or you offer Salah alone, and you doubt whether you have recited Al-Fatihah or not, you should recite it if you remember it before Ruku' (bowing). If you remember this after having performed Ruku' in the Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) in which you doubted whether you recited Al-Fatihah, you should consider this Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) cancelled and offer another one instead of it, then continue your Salah and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) at the end. If you remember this close to Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), you should repeat the Rak'ah in which you doubted whether you recited Al-Fatihah, and the Rak'ah after it will count in its place, and then perform Sujud-ul-Sahw and offer Taslim. If you remember this after Taslim, and there is a long intervening period, you should repeat the whole Salah, due to lengthy interruption, because reciting Al-Fatihah is one of the pillars of Salah, without which it is considered invalid.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17549

Q 3: How can we reconcile between the following two Hadiths: “No Salah \(Prayer\) for the one who does not recite Fatiha-tul-Kitab \(the Opening of the Book, i.e. Al-Fatihah\).” and: “Anyone who catches up with one Rak’ah from Salah has caught up with the Salah.” Is it obligatory to recite Al-Fatihah in every rak’ah? Could you kindly advise? May Allah protect you!

A: There is no contradiction between the obligation of reciting Surah Al-Fatihah in Salah and the fact of catching up with the Rak’ah by catching up with Ruku’.

In this case, Fatihah will not be obligatory for the latecomer, because the position where it should be recited is missed, that is Qiyam (standing) which is a Rukn (essential element) in each Rak’ah for both the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the Munfarid (one praying one). It is also an obligation on the Ma’mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) but it is removed if they forget, or do not know its ruling, or do not catch up the recital of Fatihah with the Imam, based on the Hadith of reported by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih Book on the authority of Abu Bakrah \(may Allah be pleased with him\) that he came to the Masjid \(mosque\) while the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was in the Ruku’, so he knelt down before he could join the row then he stood in the row. Thereupon, the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said to him after Taslim \(salutation of peace ending the Prayer\), “May Allah increase your zeal, but do not repeat it again.” The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not command Abu Bakrah to make up the Rak’ah, which indicates that the Ma’mum is exempted from reciting Al-Fatihah in such a case. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 20133

Q 3: Does making mistakes in recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah nullify Salah (Prayer)? For example, a person may mispronounce words like "Al-Sirat" (Path) or "An`amta" (You have bestowed favor).

A: The Lahn (incorrect recitation due to mispronunciation of letters or grammatical mistakes) that nullifies Salah is the mistake that changes the meaning of the words, such as the mispronunciation of words like "Al-Sirat" or "An`amta".

Q: Does it suffice me to recite Qur'an only in my heart in Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation) without moving my tongue?

The second question of Fatwa no. 17626

Q 2: What is the ruling on reciting the Qur'an while offering Jahri Salah (Prayer recited aloud) behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer)?

A: It is obligatory upon the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) to recite Al-Fatihah at the pauses left by the Imam in Jahri Salah and also in Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation), because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “No Salah \(Prayer\) for the one who does not recite Fatiha-tul-Kitab \(the Opening of the Book, i.e. Al-Fatihah\).” If the Imam does not pause in Jahri Salah, the Ma'mum has to recite it while the Imam is reciting the Qur'an and then listen to him. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “Perhaps you recite behind your Imam?” We \(the Companions\) said, “Yes, it is so, O Messenger of Allah.” He \(peace be upon him\) said, “Do not do that except with Fatiha-tul-Kitab \(i.e. Al-Fatihah\); for there is no Salah \(prayer\) for the one who does not recite it.” However, if the Ma'mum is ignorant of the ruling, forgets to recite it or can not recite it because he came while the Imam was offering Ruku' (bowing), reciting Al-Fatihah is overlooked for him because of the Hadith of Abu Bakarah Al-Thaqafy which is recorded in Sahih (compilation of authentic Hadith) Al-Bukhari.

Q: If the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recites Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Fatihah until its end then he starts another long Surah and I recite Surah Al-Fatihah then another Surah such as Surah Al-Inshiqaq from its very beginning to Allah's saying: ﴿What is the matter with them, that they believe not?﴾ ﴿And when the Qur'ân is recited to them, they fall not prostrate.﴾ while the Imam is still doing his recitation; what do I have to do? Do I have to make Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) then stand up again or do I have to wait for the Imam until he makes Sujud?

A: In the Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud), the Ma'mum (the people being led by an Imam in Prayer) only have to recite Surah Al-Fatihah during the pause left by the Imam, then they must listen to the recitation of their Imam. Proof for the foregoing is Allah's saying: ﴿So, when the Qur'ân is recited, listen to it, and be silent that you may receive mercy. [i.e. during the compulsory congregational prayers when the Imâm (of a mosque) is leading the prayer (except Sûrat Al-Fâtihah), and also when he is delivering the Friday-prayer Khutbah]. (Tafsir At-Tabari).﴾ Regarding Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation), the Ma'mum have to recite Al-Fatihah and then what they can of the Qur'an during the first two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). In such a case, the Ma'mum should not make Sujud when they come to an Ayah (Qur'anic verse) of Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation). this is because no Sujud is to be done by the Ma'mum except following the Imam for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿The Imam is appointed to be followed, so do not be at variance with him.﴾

Q 2: what is the ruling on a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) who recites Al-Fatihah before the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recites it in a Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud)? Is this considered precedence to the Imam? Is Salah considered valid in this case?

A: There is nothing wrong in reciting Al-Fatihah by the Ma'mum before the Imam. This is not considered precedence to the Imam, as the Ma'mum has to read it as well. However, if the Imam pauses for a while after reciting Al-Fatihah, it is better for the Ma'mum to recite it during this period of silence, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) instructed, saying, \("When he \(the Imam\) recites \(the Qur'an\), listen attentively."\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said, [\("Perhaps you recite behind your Imam?" Q 3: is it Wajib (obligatory) that a person recites a Surah (Qur'anic chapter) or some Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) after reciting Surah Al-Fatihah in a Sunnah (supererogatory) Prayer?

A: The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to recite Surah Al-Fatihah along with one or more other Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) in each Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). However, if a Muslim prays a Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) and recites only Surah al-Fatihah in each Rak'ah, this will be sufficient. The second question of Fatwa no. 20740

Q 2: Is it permissible for a person who does not speak Arabic but speaks French or English to offer Salah (Prayer) in these languages or must they perform Salah in Arabic only?

A: If a Muslim can learn Arabic, they must do so in order to say the Adhkar (recitation, invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) of Salah such as Qur'an, Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and supplications. If they can not learn Arabic, they can offer Salah according to their condition and recite the Adhkar in their own language. As for reciting the Qur'an, it is overlooked in such a case because they can not recite it in Arabic. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allāh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ The Qur'an can not be recited in any language other than Arabic.

Q 3: Is it permissible to recite the Qur'an during Salah (Prayer) in a language other than Arabic since Salah in other religions can be offered in different languages?

A: Reciting the Glorious Qur'an during Salah is an act of worship which Allah (Exalted be He) enjoined on us. So, it is impermissible to recite the Qur'an during Salah or elsewhere in a language other than Arabic and if one does so, their Salah is null and void. The first question of Fatwa no. 15917

Q 1: What does a person have to do when their heart is not attuned to what they read in the Salah (Prayer)? Do they have to repeat the recitation?

A: The only Wajib (obligatory) recitation without which Salah becomes invalid is the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah. All other recitations are just Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). Accordingly, whoever is not sure whether they have recited Al-Fatihah and they are still in the Salah; they have to recite it a second time. However, if a person frequently finds the same doubt; this is tantamount to Waswasah (Insinuating or obsessive thoughts instigated by Satan), then no attention should be paid to this.

Q: I mistakenly recited the Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer) instead of Surah Al-Fatihah and I did not realize that until after I had finished performing the Ruku' (bowing) in that Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). My question is: Should I perform the two Sujud (prostrations) of Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), sit to recite the Tashahhud, and then say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), or go back and recite Al-Fatihah, perform the Ruku' again, and then conclude the Salah (Prayer)? The latter will confuse me, as well as the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer). What should I do if this happens in the future? Please tell us, and may Allah reward you greatly.

A: If an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or a Munfarid (one praying alone) forgets to recite Surah Al-Fatihah and does not remember until after the Ruku', they are obligated to stand back again to recite Al-Fatihah and then recite some Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) from the Qur'an, if this occurs before reciting the first Tashahhud. If it occurs after reciting the first Tashahhud, they should just recite Al-Fatihah, perform the Ruku', and complete their Salah, ending with Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). This is because reciting Surah Al-Fatihah is a Rukn (integral/Pillar) of Salah, and it will not be valid without reciting Al-Fatihah. In the case of a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) praying behind an Imam who forgets Al-Fatihah, they should continue with the Ruku'; they should not stand back to recite Al-Fatihah after rising from the Ruku', because this is not obligatory on them as the position where it should be recited has passed.

Q 2: A high school student led his schoolmates in the Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan), but he forgot an Ayah (Qur'anic verse) from one of the Surahs (Qur'anic chapters).

However, he did not know about it until after he had finished the Salah (Prayer) and his friends brought it to his attention. He was confused as to whether he should repeat the Salah or what to do? Would his Salah be accepted if he did not repeat it? What is the ruling concerning this matter?

A: When the Imam forgets an Ayah from Surah Al-Fatihah, and does not remember until a long time afterwards, he should repeat the Salah, if it is a Faridah (obligatory Salah). This is because reciting Al-Fatihah is a Rukn (integral/Pillar) of the Salah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “No Salah (Prayer) for the one who does not recite Fatiha-tul-Kitab (the Opening of the Book, i.e. Al-Fatihah).”

However, if he remembers it shortly after his Salah, then he can offer another Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), instead of the Rak'ah in which he forgot to recite an Ayah from Surah Al-Fatihah, then performs Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). If the Ayah forgotten is not from Surah Al-Fatihah, then his Salah is correct, and neither he nor the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) need to do anything, because reciting more than Surah Al-Fatihah is Mustahab (desirable) and not Wajib (obligatory).

Q: What is the ruling on reciting a Surah (Qur'anic chapter) after Al-Fatihah in the first two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer)? If someone forgets to recite them, can they recite them instead in the third and fourth Rak'ahs or should they perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness)?

A: It is legislated in the Shari'ah (Islamic law) for the one offering Salah (Prayer) to recite a Surah after reciting Al-Fatihah in the first two Rak'ahs, as Abu Qatadah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated: [“The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to recite the Opening of the Book \(Al-Fatihah\) followed by another Surah in the first two Rak'ahs of the Zhuhr \(Noon\) and the 'Asr \(Afternoon\) Prayers. Q: Is it permissible to recite a Surah before reciting Al-Fatihah in Salah (Prayer)?

A: It is not permissible to recite a Surah before reciting Al-Fatihah in Salah, because this disagrees with the authentic Sunnah reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). He (peace be upon him) used to say Takbirat Al-Ihram (The Opening Takbir : Commencement of Prayer by uttering "Allah is the Greatest "by saying "Allahu Akbar"), then he recited Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer), then said Isti'adhah (saying: "A'udhu-Billahi mina Al-Shaytan-ir-Rajim [I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan]"), then Tasmiyah (saying, "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]"), then recited Surah Al-Fatihah, then he and those led by him in Salah said, "Amen" in the Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud). Then he read what he could of the Qur'an in the first two Rak'ahs of four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units), in Salah Al-Maghrib and Salah Al-Fajr. Q 2: I offered Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) once behind an Imam (one who leads congregational Prayer). In one of the Rak`ahs (units of Prayer), he recited the part of Surah Al-Mutaffifin that states, ﴿Nay! Truly, the Record (writing of the deeds) of the Fujjâr (disbelievers, polytheists, sinners, evil-doers and the wicked) is (preserved) in Sijjîn.﴾ (And what will make you know what Sijjîn is?) ﴿A Register inscribed.﴾ Then he recited "which is witnessed by those brought near [to Allah]." However, the correct Ayah (Qur'anic verse) is ﴿Woe, that Day, to those who deny.﴾ He then performed Ruku` (bowing) during which he recognized his fault, although no one corrected him. He interrupted his Ruku`, stood up, and told the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) that the Rak`ah is invalid, because he had drastically changed the meaning of the Ayah. He pronounced Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), repeated the Rak`ah and continued the Salah.

Is what this Imam did correct? Is this Rak`ah invalid?

What should I do if it was actually invalid?

A: If the situation is as you mentioned, what the Imam did was out of forgetfulness. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) pardons the Muslims for this. The Salah is valid, and it does not have to be repeated, whether the error is done by the Imam or anyone of the congregation. They should continue their Salah according to Allah's statement, ﴿Our Lord! Punish us not if we forget or fall into error﴾ It was authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Allah (may He be Glorified) said (in response to the supplication in this Ayah), 'I have done.'﴾

Q: What is the ruling on a person who recites some surah (Qur'anic chapter) then forgets or makes mistakes in some Ayahs of it, should they skip the Ayahs in which they made mistakes or forgot and resume recitation of the following Ayahs from the same Surah? For example, a person recites from the beginning of Surah Al-Baqarah to the Saying of Allah: (and they are the successful.) then makes a mistake or forgets to recite the Ayah: (Verily, those who disbelieve, it is the same to them whether you (O Muhammad ﷺ) That is, they skipped ten Ayahs from the same Surah then moved to the following Ayahs in the same Surah. This happened in the same Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). Is this permissible or do they have to move to another Surah?

A: If the worshipper offering Salah (Prayer) finds it difficult to remember a specific Ayah, or has actually forgotten it, there is nothing wrong in skipping the forgotten Ayah and reciting the one after it. But it is prescribed that the worshipper should only recite during Salah those Ayahs which they know very well by heart in order to avoid making many mistakes.

Q 1: What should I do if i recited the Qur'an loudly in the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and those praying behind me notified me about this mistake but i did not stop, forgetting that it was a Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation)?

A: It is authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to recite the Qur'an loudly in the two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and in the first two Rak'ahs of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer. He (peace be upon him) used to recite the Qur'an subvocally in the Zhuhr and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers and in the third Rak'ah of the Maghrib and the two last Rak'ahs of the 'Isha'. Accordingly, Muslims should abide by the deeds of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Sunnah is to recite loudly in the Salahs that he (peace be upon him) used to offer as Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud) and to recite subvocally in the Salahs that he (peace be upon him) used to offer as Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation). It is prescribed for the Ummah (nation based on one creed) of Muhammad (peace be upon him) to follow his example. It is authentically reported that he (peace be upon him) said: "Pray as you have seen me praying." If a worshipper offering Salah, whether an Imam or a Munfarid (one praying alone), makes subvocal recitation in the Jahri Salah or recites out loudly in the Sirri Salah and remembers during the recitation, he should resume based on what he had recited. It is Mustahab (desirable) to recite subvocally in the remaining part if he is offering Sirri Salah or to recite out loud if he is offering Jahri Salah. If he makes subvocal recitation in the Jahri Salah on purpose or vice versa, he thus abandons the Sunnah, but his Salah is not invalidated. Accordingly, there is nothing on you for continuing to recite loudly in the Zhuhr Prayer, as long as you forgot, and your Salah is valid in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Fatwa no. 16294

Q: Is it permissible to offer the supererogatory Salah (prayer) out loud?

A: It is a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) to recite subvocally during voluntary Salah if it is performed during daylight. As for offering voluntary Salah at night, it is a Sunnah to recite out loud if it does not disturb those around the performer of Salah because saying recitation out loud at night wards off Satanic insinuations and it is more energizing for the reciter. Hudhayfah narrated that when he stood up to offer Salah with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him), the Messenger (peace be upon him) recited Surah Al-Baqarah, Al-Nisa' and Ali-'Imran and whenever he recited an Ayah that speaks of mercy, he asked Allah for mercy and whenever he recited an Ayah that speaks of torture, he sought refuge with Allah. This indicates that the Prophet (peace be upon him) recited loudly during voluntary Salah at night.

Q: Thanks to Allah, I performed the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer in congregation. Then, while I was offering the Shaf' (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer) and after making Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and reciting some of the Fatihah, a man stood by my side to offer the 'Isha'. Which is better: To recite out loud or subvocally?

A: You should recite loud enough so the person offering Salah with you can hear you, whether you offer Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) or Faridah (obligatory prayer) at night, if there is someone else offering Salah with you; but if there is no one praying with you, it is permissible for you to make subvocal or loud recitation.

Q 1: i always recite Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-inshirah in the first Rak'ah of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. I believe that when I recite this Surah in particular I will start a new day. I memorized many Surahs. What is the ruling on specifying the first Raka'ah of the Fajr with a certain Surah i.e. Al-Inshirah? What is the ruling on my belief and feeling that this will be a new day when I recite Surah Al-Inshirah, though I do not have this feeling when I read any other Surah?

A: It is prescribed to prolong recitation in the Fajr Prayer and to recite of the Qur'an as much as may be easy for you after the Fatihah without specifying one Surah, except for what is particularized by the evidence such as Surah Al-Sajdah and Al-Insan in the Fajr on Friday. Specifying a certain Surah without evidence is Bid'ah (innovation in religion).

Q: What is the ruling on an irregular Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who offers the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer reciting the short Surahs (Qur'anic Chapter)? Is his Salah valid or not?

Is he to blame for this?

A: The Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) for the Imam is to recite in the Fajr Prayer after the Fatihah any of the long Mufasssal Surahs (the last 65-70 chapters of the Qur'an). However, if he recites any of the short Surahs, this is permissible and his Salah is valid.

Q: There is an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in our district who has not memorized the entire Qur'an but has memorized some portions of the Surahs (chapters of the Qur'an) so he always repeats them in Salah (Prayer) and never changes them. Is this permissible?

A: The Prophet's manner in reciting the Qur'an in Jahri Salah (Prayer recited aloud) is that he (peace be upon him) used to prolong the recitation after reciting Al-Fatihah in Al-Fajr (Dawn) Prayer by reading from the long Surahs of Mufasssal (the last 65-70 chapters of the Qur'an). In 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to recite from the middle Surahs of Mufasssal and in Al-Magrib (Sunset) Prayer he used to recite from the short Surahs of Mufasssal. Sometimes, he (peace be upon him) used to recite from a Surah other than the Surahs of Mufasssal. There is no blame on the Imam when reciting from portions of the Surahs he memorizes, because recitation after Al-Fatihah is an act of Sunnah. However, the Imam should exert some effort to memorize as much as he can of the Qur'an so that he can recite it in Jahri Salah to comply with the purified Sunnah.

Q: I entered the Masjid (mosque) during the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and found that the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) had already offered two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer), but I caught one Rak'ah with the congregation. What should I do in the last Rak'ah? Should I offer it out loud or subvocally? Many people offer it out loud, but I think it should be offered subvocally.

A: If someone catches the Imam in the last Rak'ah of the Maghrib Prayer, they should join the Imam in offering it and it will be counted for them as their first Rak'ah. When the Imam concludes with the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), they should get up and offer a Rak'ah and offer it out loud or subvocally, whichever they wish - the former being the preferable. They should then sit for the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer), after which they should get up and offer the third Rak'ah. They should then sit for the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer) and conclude with the Taslim. the last Ayah (Qur'anic verse) of it: (Is not Allāh the Best of judges?) he says loudly: "Truly! We are witnesses to this." Is their any textual proof for the foregoing? Is whoever does so considered sinful?

A: No authentic proof is reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) to the effect that what is mentioned in the question or anything else is to be said after the recitation of Surah Al-Tin. A: Only a complete Ayah or more can be recited in Salah after Surah Al-Fatihah. It is not sufficient to recite part of an Ayah, because Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(So, recite you of the Qur'an as much as may be easy for you.\) Reciting part of an Ayah is not considered a recitation, although if someone does it, their Salah is valid, because it is not obligatory to recite a Surah (Qur'anic chapter) after Al-Fatihah.

Q 3: I heard some Imams say some quiet comments after reciting some Ayahs speaking of torture or glad tidings after Al-Fatihah: for example after the last Ayah of Surah Al-Qiyamah: (Is not He (Allâh Who does that) Able to give life to the dead? (Yes! He is Able to do all things).) We hear the Imam says: "Glory be to You! Yes indeed!" Another example from Surah 'Ammah: (Truly, Hell is a place of ambush -) after which the Imam may say: "O Allah, protect us from it." What is the ruling on such words which are not part of the Ayahs whether the Imam recites it in an audible or inaudible voice?

A: If the Imam asks Allah, seeks refuge and glorifies Him at every suitable ayah during voluntary Salah, it is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that this is Mustahab (desirable), as in the Hadith of Hudhayfah in (Sahih Muslim) when he described the Prophet's Salah (Prayer) and his recitation at night, saying: ("When he (peace be upon him) recited an Ayah which mentioned Tasbih (glorification of Allah), he would glorify Allah; when he recited an Ayah which mentioned begging, he would beg from Him; when he recited an Ayah which mentioned seeking refuge with Allah, he would seek refuge with Him.") If a person does this in the obligatory Salah, it is better for him not to do it because it was not reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) did that during the obligatory Salah.

Q 1: at times the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) may recite ayahs (Qur'anic verses) that mention Jannah (Paradise) or Hell-fire in Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud), is it permissible for the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) to ask allah to grant them Jannah and protect them from Hell-fire if the Imam does not do so? Also, is it permissible for the Ma'mum to send blessings on the Prophet (peace be upon him) when the Imam recites Ayahs which mention the Prophet (peace be upon him)?

A: To be on the safe side, a Muslim should do so only while offering a supererogatory Salah (Prayer). This is because it is reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used only to do so while performing Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) and Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿Indeed in the Messenger of Allāh \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) you have a good example to follow﴾ Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"Pray as you have seen me praying."﴾

They even believe that if an Imam recites it, his house will burn down on that very night. Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: believing that reciting Surah Al-Masad brings a curse on the Imam and the Ma'mums, or that the reciter's house will burn, is untrue. It is a false belief, for Surah Al-Masad is like any other Surah in the Qur'an; it may be recited in Salah and at any other time.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18251

Q 3: My mother is deaf. She is uneducated. She lived most of her life in the desert but she came to live in the city only nineteen years ago. As my mother started to be deaf when she was ten years old, such a disease has had a bad effect on the way she pronounces different letters. For example, she pronounces the Arabic letter "ع" (ʿAyn) as "ح" (Ha') and so on. Our main problem with our mother relates to Salah (Prayer). When we teach her Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Fatihah and another Surah (to recite them in the Salah), our mother can not pronounce letters correctly. Moreover, our mother does not know about the messengers, Messenger Muhammad (peace be upon him), Jannah (Paradise), and Hell-fire. She does not know about afterlife punishment, resurrection, and judgment. When she watches television, she neither hears it nor knows its dangers. However, she only watches the news and historical television series. Could you please provide us with your beneficial advice?

A: You have to teach your mother whatever she can learn from the Qur'an and different matters of her Din (religion). On the other hand, your mother is not to be blamed for being unable to pronounce some letters correctly.

Ta'min (saying "Amen") after reciting Surah Al-Fatihah

Fatwa no. 20036

Q: The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: (Say, "Amen" when the Imam says, "Amen", for if anyone's utterance of "Amen" coincides with that of the angels, he will be forgiven his past sins) But, one finds people today neglecting this Sunnah even in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah). Please, elaborate on this matter and what do you say to Imams of Masjids (mosques) who are obliged to direct people to this rite of worship?

A: First, the mentioned Hadith is recorded by Al-Bukhari and Muslim in their Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith in the wording: (Say, "Amen", when the Imam says, "Amen", for if anyone's utterance of "Amen" coincides with that of the angels, he will be forgiven his past sins)

Second, the majority of scholars held the opinion that the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) is to say "Amen" with the Imam. They explain the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the Hadith: (Say, "Amen", when the Imam says, "Amen") with that when the Imam is going to say "Amen". This is substantiated by what is authentically reported in the Two Sahih on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (When the Imam says, (not (the way) of those who earned Your Anger (i.e. those who knew the Truth, but did not follow it) nor of those who went astray (i.e. those who did not follow the Truth out of ignorance and error).), say, "Amen" for the Angels say, "Amen" and the Imam says, "Amen"; if anyone's utterance of "Amen" coincides with that of the angels, he will be forgiven his past sins.)

A: Saying "Amen" after the Imam says "...nor of those who went astray" is an act of Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet)

to be done by the Imam, Ma'mums, and those offering Salah (Prayer) individually. When the Imam finishes reciting Surah Al-Fatihah, the Imam and the Ma'mums should say "Amen". The first question of Fatwa no. 18856

Q 1: Sometimes, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offers one of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, for example, the Maghrib (Sunset) or `Isha' (Night) Prayer. After reciting Surah Al-Fatihah, he recites a Surah (Qur'anic chapter) that ends with: (Pardon us and grant us Forgiveness. Have mercy on us. You are our Maulâ (Patron, Supporter and Protector, etc.) and give us victory over the disbelieving people.) Upon hearing this, the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) would say "Amen". Ta'min (saying "Amen") is also uttered when reciting Surah Al-Tin. I am asking whether this is permissible or not? May Allah reward you the best!

A: Firstly, we should comment on what you said at the beginning of your letter when you counted the blessings that are here and mentioned Al-Haramayn Al-Sharifayn (the Two Sacred Mosques: the Sacred Mosque in Makkah and the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah) and what you called other sacred doorsteps. We do not have doorsteps that should be glorified, because this is an act of paganism, which should be rejected. It is, thus, obligatory to avoid using this term.

Secondly, it is not permissible to raise one's voice on saying "Amen" except after reciting Surah Al-Fatihah in a Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud). It is permissible to say "Amen" inaudibly upon hearing other supplications from the Qur'an, but saying it aloud is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion), because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ("Anyone who does something that we have not ordered (in worship) it will be rejected.") The Prophet (peace be upon him) never used to say "Amen" aloud except after reciting Surah Al-Fatihah in a Jahri Salah.

Q 6: What is the ruling on a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) who, before saying: "amen," says: "O Lord, forgive me and my parents," or something like this?

A: It was not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said that, therefore, it is an innovated matter. It is not permissible because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("Anyone who introduces anything into this matter of ours \(Islam\) that is not part of it will have it rejected."\) In another narration: \("Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected."\)

Q 1: What is the ruling on women's saying, "Amen" while praying behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in the following cases:

a. Inside the Masjid in congregational Salah (Prayer)?

b. At home when she offers Salah with a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative)?

A: It is permissible for a woman to offer Salah with men but she has to stand behind them and be covered from them. She also should not raise her voice whether when saying, "Amen" or otherwise for fear of causing temptation.

Qiyam, Ruku' and Sujud (Standing, bowing down and prostration)

Fatwa no. 15377

Q: What is the ruling on those who do not stand during Salah (Prayer) although they are capable of doing so in order to gain people's sympathy and charity?

A: standing up during salah is a Rukn (essential pillar) without which, Salah is invalid because of Allah's saying: [﴿And stand before Allâh with obedience \[and do not speak to others during the Salât \(prayer\)\].﴾](#) and the Prophet's saying when asked about the way a sick person may offer Salah: ﴿Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.﴾

Those who offer obligatory Salah sitting without an excuse, their Salah is invalid because they deliberately ignore a Rukn of Salah. As for voluntary Salah, it can be offered sitting even without an excuse and one shall have half the reward of those who offer it standing.

Q1: What is the ruling on standing in Salah (Prayer) with one's feet close together; because this issue distracts me in Salah and what is the Islamic evidence?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 357)

A: There are no authentically reported Hadith in the sanctified Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that indicates the permissibility of placing both feet close together when standing in Salah or in prostration. Subsequently, the person offering Salah should not exaggerate in drawing their feet close together or in separating them. In fact they should be placed in a manner between the two extremes.

The sixth question of Fatwa no. 20941

Q 6: Is there a certain supplication that should be said after Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and before Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: the Du'a' (Supplication) that should be said in Salah (Prayer) after Takbirat-ul-Ihram is called Du'a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer). Likewise, it is an act of Sunnah to supplicate to Allah after the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer) and before Taslim.

The first question of Fatwa no. 17880

Q 1: Someone says that it is the view of the Hanbalites (followers of the Hanbaly School of Jurisprudence) that Irsal (letting the hands hang down by one's sides while standing during the Prayer) nullifies Salah (Prayer).

(Part No. 5; Page No. 358)

They proceed saying that the Hanbalites do not permit offering Salah behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who is Malikite (follower of Malikiy School of Jurisprudence). They say that it is only permitted to perform Salah behind an Imam who does Qabd (putting the hands over each other on the chest while standing during the Prayer). Consequently, Hanbalites have their own Masjid. The proof that they quote for doing so is the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) says: “Pray as you have seen me praying.” They continue, saying that the Messenger (peace be upon him) neither practiced Irsal nor commanded the believers to do so; doing so is thus a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and a deviation. To what extent is the foregoing true?

A: though Qabd is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), Irsal is permissible. In other words, Irsal is not preferred but it does not nullify Salah and it is impermissible for Muslims to separate because of having different views regarding it. On the other hand, the Prophet's saying: “Pray as you have seen me praying.” does not imply that Qabd is Wajib (obligatory), because when the Prophet (peace be upon him) taught the person who was performing Salah wrongly the perfect way to pray, he (peace be upon him) neither mentioned Qabd nor Irsal. Finally, the Hanbaly School of Jurisprudence does not hold that Irsal nullifies Salah. Whoever says so is mistaken.

Q 4: Are the du`a's (Supplications) of Sujud (prostration) and Ruku` (bowing) to be said in every Ruku` and Sujud or only in a specific Salah (prayer)?

A: It is related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) who narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, "Verily, I have been forbidden to recite the Qur'an in the Ruku` position and in

Sujud. So far as Ruk'u is concerned, extol in it the Great and Glorious Lord, while in Sujud be earnest in Du`a', for it is fitting that your Du`a's should be answered." Accordingly, Ruku` is a state of exalting Allah (Exalted be He) not a state of Du`a'. So the worshiper is to recite the reported Adhkar (invocations) of Ruku`. An example of such Adhkar is in the Hadith which is related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) to the effect that \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to say in his Ruku` and Sujud, 'Subhanaka-Allahumma Rabbana wa-bihamdika Allahumma ighfirli \(Glorified is Allah and all praise be to Him, O Allah! Forgive me\)'."\) It is worth noting that such a Dhikr is said after the regular exaltation that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to recite. On the other hand, the Hadith quoted above which is narrated by Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) indicates that offering Du`a' in a state of Sujud is Mashru` (Islamically acceptable) and that Du`a' which is said in such a state is more likely to be accepted. Thus, one can ask Allah to give them whatever they like of the good things of this world and the hereafter, and to protect them against their evils while in the Sujud position. Finally, it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("A Servant is closest to their Lord when they are prostrating. So increase supplications \(in prostration\)."\) (Related by Muslim in his Sahih Book of Hadith and narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may Allah be pleased with him)

Q: What is the reason behind saying, "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Adhim (Glory be to my Lord, the Greatest)" in our Ruku' (bowing down) and "Subhana Rabbiya Al-A'la (Glory be to my Lord, the Most High)" in Sujud (prostration)? Please, substantiate your answer with proofs from the Sunnah.

A: the reason behind saying in Salah (Prayer), "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Adhim" in Ruku' and "Subhana Rabbiya Al-A'la" in Sujud is the Hadith authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he used to say this in his Salah: ﴿Hudhayfah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Adhim" in his Ruku' and "Subhana Rabbiya Al-A'la" in his Sujud.﴾ (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan see 'Awn Al-Ma'bud vol. 5 p. 142) It is also related by Al-Nasa'y in his Sunan. In addition, Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿As for Ruku' (bowing), glorify the Lord therein, and as for Sujud (prostration), exert your best endeavours in Du'a' (supplication), as this will all the more merit it being answered for you.﴾ (Related by Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Book of Hadith vol. 4, p. 196]) Imam Ahmad related another Hadith with the same meaning in his Musnad, vol. 1, p. 155- 219. Moreover, 'Uqbah ibn 'Amir (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated: ﴿When the following Ayah was revealed: ﴿Then glorify with praises the Name of your Lord, the Most Great.﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Make it in your Ruku'". And when the following Ayah was revealed: ﴿Glorify the Name of your Lord, the Most High,﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Make it in your Sujud.﴾ (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan vol. 5, p. 140) Imam Ahmad related another Hadith with the same meaning in his Musnad. Therefore, it becomes clear that Du'a' which is said during Salah is one of the Tawqifiyy (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion) matters which can not be said except based on a proof from the Book of Allah or the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). We may realize the whole wisdom behind them or even part of it and sometimes the wisdom may be unknown to anyone but Allah. When a person kneels down and reverentially submits themselves to Allah in Ruku', it is appropriate to glorify, extol, praise, exalt Allah and feel the greatness of standing before Him by saying, "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Adhim," because He is the Greatest, to Whose Might the necks are humbled down. When a person prostrates, they say, "Subhana Rabbiya Al-A'la," which is most appropriate to the situation where a person places the most honorable thing in them, that is their forehead and nose, on the ground in a state of utmost submission, obedience and humbleness to their Lord, when they are the closest they can be to their Lord, it is most suitable to say in this situation, "Subhana Rabbiya Al-A'la."

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 16480

Q 3: where should we place our hands after rising from Ruku' (bowing down); should it be on our chest or by our side?

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) for a person performing Salah to place their hands on their chest after rising from Ruku' and standing up straight as they were before Ruku'. It is authentically reported in the Sunnah that the position of hands before Ruku' is the same as after rising from Ruku', because one assumes the posture of standing up.

A: The word "Wa-l-Shukr (thanks)" is not narrated from the Prophet (peace be upon him), so it should be abandoned, as the word "Al-Hamd (all praises)" is sufficient. One should adhere to the reported text.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 363)

Q 1: Which is the method most authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) regarding Sujud (prostration)? Should one begin with the right hand according to the report by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) liked beginning with the right side in all matters? In this case, it would be beginning with the right hand or knee. Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: It is invalid to perform Istidlal (reasoning by methods other than the recognized sources) with the mentioned Hadith. No one views this to be permissible. It is an innovated opinion in this matter. `Ibadah (worship) is based upon Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion). There is a Nas (Islamic text from the Qur'an or the Sunnah) that shows the method of Sujud, so no other innovated opinion should be regarded, and nothing should be based upon general evidence.

I testify that there is no Ilah (god) except Allah; and I testify that Muhammad is His servant and Messenger"? This is the wording taught to primary school students.

A: This Hadith was related by Al-Nasa'i in "Al-Sunan Al-Kubra", Malik in "Al-Muwatta", and Al-Shafi'y in "Al-Risalah". Al-Zayla'y said about it in "Nasb Al-Rayah", vol. 1, p. 422, that its Isnad (chain of narration) is Sahih (authentic).

The second question of Fatwa no. 20952

Q 2: There is a Hadith in Sahih Muslim, no. 580 and 114 on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them) related by Ahmad (4/318) and Abu Dawud in Kitab Al-Salah (Book of Prayer), Bab Kaifiyyat-ul-Julus Fi Al-Tashahhud (How to sit in Tashahhud), (957) and Al-Nasa'i in Kitab Al-Sahw (Book of Forgetfulness), Bab Mawdi' Al-Mirfaqayn (Position of the Elbows), (3/35), Ibn Khuzaymah (714) and Ibn Habbab (485/Mawarid) and Ibn Al-Jarud in Al-Muntaqa (208). Concerning the movement of the finger when offering Du`a' (supplication) in Salah (Prayer), is the addition in this Hadith Shadh (narrated by a trustworthy narrator, not in line with the narration of other trustworthy narrators in terms of wording, chain of narrators, or both)? Some scholars argue that moving the finger during Du`a' while sitting in Salah is Shadh, for the Hadiths are interpreted as referring to moving the forefinger in the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer) only. These Hadiths are general and do not refer specifically to moving the finger in the first Tashahhud only. My question is whether these Hadiths are Shadh? Guide me, may Allah reward you !

A: There are many Hadiths reported concerning the moving of the forefinger when offering Salah and Du`a' in general without specifying when to do this in the Salah. The Hadith related by Muslim in his Sahih on the authority of `Amir ibn `Abdullah ibn Al-Zubayr states that Amir's father said: \(Whenever the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) sat for Du`a' \(i.e. Tashahhud\), he would place his right hand on his right thigh and his left hand on his left thigh. Then, he would point with his forefinger and place his thumb on his \(middle\) finger; and cover his knee with the palm of his left hand.\) Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah, Al-Tirmidhi and others reported many Hadiths to the same effect which mentioned that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to point out his finger whenever he sat for Du`a'. All these Hadiths are Sahih (authentic) not Shadh. They can be interpreted as referring to making Du`a' in Tashahhud. They are general Hadiths specifying the pointing of the forefinger in the first or the second Tashahhud.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 368)

One offering Salah should point the forefinger of the right hand towards the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah) when reciting Du`a' and Tashahhud without moving it. This reminds the servant of the Oneness of Allah, devoting `Ibadah (worship) to Him and the servant's need for his Lord. This is the greatest thing that Satan hates.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 18679

Q 3: It was authentically reported that the forefinger is to be raised in Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer).

1-When should the finger next to the thumb be raised and lowered?

2- When should the person offering Salah (Prayer) start and stop moving it?

A: raising the forefinger in the Tashahhud is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). It signifies Allah's Oneness. It is optional; whoever wants to do so, can do so. Such a matter should not lead to dispute and division among the seekers of knowledge. However, if a worshipper does not raise it or raises it without moving it, it is all right and this should not necessitate objection and rejection. The Sunnah is to raise it throughout the whole Tashahhud till the person offering Salah makes Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), as a sign of Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah/ monotheism). As for moving the forefinger, it is when making Du'a' (supplication) as authentically reported in the Sunnah.

Q 3: When I sit to pronounce Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), I say before anything, "Astaghfiru Allah (I seek the Forgiveness of Allah)," three times. Is this permissible?

A: What you do, meaning making istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) three times before the Tashahhud in Salah, is Bid'ah (innovation in religion). It is baseless in religion. However, it is permissible to make Istighfar three times after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did. Besides, it is permissible to make Du'a' (supplication) and Istighfar after pronouncing the last Tashahhud and before making Taslim.

A: the Du'a' said in tashahhud is authentically reported in many Hadiths, such as that narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and Ibn 'Abbas. You should adhere to the formula, which was reported in these Hadiths only; no other formula of Tashahhud can serve in its place, positions only; (1) upon saying Takbirat-ul-Ihram, (2) upon Ruku' (bowing), (3) upon rising from Ruku' and (4) upon standing after offering the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) according to the correct opinion of scholars. Things reprehensible in Salah

Q 2: What is the meaning of Ikhtisar, prohibited in the Hadith related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim where ("The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to prohibit ikhtisar in Salah (Prayer)") ?

A: The meaning of Ikhtisar or Takhassur in Salah is putting one's hands around one's waist. The Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) agreed that this act is Makruh (reprehensible) in Salah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19812

Q 1: The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of our district says Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") before Ruku` (bowing) while he is still standing, then he turns slightly to the right so that his voice is picked up by the microphone, and then performs Ruku`. Is this permissible? Does it affect the validity of Salah (Prayer)?

A: Takbir for Ruku` should be pronounced during bowing. The same applies to the Takbir during Salah while moving from one position to the other. As for slightly turning the head, it is Makruh (reprehensible) except if there is a valid reason, but it does not invalidate Salah.

Q 4: What is the meaning of Sadl and what is the ruling on it? Besides, is the untied Ghutra (a traditional cotton headdress worn by men in some Arab countries) considered a sort of Sadl?

A: sadl which is casting a person's garment on his shoulders without tying it at his chest is Makruh (reprehensible) in Salah (Prayer). However, Ghutra (a traditional cotton headdress worn by men in some Arab countries) is not considered a sort of Sadl as the latter's definition does not apply to it.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19179

Q 2: What is the ruling on tucking up the shirt or the sleeves before starting Salah (Prayer) and keeping them rolled up in Salah? If impermissible, what is the ruling on a person who hurriedly performs Wudu' (ablution) and hastens to catch up to Ruku' (bowing) leaving his sleeves rolled up? Is his Salah valid or not?

A: A person offering Salah has to be in his best form as he is supposed to speak confidentially with his Lord in Salah. If he is able to cover his arms by unrolling his sleeves after Wudu', that will be better and more proper because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “I have been commanded to prostrate on seven bones and not to tuck up the cloth or hair.” (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) If the person is unable to do so due to a legal excuse or to hasten to catch up with the Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) and so left his arms uncovered, there is no blame on him in that and his Salah is valid because the arms are not of the limbs that must be covered in Salah.

Q: What is the ruling on rolling up the military suit sleeves while offering Salah? It is noteworthy that we, soldiers, are ordered to fold our sleeves because they are long. Please explain the Makruh (reprehensible) things we do during Salah and whether rolling up the sleeves is Makruh or not. What is the degree of validity of the Hadith narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, “The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) prohibited the one praying from tucking up his hanging-down hair, sleeve or garment.” and the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, “I have been commanded to prostrate on seven bones and not to tuck up the cloth or hair.” ?

A: It is impermissible for a person who offers Salah to tuck up his garment and its like during Salah. This is based on the Hadith narrated by Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, “I have been commanded to prostrate on seven bones and not to tuck up the cloth or hair.” Furthermore, it was authentically reported from Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, “I have been commanded not to tuck up the cloth or hair.” These Hadith are verified and authentic and should be acted upon according to scholars.

Q 1: Concerning the Hadith: ﴿“I have been commanded not to tuck up the cloth or hair.”﴾ which prohibits folding clothes. Does the Hadith apply to those who roll their trousers up claiming they apply the Sunnah though the Hadith includes prohibition?

A: The Hadith indicates that a person offering Salah should not busy himself and mess with his clothes and hair during Salah (Prayer), or prevents the ends of his clothes from reaching the ground when prostrating. In fact, the person offering Salah should leave his clothes come down with him, and should not braid his hair but should untie it so that it prostrates with him.

Q 1: What is the ruling on offering Salah (Prayer) in a room that includes pictures or statues of humans and animals for decoration?

A: It is Haram (prohibited) to keep pictures and statues at home, based on the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him) to 'Aly (may Allah be pleased with him), ﴿"Do not leave any image without blotting it out or a prominent grave without levelling it."﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said, ﴿"Angels do not enter a house in which there is a dog or a picture."﴾ It is Makruh (reprehensible) to offer Salah in a room that contains hanged or erected pictures, especially if they are hung in the direction of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah). Q 2: What is the ruling on offering Salah (Prayer) at home where there are magazines and newspapers - containing pictures - on desks, furniture, and other visible places?

A: Muslim men are obligated to offer Salah in the Masjid (mosque) in congregation. It is not permissible for them to offer Salah individually or at home without a legal excuse that permits them to do so. It is Makruh (reprehensible) to offer Salah while facing pictures or in a place where there are pictures hanging on the walls. Yet pictures are considered demeaned if they are thrown on the floor.

Q 1: It is an act of Sunnah to look at the place of Sujud (prostration) during Salah (Prayer). But, when I offer Salah (Prayer) behind an Imam and close my eyes I feel more Khushu' (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) and reverence.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 379)

Closing my eyes helps me ponder the meanings of the Ayahs which the Imam recites and the relation between these Ayahs and the universe and what it contains of miracles that assure the Power and Might of Allah. But when I open my eyes to look at the place of Sujud as the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered us to do, I become afflicted with Waswasah (Insinuating or obsessive thoughts instigated by Satan). What is the ruling on this?

A: During Salah it is prescribed that the Muslim should look at the place of Sujud and not close their eyes; for they are engaged in an act of worship in which they supplicate their Lord and ask Him His Mercy. Imam Muslim and others related that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: “Let the people who lift their sights towards heaven during Salah desist, or else their sights will be taken away.” Also, Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated that “The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered Salah wearing a Khamisa \(a marked woolen garment\) with marks on it. Thereupon, the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said, “The marks on it diverted my attention, take this \(Khamisa\) to Abu Jahm and bring an Inbijaniyah \(unmarked garment\) \(from him\).” If it was permissible for a person to close their eyes, the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) would have closed his eyes to avoid being occupied by the marks of the garment. Therefore, you should look at the place of Sujud and try to ponder the recitation and supplications and try to suppress the insinuations of Satan.

Q 2: Why do we not look towards heaven and instead look at the place of Sujud (prostration) [during Salah (Prayer). ed.]?

A: The basic principle is that during Salah, Khushu' (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) is obligatory and its perfection is recommended. Allah mentions it as one of the obligations of Salah in His saying: \(Successful indeed are the believers.\) \(Those who offer their Salât \(prayers\) with all solemnity and full submissiveness.\) \(And those who turn away from Al-Laghwa \(dirty, false, evil vain talk, falsehood, and all that Allâh has forbidden\).\) \(And those who pay the Zakât.\) \(And those who guard their chastity \(i.e. private parts, from illegal sexual acts\)\) Furthermore, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said about the people who turn their eyes toward the heaven: \(“Let some people desist from lifting their sights towards heaven when supplicating in Salah \(Prayer\), or else they will not return to them.”\) Another narration states: \(“...or else their sights will be snatched away.”\) This is because turning the eyes toward the heaven may lead a person who is performing Salah to seeing things that distract their heart and prevent them from obtaining Khushu' and contemplating what is being recited.

Q: Sometimes i am distracted by worldly matters while offering Salah (Prayer). Should i repeat it?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 381)

A: A Muslim should offer Salah with a submissive heart, and contemplate the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and the Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) they recite while feeling Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship). Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(Successful indeed are the believers.\) \(Those who offer their Salât \(prayers\) with all solemnity and full submissiveness.\) If a worshipper becomes occupied with some idea during Salah, they should turn this idea away and there is no harm on them. They do not have to repeat Salah, but they should perform Ruku` (bowing) and Sujud (prostration) quietly and rest between the two Sujuds until all limbs return to their normal position. They should also keep up the Shar`i (Islamically lawful) Dhikr and Du`a' (supplication) in Sujud, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("So far as Ruk'u is concerned, extol in it the Great and Glorious Lord, while in Sujud be earnest in Du`a', for it is fitting that your Du`a's should be answered."\) (Related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said, \("A Servant is closest to their Lord when they are prostrating. So increase supplications \(in prostration\)."\) (Related by Muslim in his Sahih Book of Hadith) Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) said, \("When the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) lifted his head from Ruku`, he used to stand up \(so long\) that people would think he has forgotten \(to perform Sujud\). When he sat between the two Sujuds, he would stay in that position until people would think he had forgotten \(to perform the second Sujud\)."\)

Q: What is the ruling on a person who wants to break wind while offering Salah (Prayer) yet keeps holding it till Salah is over?

A: It is authentically reported in the Hadith on the authority of 'Abdullah Ibn Zayd (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(A complaint was made to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) about when man thinks to have let out something during Salah. He \(peace be upon him\) said, "He should not leave \(prayer\) unless he hears a sound or detects a smell \(of passing wind\)."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Therefore, if the person has not experienced any of these signs, his Salah is valid. But he should not enter Salah while suppressing passing wind according to the Hadith reported by 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \("No prayer can be \(rightly performed\) when the food is present \(before the worshipper\) or when suppressing an urge to urinate/defecate."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) This also applies to passing wind if the person is holding it.

Q: is the Hadith stating that: “There should be no Salah \(Prayer\) in the presence of food.” particular to supererogatory Salah or is it generally applicable to both the obligatory and supererogatory Salah? If it is general, does the presence of food remove the obligation to perform Salah in congregation?

A: The Hadith is general and applies to both the obligatory and supererogatory Salah. It means that when a Muslim prays their thoughts should be focused on their Salah, recitation of the Qur'an, and Du'a' (supplication), they should not be distracted by their food. if they are hungry and then food is served and the Salah has commenced, their leaving the food in spite of being hungry will distract them from performing Salah the way it should be. It does not mean that the presence of food removes the obligation of congregational Salah. It is not permissible to consider the bringing of food at the time for Salah as an excuse for abandoning the congregational Salah. Allah has made it obligatory to perform Salah in congregation even in situations of fear, if it is continual. This ruling is not specific to food either, it also applies if someone feels the urge to urinate or defecate. In such a case, they should not go to perform Salah; they must relieve themselves first then head for Salah. If they are able to join the congregation this is good, otherwise they can perform it individually or with anyone else that they find. It was narrated by Muslim that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, “There should be no Salah \(Prayer\) in the presence of food or while suppressing an urge to urinate/defecate.”

Q: I carry a copy of the Qur'an while offering Salah (Prayer) behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). It should be noted that I concentrate much and my mind does not go astray, and the moves I make in Salah are only for opening and closing the Qur'an. Is this permissible? I hope you will explain the issue!

A: The Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) has to listen attentively to the recitation of the Imam and contemplate the Words of Allah they are hearing. They should not be distracted by anything as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿listen to it, and be silent that you may receive mercy.﴾ Imam Ahmad (may Allah be merciful to him) said that religious scholars agreed by consensus that this Ayah is about listening to the recitation of the Qur'an in Salah. holding a copy of the Qur'an while offering Salah behind the Imam for the sake of following the Imam causes the person to make repeated moves which distracts the people offering Salah around them. This may affect the perfection of submission and humbleness to Allah in Salah, so it is prescribed to abandon it.

Q: What is the ruling on iq`a' (sitting on one's buttocks) in Salah?

A: Iq`a' during Salah is of two forms:

The first form is: Sitting with one's buttocks on the thighs and raised heels, or placing one's forearms on the ground as dogs and beasts do.

This form of Iq`a' is known to Arabs and it is reprehensible. Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"When you raise your head after Sujud \(prostration\), do not sit \(on your buttocks spreading your feet\) as dogs do."﴾ (Related by Ibn Majah in his "Sunan", vol. 1, p. 289) It is also related on the authority of `Aisha (may Allah be pleased with her) that ﴿"The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) disliked that a person spread their arms as beasts do. He used to sit on his left leg, raise up his right leg, and forbid `Uqbat-ul-Shaytan \(the devil's way of sitting on the heels\).">﴾ (Related by Imam Ahmad in his "Musnad", vol. 6, p. 194. with this wording) It is also related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (book of sound Hadith) and Abu Dawud in his book of Sunan.

The second form of Iq`a' is explained by Imam Ahmad (may Allah be merciful with him) in his commentary: Sitting on one's heels with the soles of the feet facing outward. This manner of sitting is controversial among the Companions and scholars. `Aly, Abu Hurayrah, Qatadah, Imam Malik, Al-Shafi`y, Abu Hanifah, and Imam Ahmad, according to the soundest opinion reported from him, hold the view that it is reprehensible during Salah and most scholars are of this opinion. They cited the general Hadith which prohibit Iq`a' as a proof for this. They also argued that Iq`a' contradicts Iftirash (placing the left foot to the side and sitting on it between the two prostrations, keeping the right foot vertical) reported from the statements and actions of the Prophet (peace be upon him) referring to the manner of sitting between the two prostrations as mentioned above. Some other scholars including Al-Bayhaqy, Qadi `Iyad, Abu Dawud, the compiler of Sunan and others held the view that Iq`a' is permissible during Salah. As for the Iq`a' reprehended in some Hadith, it is of the first form. Tawus said: I saw Ibn `Umar, Ibn `Abbas, and Ibn Al-Zubayr do this. As for Ibn `Umar, he did this when he grew old and used to say: Do not follow me because I have grown old. As for Ibn `Abbas, he believed that this form is the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) because of what Muslim related on the authority of Tawus who said: ﴿"We asked Ibn `Abbas about Iq`a' on one's feet during Sujud, he said, 'It is the Sunnah.' We said, 'It is not proper for a person to do so,' he \(Ibn `Abbas\) said, 'It is the Sunnah of your Prophet.'">﴾ (Related by Muslim in his Sahih, vol. 1, p. 308, and Abu Dawud in his Sunan, vol. 1, p. 194) Thus, it is authentically proven that this form of sitting is the one reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) as mentioned by Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both). The common form of sitting of the Prophet (peace be upon him) is that he used to sit on his left foot and raise his right one up. The one who sits in this form will not be rebuked because it is reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Imam Ahmad said: I do not do it and do not rebuke those who do it.

Q 3: It was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to prolong his Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer), including sitting between the two sajdahs (prostrations), during which it is recommended to say, "O Allah, forgive me, have mercy on me... etc." Thus, what should a Muslim who wants to prolong the two Sajdahs say besides this Du`a' (supplication)? May he repeat this Du`a' so that the time he sits between the two Sajdahs becomes equal to that of the Sajdah as in the Hadith reported on the authority of Hudhayfah and Ibn Mas`ud regarding their offering Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) with the Prophet (peace be upon him)?

A: The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say when sitting between the two Sajdahs: O Allah, forgive me, have mercy on me, heal me, guide me, and provide for me. One may repeat it thrice or say along with it any other authentically reported Du`a'.

Q 3: What is the ruling of being led in Salah (Prayer) by a man who says the Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]) intervening the movements of salah after completing the movement? For example, he bends to perform Ruku' (bowing) first, and then says Takbir and so on.

A: Takbir that intervenes the movements should be said on moving from one Rukn (integral/Pillar) of Salah to another. Thus, it should not be said before or after moving, for in both cases it will be out of place. The author of Sharhul-Zad said, "The place of performing that is when moving between a beginning of an action and an end." Quoted from Hashiat Ibn Qasim (1/128). Therefore, the Imam in question should be advised to abide by the rule mentioned so as to avoid violating it. Moreover, any Imam who violates such a rule should be advised not to do so.

Q 3: Most of the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) and Imams (persons who lead congregational Prayer) at different Masjids (mosques) in our area do not make Jalsat-ul-Istirahah (a brief sitting after prostration and before standing during the Prayer).

However, only very few Imams make it. My question is whether it is permissible to abandon Jalsat-ul-Istirahah to follow the Imam and the congregation.

A: jalsat-ul-Istirahah is an act of Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) according to some scholars. Accordingly, whoever abandons it is not to be blamed whether they are Imams, those praying individually, or Ma'mums.

Qunut in Obligatory Salahs

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 18891

Q 5: What is the ruling on saying Du'a'-ul-Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer)?

A: There are three cases for Du'a'-ul-Qunut:

First: Saying Du'a'-ul-Qunut in Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), which is Mustahab (desirable). This is based on the Hadith narrated by Al-Hasan ibn 'Aly (may Allah be pleased with them) who said: [«The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) taught me some words that I say during Qunut in the Witr Prayer. They are, 'Allahumma ihdini fiman hadayta, wa 'afini fiman 'afayta, wa tawallani fiman tawallayta, wa barik li fima a'tayta, wa qini sharra ma qadayta, fa inaka taqdi wa la yuqda 'alaik, wa inahu la yadhilu man walayta, tabarakta Rabana wa ta'alayta \[O Allah! Guide me among those You have guided. Protect me among those You have protected. Take me into Your Care among those You have taken into Your Care. Bless me in what You have bestowed \(on me\). Guard me from the evil of what You have decreed, for You are the One Who decrees, and none can decree over You. Truly, the one whom You patronize can never be abased. Blessed and Exalted are You, our Lord\].»](#) (Related by Ahmad and the Compilers of the Sunan [Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah] and it was ranked as Hasan [a Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish] by Al-Tirmidhy)

Second: Saying Du'a'-ul-Qunut at calamity, whether by invoking for a group of Muslims or against a group of Kafirs (disbelievers). This type of Qunut is permissible, because it was authentically reported on the authority of Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) that «the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) kept observing Du'a'-ul-Qunut for one month, after rising from Ruku' \(bowing\) in Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer, asking Allah to punish the tribes of Ra'l and Dhakwan.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Third: Saying Du'a'-ul-Qunut in Fajr Prayer constantly, which is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion). It was authentically reported «on the authority of Sa'd ibn Tariq Al-Ashja'y who said that he asked his father, 'O father! You prayed behind \(led by\) the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\), Abu Bakr, 'Umar, 'Uthman and 'Aly here in Kufa for around fifty years; did they say Du'a'-ul-Qunut in Fajr Prayer?»

(Part No. 5; Page No. 392)

He replied, 'Dear son, this is a newly-invented practice \(in religion\).» (Related by Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah; it was ranked as Sahih [authentic] by Al-Tirmidhy)

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 15391

Q 3: What is the ruling on reciting qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) in Fajr (Dawn) Prayer every day?

A: Reciting Qunut in Fajr Prayer is not permissible except in cases of calamities, such as an epidemic, a siege being laid to the country, or the Muslims being persecuted. In such cases, it is permissible to recite Qunut in Fajr Prayer and other Prayers as the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 21454

Q 3: What is the ruling on praying behind an Imam who makes Qunut (supplication while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) in the second Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of every Fajr (Dawn) Prayer before Ruku' (bowing)? Is Qunut in the Fajr Prayer a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) or Mustahab (desirable)?

A: Qunut in the Fajr Prayer is not legislated except in afflictions.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 393)

This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not do it except in afflictions. It was not authentically confirmed that he made Qunut constantly. Praying behind the Imam who constantly makes Qunut is valid; however, the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) should not follow him, instead he should repeat, "Rabana wa laka al-hamd, hamdan kathiran tayyiban mubarakan fihi, mil'a as-sama'i wa mil'a alard wa mil'a ma shi'ta min shay'in ba'd [O our Lord, to You be praise, much good and blessed praise, filling the heaven, filling the earth and filling whatever else You will]."

Q 2: It is known that the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not make Qunut (supplication while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) constantly in the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, and that doing so is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and deviation from the right. What shall we do when offering Salah (Prayer) behind an Imam who makes Qunut constantly in the Fajr Prayer? Should we follow him, because the Imam is appointed to be followed or do we have to follow the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) and disobey the Imam? What if contradicting the Imam will lead to confusion among those who are praying? Do we have to follow the rule of applying the lesser of two evils? Please guide us.

A: According to the Sunnah, Qunut in the Fajr Prayer is not to be made except during calamities. This is the more correct of the two opinions held by the Muslim scholars. But your Salah (Prayer) behind an Imam who constantly says Du'a-ul-Qunut is better than not praying behind him if this will cause dissension and disorder.

Fatwa no. 20926

Clarification of Qunut at times of afflictions

All praise is due to Allah Alone; and may peace and blessings be upon the Final Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Due to the numerous questions concerning how to make Qunut (supplication while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) in afflictions, its ruling, and the need of knowing the Sunnah regarding Qunut and working according to it to avoid the errors committed by some people, the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' would like to explain the following for Muslims:

First: Making Qunut when Muslims are afflicted by temporary trials is one of the lawful acts in Salah. This is one of the authentically established acts of Sunnah reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) in addition to other books. It is narrated on the authority of Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) that: “The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) sent seventy men, called Al-Qurra’ \(Qur’an Reciters\), for some purpose. Two clans of Banu Sulaym, namely Ra’l and Dhakwan, obstructed their way near a well known as Ma’unah Well. The people \(i.e. Al-Qurra’\) said, ‘By Allah, we have not come to harm you, but we are passing by you on our way to do something for the Prophet \(peace be upon him\).’

(Part No. 5; Page No. 395)

But \(the two clans\) killed them. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) therefore invoked against them for a month during Salat-ul-Ghadah \(morning Prayer\).” It is also narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah and Anas (may Allah be pleased with them) that the Prophet (peace and be upon him) made Qunut after Ruku’ (bowing) in the last Rak’ah (unit of Prayer) for one month: [“Upon raising his head \(from bowing\) he would say, ‘Sami’a Allahu liman hamidah \[Allah listens to those who praise Him\], Rabbana wa lakal hamd \[Our Lord, to you is the Praise\],’ then he would supplicate to Allah for certain men whom he mentioned by name, saying, ‘O Allah! Save Al-Walid ibn Al-Walid and Salamah ibn Hisham and ‘Ayyash ibn Abu Rabi’ah and the oppressed believers. O Allah! Harden Your Punishment against the tribe of Mudar and inflict upon them years \(of famine\) like the years \(the famine which broke out at the time\) of Yusuf \(Joseph\).”](#) There are many other well-known Hadith supporting the same meaning.

Second: Afflictions for which supplication while standing in Salah is legislated are those which concern Muslims in general, such as when the disbelievers attack Muslims, supplicating for the Muslim captives, and for Muslims who are afflicted by famine, the spread of epidemics, etc.

Third: Qunut Al-Nawazil (Qunut for removing calamities) is to be said after rising from the Ruku’ (bowing) of the last Rak’ah in all the obligatory Prayers, whether Jahri (Prayer recited out loud) or Sirri (Prayer with subvocal recitation). This is more confirmed in Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. It is reported on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that: “The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) continued to make Qunut for a month successively at the Zhuhr \(Noon\), ‘Asr \(Afternoon\), Maghrib \(Sunset\), ‘Isha’ \(Night\) and Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayers, at the end of every Salah.

When he said, 'Sami'a Allahu liman hamidah [Allah listens to those who praise Him],' in the last Rak'ah, he would invoke Allah against some clans of Banu Sulaym, namely Ra'l, Dhakwan, and 'Usayyah while those praying behind him would answer, 'Amen.'"

» (Related by Imam Ahmad and Abu Dawud)

Fourth: There is no specific Du'a' to say in Qunut Al-Nawazil, but Muslims should supplicate at every time with what is suitable for their circumstances under the affliction. Anyone who supplicates in afflictions with Du'a'-ul-Qunut that is said in the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), which is "Allahumma ihdina fiman hadayt... [O Allah, guide me among those You have guided...], has contradicted the Sunnah and missed the purpose. The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not invoke Allah in afflictions with this Du'a'; rather, he used to teach it to the people to say it in the Witr Prayer.

Fifth: Qunut Al-Nawazil is legislated from the time a calamity occurs until it is removed.

Sixth: The Imams of the Masjids (mosques), may Allah grant them success, have to strive to learn the Sunnah and abide by it in all matters, because people imitate them and learn from them. Careful caution must be paid not to contradict the Sunnah, either out of exaggeration or negligence. This applies to Du'a'-ul-Qunut said in the Witr Prayer and upon occurrence of Nawazil (calamities). What Islam prescribes is to supplicate with all-inclusive words, using the authentically reported supplications that should be said with calmness and submissiveness. There must be no elongation, redundancy, or causing hardship to the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer). The Imam should make Qunut only in general afflictions.

All praise be to Allah Alone, Lord of the worlds, and peace and blessings be upon His Messenger, and his family and Companions.

Q: One of the Imams (the one who leads congregational Prayer) said, "One day after a heavy rainfall in the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, in the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) before Sujud (prostration), I said, "O Allah! All praises and thanks are due to You, as should be for the Grace of Your Face and the Magnificence of Your Sovereignty. O Allah! All thanks are due to You until You are pleased, and all thanks are due to You when You are pleased, and all thanks are due to You after You are pleased. O Allah! All thanks are due to You for this rain. O Allah make it beneficial not harmful. O Allah! Bless what You have given us and make it a provision to us for a long time, and make it a means that helps us obey You. O Allah! All praises and thanks are due to You for Your Mercy and Blessings. May the Peace and Blessing of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions." The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) said, "Amen". Some said that the Imam should not say such Du'a' (supplication) in an obligatory Prayer. The Imam asked to submit his question to Your Eminence in order to give him your legal opinion whether what he did was permissible or not. The Imam further mentioned that this was the first time he did so and that his purpose was to thank and glorify Allah for this immense blessing. I hope that Your Eminence will answer the question. May Allah reward you with the best reward and may He help you!

A: The act done by the mentioned Imam is similar to Qunut (supplication after bowing while standing in Prayer) in the last Rak'ah of obligatory Salah (Prayer) - but it is made out of place (occasion), because Qunut should only be made in the times of affliction. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The Last Tashahhud

The third question of Fatwa no. 13959

Q 3: al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah (the second part of the Tashahhud) is the most correct formula for invoking Allah to confer peace and blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him). Is there any other formula for invoking peace and blessings upon the Prophet and is the phrase saying, "You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of Glory" authentically reported as part of it?

A: According to the Hadith reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim), Al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah has certain characteristics. It was narrated from Ka'b ibn 'Ujrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) came to us, so we said to him, "We have learnt how to invoke peace upon you, but how should we invoke blessings upon you." He \(peace be upon him\) said, 'Say: O Allah! Send Salah \(Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy\) upon Muhammad and upon the Family of Muhammad as You have sent Salah upon the Family of Ibrahim \(Abraham\), You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of Glory. O Allah! Send blessings upon Muhammad and upon the Family of Muhammad as You have sent blessings upon the Family of Ibrahim, You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of Glory!'") It was reported from Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that \(They asked, "O Messenger of Allah! How should we invoke blessings upon you?" He \(peace be upon him\) said, "Say: O Allah! Send Salah \(Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy\) upon Muhammad and blessings upon Muhammad and the Family of Muhammad as You have sent Salah and blessings upon the Family of Ibrahim, You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of Glory."'\) Al-Bayhaqy stated that it was related by Al-Bazzar with an authentic chain of narrators. It was reported in "Sahih Muslim" on the authority of Abu Mas'ud Al-Ansary (may Allah be pleased with him) that \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) came to us while we were sitting with Sa'd ibn 'Ubadah. Bashir ibn Sa'd said to him, 'Allah \(may He be Exalted\) commanded us to invoke blessings upon you, but how should we invoke blessings upon you?' The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) fell silent until we wished he had not asked him.

\('Say: O Allah! Send Salah \(Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy\) upon Muhammad and upon the Family of Muhammad as You have sent Salah upon Ibrahim \(Abraham\) and upon the Family of Ibrahim, and send blessings upon Muhammad and upon the Family of Muhammad as You have sent blessings upon Ibrahim \(Abraham\) and upon the Family of Ibrahim in the Worlds, You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of Glory! As for Salam \(Islamic greeting of peace\), it is as you have learned.'"\) It was also authentically reported from Abu Hamid Al-Sa'idy that \(They said, "O Messenger of Allah! How should we invoke blessings upon you?" He \(peace be upon him\) said, "Say: O Allah! Send \(Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy\) Salah upon Muhammad and his wives and his offspring as You have sent Salah upon the Family of Ibrahim \(Abraham\), and send blessings upon Muhammad and his wives and his offspring, as You have sent blessings upon the Family of Ibrahim, You are indeed Worthy of Praise,

Full of Glory.”) This is the wording of Muslim. The formula of Al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah is preferred, and anyone who recites an invocatory formula that is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) has done right.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Q: I work in one of the agencies that propagate Islam. One of the Islamic books that we distribute is written in English. It is titled "Islam in Focus" and it is a brief explanation of Islam. In the chapter on invoking Allah's blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) after reciting the Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), it states:

(Part No. 5; Page No. 401)

"O, Allah! Send Your prayers upon our Prophet Muhammad and the family of our master Muhammad, just like You sent Your prayers upon our master Ibrahim and the family of our master Ibrahim. Send Your blessings upon our master Muhammad and the family of our master Muhammad, just like You sent Your blessings upon our master Ibrahim and the family of our master Ibrahim in the Worlds. You are indeed the Praiseworthy and the Glorious." I ask about the permissibility of reciting this form? If it is not permissible to recite, I hope Your Eminence will guide me regarding what is correct.

A: The authentically reported narrations on Al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah (the second part of the Tashahhud) do not include the word "master". Hence it is not permissible to recite it in Salah, since acts of worship are Tawqifiy (bound by a religious text and not subject to personal opinion) matters. If the book is to be printed and distributed, the word "master" must first be deleted from Al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah. This way we will be acting upon the authentically reported narrations from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 1: After I recite the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer) I supplicate to Allah for myself, my parents, my brothers, sisters and my wife. Is it permissible to do so in Tashahhud?

A: There is no nothing wrong in supplicating to Allah for yourself and your parents after invoking Allah's peace and blessings upon the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) in the last Tashahhud. However, this should be done after asking Allah's Refuge against the torture of Hell-fire, the punishment in the grave, the trials of life and death and the trial of Al-Masih-ul-Dajjal (the Antichrist). Tranquility

The first question of Fatwa no. 16362

Q 1: What is the ruling on khushu' (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) during performing Salah (Prayer)? Besides, how can I refute the saying that Khushu' in Salah is Sunnah (a commendable act) not Wajib (obligatory)?

A: There are two different kinds of Khushu': Wajib and Mustahab (desirable). The Khushu' which is Wajib is to have tranquility while doing all the acts of Salah so that they are done fully and perfectly. This kind of Khushu' is that which is meant by the Saying of Allah: \(Successful indeed are the believers.\) \(Those who offer their Salât \(prayers\) with all solemnity and full submissiveness.\) and it is that which is meant by the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him) about the person who wrongly performed his Salah.

On the other hand, the Khushu' which is Mustahab is to perform Salah perfectly along with all its Mustahab acts and sayings.

A: It is compulsory to offer the entire pillars of Salah (Prayer) with tranquility. Taslim

Fatwa no. 14200

Q: After the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), is it enough to perform Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) to the right or should one perform Taslim to the right and the left, whether one is an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or offering prayer individually? Is the prayer, thus considered valid or not? Was this authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him)? Please advise as soon as possible, so that the Ummah (community) may benefit. May Allah protect and preserve you!

A: It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to perform Taslim in Salah (prayer) to the right and to the left while saying "As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah (may Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you)". It was authentically reported from `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to pronounce Taslim \(by turning his head\) to his right side, saying 'As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah' and to his left saying 'As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah.'"\) In another narration, \("I saw the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) pronouncing Taslim to his left and right sides until the whiteness of his cheek was seen."\)

Q: There are many rulings with regards to the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) leaving the Masjid (mosque) after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and before the Imam leaves the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah). These rulings range between Mustahab (desirable), Ja'iz (permissible) and Makruh (reprehensible). The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: "I am your Imam so do not precede me in Ruku' \(bowing\), Sujud \(prostration\), Qiyam \(standing\), or leaving." The Hadith indicates that just as it is unlawful for the Ma'mum to precede the Imam in Salah, it is unlawful to precede him in leaving Salah. So, we would like to know the exact ruling on this issue. We hope the reply will come soon at the address of the school because the question is part of the syllabus taught to the pupils this year. We fear giving them a ruling that does not conform with the Shari'ah (Islamic law). May Allah protect you and keep you as a reference for all Muslims in religious matters.

A: the meaning of leaving Salah is ending it by reciting Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). It is authentically reported that preceding the Imam in leaving Salah is prohibited. On the authority of Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: "O people! I am your Imam so do not precede me in Ruku' \(bowing\), Sujud \(prostration\), Qiyam \(standing\), or leaving \(i.e. Taslim\)." So, it is prohibited for the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) to recite Taslim before the Imam, but there is nothing wrong in leaving the Masjid before him after Taslim.

Q: Some Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) offer the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after the Imam's first Taslim and the second Taslim after his. They say that this is the correct way to perform the Taslim, although most Ma'mums wait until the Imam has offered the second Taslim before they do it. What is your explanation about this?

A: It was related in the Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ["The key to Salah is purification. Its Tahrim \(forbiddance of any actions outside prayer\) is \(starts\) with the Takbir \(saying: 'Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]' upon commencing Prayer\) and its Tahlul \(ending of the praying state\) is with the Taslim."](#) The authentically reported practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him) is that he used to offer two Taslims, one to his right and one to his left. This indicates that the two complete Taslims both constitute one of the obligatory basic acts of Salah and that the Imam is not considered to have completed the Salah until they have performed the second Taslim.

Accordingly, the taslim offered by the Ma'mum after the Imam's first taslim is performed before the Salah is complete. Therefore, it is not permissible for the Ma'mum to offer Taslim before the Imam completes the second Taslim, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "I am your Imam, so do not precede me in Ruku' \(bowing\), Sujud \(prostration\), standing, or leaving \(i.e. ending Salah\)." So, it is not permissible for a Ma'mum to do this.

warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)" or he should just say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah (May Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you!)" at the end of Salah (Prayer)?

A: It was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in most narrations about ending Salah that he (peace be upon him) used to say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah (May Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you!)" This is the best and what is safer.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16370

Q 2: Is it authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he used to say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)" while offering the first Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) to the right and: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah (May Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you!)" while offering the second one to the left?

A: Most of the narrations which are authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) regarding Taslim is that he (peace be upon him) used to say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah" for both the first Taslim and the second one. However, it is only mentioned in some narrations that the Prophet (peace be upon him) added: "... wabarakatuh (and His Blessings)." To sum up, the predominant practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him) concerning Taslim which is to be acted upon is that he used only to say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah."

Fatwa no. 15441

Q: What is the ruling on turning the hands during Salah (Prayer) when saying the taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer); meaning that during the Taslim, when a worshipper finishes Salah, they turn their hands over while saying: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you)." As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah.

A: The act of Sunnah (following the example of the Prophet) in offering Taslim is that the worshipper should say: "As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah" once to the right and once to the left, without making a gesture with their hands. It is reported in "Sahih Muslim" on the authority of Jabir ibn Samurah that he said: I performed Salah with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him). When we offered the Taslim, we used to say with our hands: "As-salamu 'alaykum! As-salamu 'alaykum (May Allah's Peace be upon you)!" The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) looked toward us and said, "Why are you gesturing with your hands as if they were the tails of headstrong horses? When any of you says Taslim (in Salah), they should only turn towards their neighbor and not make a gesture with their hand."

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Q: does performing Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) to the right side only suffice in Salah (Prayer) or not? Some people in my village offer Taslim to the right side only and do not do it to the left claiming that Satan is located on the left side. What is the ruling on performing taslim in Salah?

A: The Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) proved that the person praying should perform Taslim to the right and the left sides, as this is the recorded practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Salah.

The Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah) narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that "The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to offer Taslim to his right and left sides saying: 'As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah! As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah! \(May Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you! May Allah's Peace and Mercy be upon you!\) until the whiteness of his cheek was seen.'" (This Hadith is classed as Sahih [authentic] by Al-Tirmidhy) Also, it is reported on the authority of 'Amir ibn Sa'd from his father that he said: "I used to see the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) offering Taslim to his right and left sides until the whiteness of his cheek was seen." (Related by Ahmad, Muslim, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah) Al-Shawkany said: This is the soundest view owing to many Hadiths that mentioned Taslim to two sides, some of which are Sahih (authentic) and others which are Hasan (good) and they include reference to addition. These are authentically reported contrary to the Hadiths that mentioned Taslim to one side only, which in addition to being few are Da'if (weak) and so do not rise to the level of taking them as evidence; even if they rise to such a level still it will not be valid for their opposing the Hadiths which mention that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered Taslim to both sides. Moreover, Ibn 'Abdul-Bar elaborated on the weakness of the proofs given by those supporting offering Taslim to the right side only. As for what you mentioned that some Muslims do not offer Taslim to the left side under the pretext that Satan is located on the left side, it is a wrong saying and does not have any basis from the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Taslim in Salah is an obligatory act without which Salah is not valid. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ["The key to Salah is purification. Its Tahrim \(forbiddance of any actions outside prayer\) is \(starts\) with the Takbir \(saying: 'Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]\) upon commencing Prayer\) and its Tahlul \(ending of the praying state\) is with the Taslim."](#) (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith except Al-Nasa'y. Al-Tirmidhy said: This is the most authentic narration in this regard and the best one) 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) also reported a Hadith which states: "He \(peace be upon him\) used to conclude the Salah with the Taslim." (Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih [authentic] Book of Hadith, Ahmad in his Musnad and Abu Dawud in his Sunan).

Q: The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque) led us in the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer one day. After he recited the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), he forgot that he was the Imam and said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) to his right and left sides so quietly that nobody heard him. When he finished the second Taslim (to the left side) and before he got up, he remembered that he was the Imam, so he repeated the Taslim in a loud voice. We heard him then, so we said the Taslim after him, but we did not say it previously at the first time as we had not heard him. The Imam did not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) at that time. However, when the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) left the Masjid, he performed Sujud-ul-Sahw alone. What is the ruling on his Salah (Prayer) and that of the Ma'mums? What should he do to clear his conscience, as he is very worried about it?

A: The Salah of the Imam and the Ma'mums is correct - In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) - because they all said the Taslim. Sujud-ul-Sahw is not obligatory in this case.

The first question of Fatwa no. 21672 (second part)

Q 1: We seek a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) about some of the rulings of Salah which we have come across while reading a book entitled (Kashf Al-Ghummah 'An Jami' Al-Ummah) Vol. 1 Ps. 107-108. We would like to know whether these rulings are correct or not.

The second part: The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “If the person goes into a state of (minor) ritual impurity (i.e. breaks wind) when he has sat at the end of his Salah, before taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), his Salah is valid.” In another narration: “If the Imam goes into a state of (minor) ritual impurity before the end of his Salah when he sits down firmly, his Salah and that of those behind him will be complete.”

A: The answer for the second part is that this Hadith is not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Al-Tirmidhy said in his book (Al-Jami' Al-Sahih) after relating this Hadith, “Its Isnad (chain of narrators) is not strong and there is uncertainty about its Isnad.”

The correct view is that Salah can only be ended by Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) which is one of the pillars of Salah, based on the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): “The key to Salah is purification. Its Tahrim (forbiddance of any actions outside prayer) is (starts) with the Takbir (saying: 'Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]' upon commencing Prayer) and its Tahlul (ending of the praying state) is with the Taslim.” (Related by Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhy, Abu Dawud, and Ibn Majah)

The third question of Fatwa no. 19172

Q 3: A friend of mine used to advise me not to wipe off dust which sticks to my forehead from the carpets of Masjids (mosques) after Salah (Prayer) and used to say, "This is an honor and light on your face." But I feel deep inside me that it is a kind of hypocrisy. What is the ruling in this regard?

A: there is nothing wrong in wiping off the dust and the like which sticks to your forehead and it is not a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) to leave it.

dhikr after Salah

Fatwa no. 14774

Q: I am a middle stage student, and I know - all praise be to Allah - the pillars, conditions, and obligations of offering Salah (Prayer). However, I have not found among them what our fathers say is one of the pillars of Salah. They say that whoever does not say: "La ilaha illa Allah wahdahu la sharika lah, lahul-mulk wa lahul-hamd wa huwa 'ala kulli shay'in qadir (There is no deity but Allah Alone, with no partner or associate. His is the Dominion and to Him be praise, and He is able to do all things)" 10 times and, "Subhan Allah (glory be to Allah), Al-hamdu lillah (praise be to Allah), Allahu akbar (Allah is the Greatest)," 33 times that their Salah is Batil (invalid). They also say that offering Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah is a pillar, and if anyone does not perform it, their Salah is Batil. What is your opinion on this?

A: First: It is prescribed for a worshipper, after offering the obligatory Salah, to say what has been authentically narrated from 'Abdullah ibn Al-Zubayr (may Allah be pleased with them) who, when he was standing on the Minbar (pulpit), said: ﴿The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to say: 'La ilaha illa Allah wahdahu la sharika lah, lahul mulk wa lahul hamd wa huwa 'ala kuli shay'in qadir. La hawla wa la quwata illa Billaah. La ilaha illa Allah wa la na'budu illa iyah. Lahul ni'mah wa lahul fadl wa lahul thana' al-hasan. La ilaha illa Allah mukhlisina lahul-dina wa law kariha al-kafirun (There is no deity but Allah Alone, with no partner or associate. His is the Dominion and to Him be praise, and He is Able to do all things. There is neither might nor power except with Allah! There is no deity but Allah, and we worship none but Him. All Blessings and Favour are from Him, and all good praise is due to Him. There is no deity but Allah Alone, we make our worship purely for Him (alone) however much the disbelievers may hate that).'

The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to say them aloud after ending every Salah."﴾ (Related by Imam Muslim and others) It has also been authentically narrated on the authority of Al-Mughirah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, ﴿The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say at the end of every obligatory Salah: 'La ilaha illa Allah wahdahu la sharika lah, lahul mulk wa lahul hamd wa huwa 'ala kuli shay'in qadir. Allahuma la mani' lima a'tayt wala mu'ty lima mana't wala yanfa'u dhal-jid minka aljid (There is no deity but Allah Alone, with no partner or associate. His is the Dominion and to Him be praise, and He is Able to do all things. O Allah! There is no withholder of what You give, and no giver of what You withhold, and no one's wealth or might is of any avail before You).'''﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) It has been authentically reported in a Hadith by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said, ﴿The poor (emigrants) came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said, 'The people of affluence have taken over the highest ranks (in Paradise) and everlasting bliss; they pray as we pray, and they fast as we fast, but they have surplus wealth with which they perform Hajj, 'Umarh (lesser pilgrimage), Jihad (striving in the Cause of Allah) and they give Sadaqah (voluntary charity).’ He (peace be upon him) said, ‘Shall I tell you that which if you do you will overtake those who have preceded you, and none after you shall overtake you, and you will be the best of those you are among, except those who will do as it? Say: Tasbih (‘Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]’), Tahmid (‘Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah]’) and Takbir (‘Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]’) thirty-three times after every Salah (Prayer).” (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) It is prescribed for a worshiper to regularly perform Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) and these are ten Rak’ahs (unit of Prayer) as reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn ‘Umar (may Allah be pleased with them), who said, “I memorized from the Prophet (peace be upon him) ten Rak’ahs (units of Prayer): two Rak’ahs before the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and two after it, two Rak’ahs after the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer in his house, two Rak’ahs after the ‘Isha’ (Night) Prayer in his house, and two Rak’ahs before the Subh (Dawn) Prayer.

There was also the hour during which none was allowed to enter to see the Prophet (peace be upon him). Hafsah told me that when the Mu’adhin (caller to Salah) made the Adhan (call to Prayer) and the dawn broke he (peace be upon him) would offer two Rak’ahs.”

Second: These Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis), Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib, and other supererogatory prayers are Mustahab (desirable) not Wajib (obligatory), so if someone does not perform them, they are not sinful, but they miss the reward for them although their Salah is valid. This is because Allah (Glorified be He) only obligates five Salahs during the day and night.

Q 3: is it permissible to leave the Masjid (mosque) immediately after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) before the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) does so or leaves his place?

A: It is preferred that the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) does not leave the Masjid after Taslim until they make Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) three times, then say: "Allahumma anta al-salam wa minka al-salam, tabarakta ya dhal-jalali wal-ikram (O Allah, You are Al-Salam [the One Who is free from all defects and deficiencies), and from You is all peace, blessed are You, O Possessor of Majesty and Honour)." The fifth question of Fatwa no. 19350

Q 5: After performing the obligatory Salah (Prayer), I hardly say Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) or offer the Sunnah (supererogatory) prayer. Could you kindly advise me in this regard?

A: It is prescribed by Shari'ah (Islamic law) for those who offer the obligatory Salah to keep to lawful du'a' (supplications) and Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) which should be said after every obligatory Salah. They must care to offer Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory prayers that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) and accustom themselves to observe them. They must exert their utmost efforts to perform them as they were reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). They must dedicate their actions to Allah, hoping for great and generous reward. This is supported by the Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: [“The poor \(emigrants\) came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said, ‘The people of affluence have gone with the highest ranks \(in Paradise\) and everlasting bliss; they pray as we pray, and they fast as we fast, but they have surplus wealth with which they perform Hajj, ‘Umarh \(lesser pilgrimage\), Jihad \(striving in the Cause of Allah\) and they give Sadaqah \(voluntary charity\).’ He \(peace be upon him\) said, ‘Shall I tell you that which if you do you will overtake those who have preceded you, and none after you shall overtake you, and you will be the best among those you live among, except those who will do as it? Say: Tasbih \(‘Subhan Allah \[Glory be to Allah\]’\), Tahmid \(‘Alhamdu lillah \[All praise is due to Allah\]’\) and Takbir \(‘Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]’\) thirty-three times after every Salah \(Prayer\).”](#) (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [authentic] book of Hadith, vol. 1, p. 205) In another narration, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “Shall I teach you something by which you will catch up with those who have preceded you, and get ahead of those who come after you, only those who do as you do will be more excellent than you?” They said, “Yes, O Messenger of Allah...” (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, vol. 2, p. 238, vol. 5 p. 167-168). Imam Muslim, Al-Tirmidhy,

(Part No. 5; Page No. 418)

Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah, Abu Dawud narrated other Hadiths that have the same meaning.

It should be also known that al-Sunan al-Rawatib complete the shortcoming which may occur in the obligatory Salah. It was reported by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah, Al-Bayhaqy and Al-Hakim on the authority of Tamim Al-Dary that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “The first thing for which the Servant will be brought to account on the Day of Resurrection will be their Salah \(Prayer\), if they have offered it perfectly, it will be recorded as perfect, and if they have not offered it perfectly, Allah \(may He be Exalted and Glorified\) shall say \(to His Angels\), ‘See if you find for My Servant any voluntary Salah to complete therewith their obligatory Salah.”

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 14893

Q 7: Is it permissible to conclude the Salah (Prayer), meaning making tahmid (saying: "Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah]), tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]) and takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]) after offering the Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah? If I do this, should I make up for the Faridah (obligatory prayer)?

A: Tahmid, Tasbih and Takbir after the Faridah are of the Sunan of Salah. Leaving them does not invalidate the Salah and you should not repeat it.

Q 1: In most Masjids (mosques), particularly in villages, the people offering Salah (Prayer) conclude the Salah with Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) in a loud voice. When I told them that it is better to recite the Adhkar subvocally, some argued that some of the people who offer Salah do not memorize Ayat-ul-Kursy (the Qur'anic Verse of Allah's Chair, Surah Al-Baqarah, 2:255) or can not recite the Adhkar by themselves. I hope Your Eminence will highlight this point. Is concluding the Salah in a loud voice Bid'ah (innovation in religion) that should be abandoned, or is it permissible? Kindly, inform us of the Adhkar reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet).

A: The Adhkar prescribed by Islam after the Faridah (obligatory prayer) should be pronounced individually. Each individual should recite the permissible Adhkar by himself in a loud voice, but not in congregation, as the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) used to do. It was authentically reported in the two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) was recited in a loud voice when people concluded the Faridah at the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Ibn 'Abbas said: "I would know that they finished the Salah when I heard that (Dhikr)." In the Two Sahih Books of Hadith, Al-Mughirah ibn Shu'bah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated some other reports to the same effect. A Hadith was reported in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Ibn Al-Zubayr to the same effect. Reciting Dhikr in a loud voice helps remind people and teach the ones who do not know. However, this should not be in a collective voice, because this is Bid'ah.

Q 4: is it permissible for the one offering Salah (Prayer) to say, "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)," after making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and before saying istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) three times? This is based on the word Takbir stated in the Hadith narrated by Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with both of them) who said [\("I used to recognize the completion of the Salah of the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) by hearing the Takbir \(saying: "Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]"\)."\)](#) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) If it is impermissible, what is meant by Takbir mentioned in the above Hadith?

A: When the Prophet (peace be upon him) concluded his Salah by offering Taslim, he (peace be upon him) used to start with Istighfar three times and then say: [\("Allahumma anta al-salam wa minka al-salam, tabarakta ya dhal-jalali wal-ikram \(O Allah, You are Al-Salam \[the One Who is free from all defects and deficiencies\), and from You is all peace, blessed are You, O Possessor of Majesty and Honour\]."\)](#) Then he (peace be upon him) used to recite the other Adhkar (invocations) authentically reported. As for the Takbir mentioned in the Hadith, it means saying, "Subhan Allah (Glory be to Allah)", "Alhamdu lillah (All praise is due to Allah)", "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)", thirty-three times after finishing every obligatory Salah. This is based on the Hadith narrated in this regard.

Q 1: Does the command in the Hadith which is mentioned in the book of Al-Kalim Al-Tayyib by Ibn Taymiyyah: [\(On the authority of 'Uqbah ibn 'Amir who said: "The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) commanded me to recite Al-Mu'awwidhatayn \[Surahs Al-Falaq and Al-Nas\] after every Salah \(Prayer\)."\)](#) imply an obligation?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 421)

A: The command to recite Al-Mu'awwidhatayn after every Salah in the concerned Hadith implies Istihbab (desirability) not Wujub (obligation). This is because there is an Ijma' (consensus of scholars) to the effect that doing so is not Wajib (obligatory).

The second question of Fatwa no. 21550

Q 2: Is it permissible to pronounce Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") immediately after the obligatory Salah (Prayer) and before saying the Adhkar (invocations) after Salah in the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah, or is this specific to the Days of Tashriq (11th, 12th and 13th of Dhul-Hijjah), including the day of 'Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice)? Please advise.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 422)

May Allah bless you!

A: takbir prescribed after obligatory Salah is specific to the Days of tashriq. It is said immediately after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and before saying the Adhkar.

The third question of Fatwa no. 19327

Q 3: are the adhkar (invocations) said after each obligatory Salah (Prayer) the same to be said after the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer and the Two 'Eid Prayers?

A: It is permissible to say the Adhkar and Du'a' (supplications) reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) after each obligatory Salah also after the Jumu'ah Prayer, as it is a Salah prescribed in congregation, so it is similar to the rest of the enjoined Salah and included in the Hadith narrated by Al-Mughirah ibn Shu'bah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to say after each obligatory Salah, 'La ilaha illa Allah wahdahu la sharika lahu, la hul mulk wa la hul hamd wa huwa 'ala kuli shay'in qadir. Allahuma la mani' lima a'tayt wala mu'ty lima mana't wala yanfa'u dhal-jad minka aljad \(There is no deity but Allah Alone, with no partner or associate. His is the Sovereignty and His is the Praise, and He has power over all things. O Allah! None can withhold what You give and none can give what You withhold, and no one's wealth or might is of any avail before You\).»

It is Sunnah for a person who offers the Jumu'ah Prayer to say the Adhkar and Du'a's prescribed after each obligatory Salah, such as the Zhuhr (Noon), 'Asr (Afternoon) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer. As for the Two 'Eid Prayers, they do not have specific Adhkar and Du'a's after them.

Q 1: I notice that some after offering Salah (Prayer) use their right hand to count the number of times they say the Tasbih ("Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]") without using the left hand. Is this permissible? I know that the left hand is one of the seven members on which one should perform Sujud (prostration) in Salah. On Fridays, some people recite Surah Al-Kahf, and then they recite Surahs Yasin, Al-Sajdah, and Al-Rahman, in this specific order, without starting from Surah Al-Baqarah and ending with Surah Al-Ikhlās. Is this permissible? Should we prostrate for every single occurrence of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses requiring prostration)? If I hear someone other than the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) reciting an Ayah of Ayat-ul-Sujud, should I prostrate if the person reciting it performs Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation)?

A: It is better to count the numbers of Tasbih with the right hand, but it is permissible to use the fingers of both hands too. There are Da'if (weak) Hadith that mention the merits of reciting Surah Al-Kahf on Fridays. However, its recitation by some of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet, may Allah be pleased with them) is evidence that it is Mustahab (desirable) to recite it on Fridays. In addition, it is Mustahab to recite Surah Al-Sajdah on Fridays in the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer together with Surah Al-Insan. There is no evidence of any special merit in the recitation of Surahs Yasin and Al-Rahman, or Al-Baqarah and Al-Ikhlās on Fridays.

Furthermore, it is Mustahab to perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah when reciting an Ayah of Ayat-ul-Sujud, whether while offering Salah or not. This act is Mustahab for both the reciter and the listener, but not for someone who does not have the intention to listen.

The third question of Fatwa no. 13962

Q 3: It is reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to Mu'adh: ﴿O Mu'adh, by Allah I love you, by Allah I love you.﴾ Then he (peace be upon him) said, "I advise you, O Mu'adh, not to miss saying after every Salah (Prayer): O Allah, help me remember You, thank You and worship You in the best manner.﴾ When should we say this Du'a' (supplication); should it be said before or after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) because of the word "after every Salah"?

A: The meaning of "after every Salah" in the mentioned Hadith is: After concluding Salah with Taslim and this is explained with the Hadith of the poor Muhajirun (Emigrants from Makkah to Madinah) in which the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Glorify Allah (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"), magnify Him (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and praise Him (saying: "Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah]") thirty-three times at the end of every Salah.﴾ It is well-known that this dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) is said after Salah, thus the meaning is: After the end of Salah.

Q 14: After offering the Nafilah (supererogatory prayer), some people raise their hands while invoking Allah. On seeing them a learned person told them that they should not invoke Allah after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and it would be better for them to invoke Allah before Taslim. Later I saw this person after Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, having sat down for the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), raising his hands while invoking Allah before Taslim. After Taslim, he left the Masjid without invoking Allah. We seek your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this deed; because I have not seen anyone doing this except this person.

A: there is nothing wrong in invoking Allah after taslim specifically after finishing Adhkar (invocations) of Salah; because it is authentically reported in some Hadiths that it is permissible to do so. The hands should not be raised while invoking Allah after the Faridah (obligatory prayer) but there is nothing wrong with doing this after the Nafilah. Undoubtedly, Du'a' (supplication) before Taslim is better than making it after it, but it is not permissible to raise one's hands while invoking Allah before taslim; because it is considered a Bid'ah (innovation in religion). The person who does so deserves bitter reproach because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected."

Q 1: What is the ruling on raising one's hands to supplicate to Allah after obligatory Salah (Prayer)? What are the places where we should raise our hands in Du'a' (supplication)?

(Part No. 5; Page No. 426)

A: The original ruling is the permissibility of raising one's hands in Du'a', as it is one of the reasons for having the Du'a' answered, except in situations when the Prophet (peace be upon him) supplicated to Allah without raising his hands, such as after the obligatory Salah. He (peace be upon him) said, \("Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected."\)

Q: What is the ruling on saying thrice immediately after salah (Prayer), "O Allah! send Your Mercy and Blessings on our Master Muhammad, Your servant and Messenger", then saying, "Glory to your Lord, the Lord of Honor and Power! (He is free) from what they ascribe (to Him)! And Peace on the Messengers! And praise to Allah, the Lord and Cherisher of the Worlds." and then shaking hands with one another? Please answer me, may Allah reward you!

A: First: Invoking Allah's Mercy and Blessings on the Prophet (peace be upon him) is prescribed by Shari'ah (Islamic law) and even made obligatory by Allah. Moreover, it is of great merit and entails great reward. However, it will be out of place to say it immediately after an obligatory Salah as the Prophet (peace be upon him) is not authentically reported to have done so. Undoubtedly, good lies in following the practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Second: It should not be a usually adopted practice to shake hands after concluding obligatory Salah as it is not one of the Sunan (supererogatory acts of worship following the example of the Prophet) of Salah.

Q 3: What is the ruling on training students to say the Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) said after Salah (prayer) or tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]") congregationally in a loud voice?

A: Students must be taught Adhkar and Du'a' (supplication) and should be encouraged to memorize them by heart in a manner that agrees with that which Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him) have laid down. However, they should not be asked to do so congregationally in a loud voice as it is a groundless Bid'ah (innovation in religion) running counter to basic principles. Actually, students should not be accustomed to Bid'ahs.

Q: We are employees for a public company that produces water and electricity. The nature of the jobs in the company necessitates accuracy and punctuality. Therefore, officials singled out half an hour for performing Zuhr (Noon) Salah (Prayer). Nevertheless, some workers spend more time in performing Salah, which has a negative effect on productivity, on the pretext that they say Adhkar (invocations) prescribed to be said after Salahs and offer Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory prayers that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet). Are we, when this is the case, exempted from saying Adhkar and Sunnah Ba'diyyah/Qabliyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed before/after an obligatory Prayer) in order to comply with our work hours which are obligatory? Give us a fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A: It is sufficient to single out half an hour of work time for performing Salah. However, neglecting work on the pretext of saying Adhkar represents infringement of work. Moreover, one can engage in Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) while working or on his way to it.

Q 3: How should Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) be performed in the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers? Is it one or two Sujud (prostrations)? It is before or after the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: Anyone who loses attention while offering Salah (Prayer) and so misses or does anything extra in Salah by mistake, or has doubts about having performed something extra or missing something in Salah, they should perform two Sujud (prostrations) of Sujud-ul-Sahw either before or after offering the Taslim. Q 5: Can Khushu' (heartfelt reverential submission and humility) and weeping whether by the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) while reciting Qur'an in the Salah (Prayer) affect its validity?

A: Weeping and feeling Khushu' while reciting Qur'an during the Salah do not affect its validity. However, the worshippers offering Salah must do their best not to disturb others who are in the same congregational Salah or who perform Salah or recite Qur'an next to them. Proof for the foregoing is a Hadith which is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that sometimes while praying his chest would heave like the boiling of a cauldron because of weeping. Moreover, it is authentically reported that Al-Siddiq and 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) used to weep while performing Salah.

Sutrah for a person offering Salah

Q 1: A man passed by a person offering Salah (Prayer) behind his Sutrah (barrier placed in front of a person praying). Should he repeat Salah or not, as he did not pass between him and the Sutrah?

A: passing in front of a man who is offering Salah does not interrupt Salah. However, if he passes between him and the Sutrah or too close to him if there is no Sutrah, he commits a sin. If he passes behind the Sutrah or at a far distance if there is no Sutrah, he has not committed a sin, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), “If one of you puts something in front of him such as the back of a saddle, then let him offer Salah without caring who passes beyond that.” (Related by Muslim)

Q 2: What is the ruling on a child passing before a woman offering Salah (Prayer) at home? Is her Salah invalidated or not fully rewarded?

A: Passing in front of a person offering Salah detracts from the Salah, but does not invalidate it except if the Salah is interrupted by the passage of an adult woman, a donkey, or a black dog in front of the worshiper or between him and the Sutra (barrier placed in front of a person praying), as the passage of any of them in front of a person offering Salah nullifies it.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 431)

It is prescribed for the person who offers Salah to turn away whoever wants to pass in front of him whether old or young, a human or an animal. It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “When any one of you prays facing something that is screening him from the people and someone wants to pass in front of him, let him push him back, and if he insists then let him fight him, for he is a devil.” (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) It is also authentically narrated by ‘Amr ibn Shu‘ayb from his father from his grandfather (may Allah be pleased with them) that he said: “We came down with the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) from Thanyat Adhakhir and then the time for Salah came, so he prayed facing a wall taking it as a Qiblah \(direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah\) and we were \(in rows\) behind him. An animal came and wanted to pass in front of him, and he kept pushing it back until he stuck his stomach to the wall, and so it passed from behind him.” (Related by Ahmad and Abu Dawud through a Hasan (good) Sanad [chain of narrators])

Nullifiers of Salah

Q 2: Some people offer the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer as three Rak'ahs (units of Prayer), and sometimes they offer Salah (Prayer) without pronouncing Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). What is the ruling on their Salah?

A: First, the number of Rak'ahs of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers prescribed every day is known and fixed by Ijma' (consensus) of Muslim scholars and lay people. The 'Asr Prayer is four Rak'ahs; it cannot be added to or removed from. If a person adds anything to it or removes anything from it, they have changed the religion of Islam. They should be advised and taught if they are ignorant. If they insist on their ignorance, or they know the correct ruling, they are considered apostates from Islam, and they should be reported to the concerned entity to examine their case.

Second, Taslim is one of the pillars of Salah; it is impermissible to end Salah without it, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him) about Salah, [\("The key to Salah is purification. Its Tahrim \(forbiddance of any actions outside prayer\) is \(starts\) with the Takbir \(saying: 'Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]' upon commencing Prayer\) and its Tahlul \(ending of the praying state\) is with the Taslim \(salutation of peace ending the Prayer\)."\)](#) If a person ends Salah without Taslim, their Salah is invalid. If they are ignorant, they should be taught the correct ruling. All the Muslims everywhere should learn the obligatory matters of Shari'ah (Islamic law) about which no one is excused for ignorance, including the way of Salah, which is one of the pillars of Islam. Concerning it the Prophet (peace be upon him) said,

Q: I was in a Masjid (mosque), while the Zhuhr (noon) Prayer was being performed. The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offered four Rak'ahs (unit of Prayer) and then rose up to offer a fifth. Although all the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) said Tasbih (Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]) [to draw his attention to the mistake he had made], he stood up. One of the Ma'mums spoke and told him that it was a fifth Rak'ah, but the Imam did not listen and completed it.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 435)

The Imam and the Ma'mums had an argument, each defending their opinions. My questions are:

A- Is it permissible for an Imam to continue the Rak'ah although the Ma'mums drew his attention to his mistake?

B- Is it permissible for a Ma'mum to speak while offering Salah (Prayer)?

C- What about a latecomer to a congregational prayer who missed a Rak'ah and the Imam made a fifth one in the Zhuhr Prayer; should he make up for the Rak'ah he missed or does the fifth Rak'ah make up for the missed one?

A: First, it is obligatory for an imam who forgetfully rises up to offer a fifth Rak'ah although the Ma'mums drew his attention and he is not sure himself, to respond to the Ma'mums. If the Imam intentionally continues offering the fifth Rak'ah, his Salah and those who follow him in this will be Batil (null and void) if they know that it is a fifth Rak'ah.

Second, speaking intentionally renders the salah Batil, except for a forgetful or ignorant person; speaking in Salah does not nullify it in their case, according to the preponderant scholarly opinion, because of the Hadith narrated by Mu'awiyah Ibn Al-Hakam that a man sneezed while offering Salah in congregation. Mu'awiyah responded with, "Yarhamuka Allah (May Allah have mercy on you!)" but the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet - may Allah be pleased with them) disapproved of what he did. When he concluded his Salah, he went to ask the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: "Truly, nothing of people's talk is right during this Salah; it is only Tasbih (glorification of Allah), Takbir (magnification of Allah) and recitation of Qur'an." The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order Mu'awiyah to repeat his Salah. This shows that if the one who speaks in Salah is ignorant of the legal ruling, his Salah will be valid. also speaking in Salah for the interest of it does not nullify it. This is based on the Hadith of Dhu Al-Yadayn.

(Part No. 5; Page No. 436)

Third, if someone misses a Rak'ah in a congregational Salah and the Imam mistakenly offers a fifth Rak'ah, they should not consider this additional Rak'ah and should make up for the Rak'ah they missed.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 19853

Q 2: what is the ruling on bringing children to Masjids (mosques)? If a man says to his son: "hush" during Salah; does this invalidate his Salah (prayer)? is it permissible to bring girls who are over six years old to the Masjid? Could you kindly advise us in this regard? May Allah reward you!

A: Firstly, anyone who deliberately says: "hush" to his son during Salah, his Salah is invalidated. But if he says it forgetfully or out of ignorance of the ruling on it, his Salah is valid.

Secondly, young girls under seven years old should not be brought to the Masjid, because they will distract those who offer Salah and get them used to contacting men and this leads to their loss of shyness. If girls are over seven years old or more, it is Haram (prohibited) to bring them to the rows of men or to offer Salah with them in their rows.

Q 1: What is the ruling on forgetfully talking while offering Salah (Prayer)? Does it invalidate Salah?

A: In fact, talking while offering Salah out of forgetfulness or ignorance does not invalidate Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) said: ﴿Our Lord! Punish us not if we forget or fall into error﴾ It is authentically reported in the Sahih of Muslim that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"My Ummah \(nation based on one creed\) has been pardoned for what they do by mistake or forgetfully, or under duress."﴾ Moreover, Mu'awiyah Ibn Al-Hakam Al-Sulamy (may Allah be pleased with him) is reported by Muslim in his Sahih to have said: ﴿"While I was offering Salah \(Prayer\) with the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\), a man among people sneezed, so I said, 'May Allah have mercy on you!' But the people glared at me, so I said, 'May my mother be bereaved of me! Why is it that you stare at me?' They began to strike their thighs with their hands, and when I saw them urging me to observe silence \(I became angry\), but I kept quiet. The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) finished the Salah, and may my father and mother be sacrificed for him, I have never seen a better teacher than him, either before or after him. I swear by Allah that he neither scolded me, nor hit me nor insulted me, but he \(peace be upon him\) only said, 'Truly, nothing of people's talk is right during this Salah; it is only Tasbih \(glorification of Allah\), Takbir \(magnification of Allah\) and recitation of Qur'an."﴾ As understood from the Hadith, the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order the man to repeat his Salah and excused him for his ignorance.

The first question of Fatwa no. 21672 (First Paragraph):

Q 1: We ask about some rulings regarding Salah (Prayer) which we read in a book called, "Kashful-Ghummah 'An Jami' Al-Ummah," Vol. 1 P. 107-108. We would like to know whether such rulings are sound or not. Following are the rulings:

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "If one of you goes into a state of \(minor\) ritual impurity \(i.e. breaks wind\) during his Salah, let him hold his nose and then leave \(Salah\)." This person then should perform Wudu' (ablution) and return to resume his Salah as long as he has not spoken.

A: This Hadith is judged to be Da'if (a Hadith that fails to reach the status of Hasan, due to a weakness in the chain of narration or one of the narrators) by some Hadith scholars. Therefore, its indication, i.e. that the person who goes into a state of minor ritual impurity (passes wind, urine or stools) during Salah should leave his Salah, perform Wudu' and return to complete his Salah, is unsound. Rather, passing urine, stool or wind during Salah invalidates it. Thus, such a person has to start Salah anew after repeating Wudu'. This is indicated by the Hadith reported on the authority of 'Aly Ibn Talq (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: "If one of you breaks wind during Salah, he should leave \(Salah\), perform Wudu' and then repeat the Salah." (Related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah. Q 1: I offered Zuhr (Noon) Salah (Prayer) being led by an Imam until the fourth Rak'ah (Unit of Prayer). However, while saying the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), my wudu' (ablution) was invalidated. Is my Salah valid or not? What should I do then?

A: If your Wudu' is invalidated during the last Tashahhud, your Salah will be invalidated and you will have to re-perform Wudu' and Salah. Allah (Exalted be He) said: ﴿O you who believe! When you intend to offer As-Salât (the prayer), wash your faces and your hands (forearms) up to the elbows, rub (by passing wet hands over) your heads, and (wash) your feet up to ankles.﴾ To the same effect, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿If one of you feels something in his stomach but is doubtful whether or not anything has issued from him, he should not leave the Masjid (mosque) unless he hears a sound or perceives a smell.﴾ (Related by Muslim) The Hadith indicates that one should not leave Salah unless one is certain that ritual impurity took place. Thus certain, one should leave Salah and re-perform Wudu'. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said in the Hadith related by Muslim and others: ﴿Allah does not accept Salah without purification.﴾

Q: A person was offering a four-Rak`ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) behind an Imam.

He nullified his Wudu' (ablution) while saying the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer). So he performed Wudu' again and rejoined Salah, but he found that they were in the last Rak`ah (unit of prayer). Do the two Rak`ahs which he offered with them count or not? What is the ruling on the opinion that states that if he continues facing the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka`bah) while going to perform Wudu' and when returning to Salah, he should only make up for the third Rak`ah which he missed with the Imam? Is there a Hadith in which the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) remembered, after pronouncing Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer), that he was Junub (in a state of major ritual impurity). So he (peace be upon him) asked the worshippers to remain in their places until he performed Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) and returned to continue Salah?

A: It is obligatory upon whomever nullifies their Wudu' during Salah to repeat Wudu' and the Salah. Whatever was offered earlier is invalid because of the nullification of Wudu' and leaving the Salah. There is no Hadith reported in these wordings.

Q 2: If the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is offering Salah (Prayer) and he breaks wind while he is reciting the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer),

what should he do?

A: If the Imam breaks wind during Salah, he should discontinue his Salah and pull one of the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) to lead the people in Salah instead of him. The previous part of the Ma'mums' Salah is valid, so it may be continued as a congregational Prayer. It is also permissible for each of them to continue it on his own. However, the Imam's Wudu' (ablution) is invalidated, and the part of Salah he has offered is nullified. He should discontinue the Salah, perform Wudu' again, and repeat the Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 1: If someone offers a Faridah (obligatory prayer) in the Masjid (mosque) while he is in the first or second row, then suddenly he breaks wind, should he leave the Salah (Prayer)? If he leaves, is it permissible for him to pass between rows of worshipers? If this is permissible, would this interrupt the Salah of others?

A: Anyone who breaks wind while performing Salah should leave it, perform Wudu' (ablution) and then offer Salah anew, for his previous Wudu' is nullified. however, if someone doubts whether he broke wind or not he should not leave the Salah, but rather continues his Salah, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"He should not leave \(Salah\) until he hears a sound or smells an odor \(of passing wind\).">﴿"He should not leave \(Salah\) until he hears a sound or smells an odor \(of passing wind\).﴾ Coming out of the rows of worshipers does not interrupt the Salah of other worshipers.

Q 3: What is the ruling on making many unnecessary movements during Salah (Prayer)? Do they nullify Salah? If so, how many movements do so?

A: Khushu' (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) is enjoined during Salah while making unnecessary movements in it is Makruh (reprehensible). Moreover, if a person makes many unnecessary and successive movements which are irrelevant to the acts of Salah; this will nullify their Salah as it contradicts Khushu'.

A: if laughter reaches the extent of a giggle, it nullifies the Salah. However, if it is little and does not exceed smiling, it does not affect the validity of Salah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19811

Q 1: What is the ruling on putting something, such as cloves, in the mouth while offering Salah (prayer)?

A: It is not permissible for a person offering Salah to put anything in his mouth, for this diverts him from reciting Qur'an and it needs chewing and swallowing, which contradicts the respect due to Salah.

Forgetfulness

The first question of Fatwa no. 20052

Q 1: Many times I forget while offering Salah (Prayer). i may say, "Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)" instead of "Sami'a Allahu Liman Hamidah (Allah listens to those who praise Him)" upon rising from Ruku' (bowing). Should I perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (prostration of forgetfulness) at the end of Salah?

A: If you say, "Allahu Akbar" (Allah is the Greatest) instead of "Sami'a Allahu Liman Hamidah" (Allah listens to those who praise Him) unintentionally, you should offer Sujud-ul-Sahw for you dropped one of the obligations of Salah forgetfully. You should do so whether you lead people in Salah or offer Salah alone or miss some of the Salah by one Rak'ah (unit of prayer) or more. But if you are offering Salah behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) from the beginning, you do not have to do Sujud-ul-Sahw in such a case, for the Imam bears responsibility for it on your behalf.

Q 8: I joined the congregational Salah (Prayer) in the last two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). When the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) said Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), I said it after him, but I then remembered the two other Rak'ahs I missed. So I got up but I offered only one Rak'ah thinking that it was two. When I sat down to recite Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), I remembered, so I offered the second. What is the ruling on this Salah?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 6)

A: You have to perform only Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) as long as you have remembered the missing parts of Salah and made up for them.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19472

Q 1: Is it permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) without reciting Surah Al-Fatihah due to forgetting it and only remembering about it after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) or should I offer the Salah again?

A: If someone forgets to recite Surah Al-Fatihah in any Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), whether while being an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or offering the Salah individually, and remembers while they are still praying, before starting the next Rak'ah, they should go back and recite it and then perform the Ruku' (bowing) and then the Sujud (prostration). If they do not remember until after starting the next Rak'ah, then the Rak'ah in which they forgot to recite Al-Fatihah is Batil (null and void) and the Rak'ah following it will replace it. If they do not remember until after saying the Taslim, they should rise and offer a full Rak'ah and then perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), in all these cases, before saying the Taslim. If they only remember a long time after they had said the Taslim, then they should repeat the whole Salah. If they are Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer), the Imam bears the responsibility, whether this was done out of ignorance of the ruling or out of forgetfulness.

Seventh question of Fatwa no. 18891

Q 7: I was praying as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), but in one Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) I was preoccupied by some of the affairs of this world so I did not do any recitation; what is the ruling on this?

A: If you recited Al-Fatihah but did not recite anything else, your Salah (Prayer) is valid, as the recitation that follows Al-Fatihah in the Salah is Mustahab (desirable) but not Wajib (obligatory). Conversely, if you did not recite Al-Fatihah; such a Rak`ah is Batil (null and void), as reciting Al-Fatihah is a Rukn (integral) of Salah as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «The prayer of whoever does not recite Al-Fatihah is invalid.» In such a case, the Rak`ah that follows the mentioned one is to substitute it and the concerned person has to make up for the Rak`ah in which they forgetfully did not recite Al-Fatihah. They also have to make Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before making the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and after finishing Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), invoking peace and blessings on the Prophet, and making Du`a' (Supplication).

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 20941

Q 4: What is the ruling when a person forgets to recite the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer) but then they remember or are reminded? Please tell me what such a person should do if they remember the first Tashahhud

(Part No. 6; Page No. 8)

(a) while their hands are still on the floor;

(b) or after finishing the recitation of Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Fatihah 'in the third Rak`ah'?

A: When a person remembers the first Tashahhud before standing up fully, he as to return to the sitting position and perform it. If he remembers the first Tashahhud after standing up fully but before starting the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah; it will be Makruh (reprehensible) for him to return to the sitting position to perform Tashahhud. Besides, if they remember the Tashahhud after starting the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah; it will be Haram (prohibited) for him to return to the sitting position. However, the person in question has in all cases to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness).

Q 2: If someone forgets to recite an Ayah (verse) from Surah Al-fatihah during any of the Salahs (Prayers), should they perform Sujud Al-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) without performing a Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) in place of that in which they forgot to recite the whole Surah (chapter) or even an Ayah from it?

A: Anyone who forgets to recite Surah Al-Fatihah or even an Ayah from it must perform another Rak'ah in place of the Rak'ah in which they have not recited Surah Al-Fatihah or any an Ayah from it, whether they are the Imam (the one leading a congregational Prayer) or performing Salah alone. They must also perform Sujud Al-Sahw. If they are a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer), the Imam will take the responsibility and the Ma'mum will not have to do anything if they are ignorant of the ruling or omit it forgetfully.

A: If the person offering Salah, as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or individually, forgets any of the obligatory actions of Salah, such as saying, "Subhana Rabbiyal-A'la," then they should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw before saying Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). In case of being a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) who joins the congregational Salah from its commencement, then the Imam bears the responsibility, and there is nothing wrong if they perform Sujud-ul-Sahw after Taslim.

The third question of Fatwa no. 14594

Q 3: A man joined the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation after they stood up from the Ruku' (bowing) of the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). After the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), the man stood up to perform a Rak'ah and recited the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer). He then performed another two Rak'ahs, recited the final Tashahhud, and said the Taslim.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 10)

A man was watching him and after he had said the Taslim, he reminded him that he had to perform another Rak'ah and Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). He, thus, stood up and performed the Rak'ah and said the Taslim, but he did not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw. What is the ruling concerning this Salah (Prayer)? What should he have done?

A: If he did not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw intentionally, then his Salah is Batil (null and void) and he should repeat it. However, if he did not perform it mistakenly or ignorantly, then he does not have to repeat it and his Salah is correct.

A: Saying Takbirat-ul-Intiqal when moving from one Rukn (integral/Pillar) to another is one of the obligatory actions of Salah (Prayer), according to the more correct of the two opinions of the scholars. Anyone who intentionally does not say these Takbirat [plural of Takbir] or intentionally omit any of them, their Salah is Batil (null and void). However, if anyone does not say the Takbir because they forgot to say it, they should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Q: I had doubts about my Salah (Prayer) and forgot to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) and also forgot to say: "Subhana Rabbiyal-'Adhim (I extol the Perfection of my Lord, the Most Great)". Is my Salah nullified?

A: If you have doubts concerning your Salah, you should continue praying based on the actions you are sure that you have performed, and then you should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw. If you forget to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw and there is a long intervening period, then nothing is required of you. Saying "Subhana Rabbiyal-'Adhim" is obligatory in Ruku' (bowing), but if you forget it then you should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw and your Salah will be correct.

Q 8: After concluding Salah (Prayer), I doubted whether I added or omitted parts of the Salah. When I stood up, my doubts were gone. What should I do?

A: It is obligatory upon the person who is doubtful of their Salah to base their Salah upon that which they are certain about, which is the lesser actions they performed. For example, if someone doubts whether they have offered three or four Rak'ahs (units of Prayer), they should consider them as three and offer a fourth Rak'ah and then offer Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). This is based on the following Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “If any of you doubts during their Salah and does not know whether they have performed three or four \(Rak'ahs\), they should cast aside their doubts and build on what they are sure of. Then they should perform two prostrations before offering Taslim \(salutation of peace ending the Prayer\).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 12)

If the Rak'ah they have prayed is the fifth, they (the two prostrations) will make their Salah of an even number of Rak'ahs; and if by praying it they have completed four Rak'ahs, they (the two prostrations) will be vexing humiliation for Satan.” (Related by Muslim) But when in doubt as to whether one has omitted or completed a part of Salah, one should build on what is more likely to have occurred and complete the missing parts of their Salah, say Taslim and then offer Sujud-ul-Sahw. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “When any of you is in doubt during their Salah, they should seek what is correct and complete their Salah accordingly, then say Taslim and afterwards offer the two prostrations \(of forgetfulness\).” (Related by Al-Bukhari) As for experiencing doubts after offering Salah, one should ignore them for they do not affect the validity of their Salah.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18808

Q 3: If someone has doubts about whether or not they performed a Rukn (integral/Pillar) or an obligatory action in Salah (Prayer) they have just offered, should they perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) just once or do they have to perform it for every error they made?

A: If the person praying has doubts as to whether or not they missed a Rukn in their Salah, they are like someone who has actually missed it and they have to perform this Rukn, unless they are already standing up to offer the next Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). In this case, the next Rak'ah nullifies and replaces the previous Rak'ah about which one is in doubt of a Rukn being omitted. The person should also perform Sujud-ul-Sahw. However, if they start to have the doubts after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), this has no effect on the validity of Salah, as the basic rule is that the Salah offered is complete and correct. If they have doubts as to whether they omitted an obligatory act, they should not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, because they doubt the reason necessitating Sujud-ul-Sahw and the basic rule is its absence.

Q 3: I was offering the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, and I was reciting the Qur'an subvocally when I remembered in the middle of an Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that I should have been reciting out loud, so I started to do so. I only remembered about this when I was going to offer the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer. Do I have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw now or not?

A: Anyone who recites subvocally in a Salah (Prayer) that is preferred to be recited out loud should recite out loud as soon as they remember. They do not have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Should I recite out loud in the second Rak'ah only or should I continue to recite subvocally? Do I have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) or should I repeat the whole Salah?

A: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to recite Al-Fatihah and whatever is recited after it from the Qur'an out loud in the first two Rak'ahs of the Maghrib (Sunset), 'Isha' (Night), and Fajr (Dawn) Prayers, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do so. The first question of Fatwa no. 18896

Q 1: I work as an assistant Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in one of the Masjids (mosques) in our village. When the Imam is absent, I perform his duties in the Masjid. Once, when I led the people in the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, the following happened:

After I finished Sujud (prostration) for the fourth Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), I stood up thinking that it had been the third. After I stood up, I heard three of the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) saying, "Subhan Allah (Glory be to Allah)," so I realized that I had made a mistake and stood for a fifth Rak'ah. As I was already standing erect, I did not sit down again, and also most of the Ma'mums stood to offer this extra Rak'ah following me as the Imam. Some of them remained sitting until we had finished the extra Rak'ah. We performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after this to remedy the Salah (Prayer) and then said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Those who had remained sitting also said the Taslim. Then, one of them got up and said that the Salah of those who had followed the Imam, despite knowing that it was an extra Rak'ah, was Batil (null and void) and it was obligatory on them to repeat it. He also said that the Salah of the Imam was Batil, as more than one person drew his attention to this extra Rak'ah, and he should have sat down after he had stood up then perform Sujud-ul-Sahw before the Taslim. Others said that the Salah of the Imam and those who followed him was correct, while the Salah of those who remained sitting was Batil. Which is correct? Is it correct not to follow the Imam in this situation? When is it permitted not to follow him? What is the legal ruling on all these matters?

A: Firstly: The Imam does not have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw if he is sure of the correctness of what he has done. He is not permitted to respond to those who say, "Subhan Allah," if he thinks that they are mistaken. However, if the Imam is not sure that what he has done is correct, it is obligatory on him to sit down in response to them, because what he has stood up for is an additional act and he is not permitted to continue in it.

Secondly: The Ma'mums who know that he has stood up to offer an extra Rak'ah, a fifth Rak'ah in a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) for example, should draw the Imam's attention to it by saying, "Subhan Allah." If the Imam does not respond, they should remain sitting and wait for the Imam to say the Taslim and say it after him. Accordingly, the Salah of those who remained sitting and said the Taslim after the Imam was correct. On the other hand, those who stood with the Imam and followed him, while knowing that it was an extra Rak'ah and were cognizant of the Shar'y (Islamic legal) ruling that it was not legitimate to follow him in this situation, their Salah was Batil, as they were not permitted to follow him in that, and they should repeat their Salah.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 17)

Those who thought that the Salah was not complete or had doubts as to whether their Salah was complete or deficient should follow the Imam to complete their Salah with him.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16370

Q 4: An Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offered one Sujud (Prostration) in the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units). After he had said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) drew his attention to his mistake, so he performed one Sujud only of Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) and said that it compensated for what he had missed. He did not perform two Sujud? Was his Salah correct?

A: If someone forgets to perform one of the two Sujud in the last Rak'ah of a Salah and remembers it after saying the Taslim, and the time between the two actions (the missing and the remembering) is not long, they should perform Sujud, recite the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), say the Taslim, and then perform the two Sujud of Sujud-ul-Sahw. There is nothing wrong if they perform them before saying the Taslim. However, if the time between the two actions is long, they should repeat the whole Salah from the beginning. Therefore, the Salah of the Imam was not correct, because he did not do what was required of him. Both the Imam and the congregation who prayed behind him should repeat this Salah.

Q 2: What is the ruling on an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who forgets and sits for Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) in the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), then realizes that he is wrong and stands up to continue Salah (Prayer) then offers Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: If the Imam mistakenly sits to recite the Tashahhud in the first Rak'ah, they should offer Sujud-ul-Sahw before or after Taslim, because they added an action extra to those performed in Salah.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 19048

Q 5: I am the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque). Once, when I was about to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), but some of the late-coming Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) stood up to make up for what they had missed before I had prostrated. Should they then have had to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw after they had made up for what they missed?

A: If the Imam makes a mistake and performs Sujud-ul-Sahw, it is obligatory upon the Ma'mums to follow him in performing it even if they are latecomers.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 19)

If the Imam performs Sujud-ul-Sahw after saying the Taslim and the latecomers stand up to compensate for what they had missed and do not follow the Imam in Sujud-ul-Sahw, their Salah will be correct, but they will have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, after making up for what they missed, before or after Taslim.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 18762

Q 5: Some Imams (those who lead the congregational Prayer) do not change the tone of their voices - when they say the Takbir ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") before sitting for the Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer) - from the usual tone that they use in the other utterances of Takbir. As a result, some of the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) stand up while the Imam and the other Ma'mums remain in the sitting posture, so they sit down again. Do they have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after the Imam and the Ma'mums say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), because they made a mistake and stood up when the Imam remained seated?

A: The Ma'mums do not have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw if they do something mistakenly while praying behind the Imam, unless they come late and miss some of the congregational Salah (Prayer), as the Imam assumes the responsibility for them for Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Fatwa no. 21439

Q: An Imam led the people in the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, performed one Sujud (prostration) in the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) then stood up to offer the second Rak'ah, - i.e. he did not sit between the two Sujud and did not perform the second Sujud - and then he started to recite Surah Al-Fatihah. When the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) drew his attention to it, he went down to perform the second Sujud, but still he did not sit between the two Sujud. He then stood up and offered the second Rak'ah, and performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). What should he have done in that situation? Is what the Imam did correct? Please reply, and may Allah reward you the best!

A: By missing the second Sujud and the sitting between the two Sujud, this Imam omitted two Rukns (Pillars) of Salah (Prayer). If someone omits one or more Rukn of Salah, and does not remember until after they start the recitation in the next Rak'ah, the current Rak'ah will replace the previous Rak'ah which was Batil (null and void), because of the lacking Rukn. They should, therefore, complete their Salah on that basis and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw. It is not permissible to return to perform Sujud after having already started the recitation for the following Rak'ah. Therefore, what the Imam did of going back to make up for what he missed was not permissible, as he based it on an invalid Rak'ah and also the time intervening between the two actions was long. Consequently, all the congregation have to repeat the whole Salah.

Q: Should the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who rises up to offer a fifth Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), then remembers that it is the fifth while standing up, go down again or complete that extra Rak'ah?

A: It is impermissible for a person offering Salah (Prayer) to stand to perform a fifth Rak'ah in a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units). If they intentionally do this, their Salah will be nullified. But if they mistakenly stand up, they should go back once they remember and they should not complete the fifth Rak'ah. They should then perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) and their Salah will be correct.

Q 2: I acted as the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in a Masjid (mosque) and while I was leading the people in Salah (Prayer) I forgot to sit for the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer). The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) said, "Subhan Allah (Glory be to Allah)" to remind me, but I was already standing up fully erect. I, thus, continued the Salah and performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Was I correct in doing this?

A: Reciting the first Tashahhud is one of the obligatory actions in Salah. If the Imam forgets it and the Ma'mums draw his attention to it before he is standing fully erect, he is obligated to return and sit to recite the Tashahhud. But if he is already standing erect, then it is Makruh (reprehensible) for him to return and sit for the Tashahhud, even if the Ma'mums say, "Subhan Allah". If he is standing and has started to recite Surah Al-Fatihah, he is forbidden from going back to recite the first Tashahhud, because he has already started another Rukn (integral/Pillar) of the Salah, and he is obligated to recite Surah Al-Fatihah.

He is not permitted to leave a Rukn of Salah for an obligatory action, which can be compensated for by Sujud-ul-Sahw. Hence, what you did by concluding the Salah without returning to recite the first Tashahhud after fully standing up, and performing Sujud-ul-Sahw before the Taslim was correct. This is in accordance with the Hadith narrated by Al-Mughirah ibn Shu'bah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"If one of you is offering Salah and has stood up in place of sitting \(for Tashahhud\), if they have not stood up perfectly straight, let them sit \(for Tashahhud\), and they are not required to offer two prostrations \(of forgetfulness\); but if they have already stood up perfectly straight, let them continue their Salah and offer two prostrations \(of forgetfulness\) while sitting."﴾ (Related by Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah, and Al-Daraqutny) Another evidence is the Hadith of 'Abdullah ibn Buhaynah (may Allah be pleased with him) who narrated: [﴿"Once the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) led them in the Zhuhr \(Noon\) Prayer but he stood up after the first two Rak'ahs without sitting down \(to recite Tashahhud\). The people stood up with him. When he \(peace be upon him\) finished the Salah and people waited for him to conclude it with Taslim, he said Takbir \(saying: 'Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]\) while sitting and prostrated twice before the Taslim and then he said the Taslim."﴾](#) (Related by the Seven Compilers of Hadith [Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah, and Ahmad])

(Part No. 6; Page No. 23)

The wording is that of Al-Bukhari.

May Allah give us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 19635

Q 1: In one of the Masjids (mosques) during the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, when the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) got up to offer the fourth Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), he remembered that he had not recited Surah Al-Fatihah in the third Rak'ah. So, he abrogated the third Rak'ah and considered the fourth to be in its place. The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) did not know what he had done, so when he stood up to perform the fourth Rak'ah, they thought it was the fifth. They became divided; one group stood up and followed the Imam, others remained sitting waiting for him to sit down to say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after him, and yet some others sat down, said the Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), and the Taslim while the Imam was standing. After the Imam had said the Taslim, he told the Ma'mums what had happened and told those who did not follow him to stand up and offer the last Rak'ah, which they had thought was the fifth, and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Please give us your legal opinion as to who was correct in this situation, and may Allah reward you.

A: What the Imam said was correct. Those who did not follow the Imam in offering this last Rak'ah for completion of the four-Rak'ah Salah had to offer it after he said the Taslim and also perform Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Their Salah is correct - In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) - because they did not deliberately intend not to follow the Imam, it was because they thought that he was offering a fifth Rak'ah by mistake.

Q 1: We were offering the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in congregation in the Masjid (mosque). At the end of the second Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) and after performing Sujud (prostration), the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) forgot to recite the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer). The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) did not follow him and remained sitting to recite the Tashahhud. Some of them tried to draw the Imam's attention to his mistake by saying, "Subhan Allah (Glory be to Allah)." The Imam, thus, sat down to recite the Tashahhud and performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). However, a man got up and said that the Salah (Prayer) was Batil (null and void), because the Imam sat down again after standing up. He said that if just the hands and knees of the Imam had slightly risen off the ground, he should not have returned to sit down. He also said that the Ma'mums did not follow him when he stood up. As a result, some people repeated their Salah and others did not. Was the Salah Batil? Please answer in detail and may Allah reward you greatly!

A: If the Imam has stood up fully erect to offer the third Rak'ah having forgotten to recite the first Tashahhud and some of the Ma'mums have drawn his attention to his mistake, it is Makruh (reprehensible) for him to return to the sitting posture. If he has already started the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah, then it is prohibited for him to return. When he concludes his Salah, he should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw before saying the Taslim. This is because the first Tashahhud is one of the obligatory actions in Salah that can be compensated for by performing Sujud-ul-Sahw.

In your case, as the Imam sat down to recite the Tashahhud after he had stood up fully, when the Ma'mums drew his attention to his mistake, and he had not started to recite Surah Al-Fatihah, this does not affect the validity of your Salah. Therefore, your Salah and that of the Imam is correct, but the Imam should avoid doing this in the future.

Q 2: Does the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who stands up for an extra Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) out of forgetfulness have to return to the sitting position once he hears Tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]") or he have to complete such Rak`ah and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) after making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: When the Imam stands up for an extra Rak`ah out of forgetfulness and then he realizes this or is reminded by the Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer), he has to return to the sitting position for making Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer). The Imam has then to make Taslim followed by Sujud-ul-Sahw. However, Sujud-ul-Sahw may also be performed before making Taslim.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16837

Q 2: One day we offered the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who concluded the Salah with the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after only two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). He then wanted to repeat the whole Salah (Prayer). I told him it was enough to offer one more Rak'ah, but he said that they wanted to repeat it. Which is the best, to repeat the Salah or to offer the one omitted Rak'ah?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 26)

A: Anyone who unintentionally omits a Rak'ah in the Maghrib Prayer should get up and offer a Rak'ah, recite the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), say the Taslim, offer the two prostrations of Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), and then say the Taslim again. They do not have to repeat the whole Salah; because they have not intentionally omitted the Rak'ah. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) mistakenly omitted one of the actions of Salah and said the Taslim, then his attention was drawn to it, he made up for what he omitted, said the Taslim, then performed Sujud-ul-Sahw. He did not repeat the whole Salah. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿ Indeed in the Messenger of Allāh \(Muhammad ﷺ\) you have a good example to follow ﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿ "Pray as you have seen me praying." ﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book]) However, if the intervening period before the Rak'ah is made up for is longer than is customarily acceptable, the Imam and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) should repeat the whole Salah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 13754

Q 1: Last Ramadan, I offered the Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in congregation in the large Masjid (mosque) in our village. Our village judge led us in the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, then a scholar - a kind man who has memorized the Qur'an and works as a teacher in the academic institute in our village - took over and led us in the Tarawih Prayer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 27)

During the Salah (Prayer), he mistakenly combined three Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) and no one drew his attention to this. After he had said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) told him that he had combined three Rak'ahs. He turned to the judge and asked him whether what they said was correct. The judge replied it was and told him that he had to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) without offering another Rak'ah, which the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) did. Is this correct? What should we do in other similar cases?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, then the Salah is valid.

Q 3: An Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) made a mistake in the Salah (Prayer) and then a man came and joined the congregation in the fourth Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) and followed the Imam when he performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Is it obligatory on a latecomer to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw with the Imam or not?

A: If the Imam performs Sujud-ul-Sahw for making mistake unintentionally, the latecomer should perform Sujud-ul-Sahw with him. This should be done before standing up to complete anything that was missed in the Salah. If the Imam does not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) do not have to perform it, because they are following the Imam in compliance with the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \("The Imam is appointed to be followed."\)

Q: While I was reciting the Surah (Qur'anic chapter) [after Surah Al-Fatihah] in the second Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer on Monday 23/9/1411 A.H., I thought that I had not recited Surah Al-Fatihah. In fact, I am not sure when the thought came to me, it was either when I rose up for the second Rak'ah, or when I started reciting the Surah or during recitation. So, I recited Al-Fatihah and followed it with some Ayat (Qur'anic verses) from the Surah that I had been reciting. I then performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Upon concluding the Salah (Prayer), I reproached the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) - who were over fifty people - for not letting me know. After all people had left, two men stayed behind and told me that I had recited Surah Al-Fatihah twice, meaning that I was mistaken when I first thought that I had not recited it. What is the ruling on that Salah in which I recited Al-Fatihah twice (in the same Rak'ah) and then performed Sujud-ul-Sahw?

Q 1: A man offered the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation. In one Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) missed one of the two Sujud (prostrations), but the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) reminded him. After reciting the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), the Imam performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). None of the Ma'mums disapproved of what he did. Should the Ma'mums also follow the Imam in saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), then offer a Rak'ah after which they perform Sujud-ul-Sahw; or they should not say the Taslim but rise to offer another Rak'ah and then perform Sujud-ul-Sahw; or are they not required to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw? If they have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, when should it be performed, before or after the Taslim? Please advise us, and may Allah reward you greatly.

A: If the Ma'mum knows that the Imam has unintentionally omitted a Sujud, they should not say the Taslim with the Imam. If the omitted Sujud was not in the last Rak'ah, they should offer another Rak'ah instead of the one in which a Sujud was missed out, then recite the final Tashahhud and say the Taslim.

If the omitted Sujud was in the last Rak'ah, the Ma'mum should offer the Sujud that was omitted before saying the Taslim and then recite the final Tashahhud and say the Taslim. If there was a long intervening period before the omitted Sujud was made up for, then the whole Salah (Prayer) should be offered again.

Q: I performed Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation, and when the Imam stood up after the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), I joined the Salah and recited Du`a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer). i then followed the imam in Ruku` without reciting Surah Al-Fatihah when the imam made Ruku` (bowing), but when he pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), I performed another Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) and offered Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Was what I did correct or should I have followed the Imam in Taslim, performed another Rak`ah and prostrated for forgetfulness?

A: You did not need to make up for a Rak`ah simply because you did not recite Al-Fatihah. However, as long as you offered this Rak`ah thinking that failure to recite Al-Fatihah in a Rak`ah makes it incomplete and for that reason you made up for that Rak`ah and prostrated for forgetfulness, then there is no blame due on you because you are excused for your ignorance.

Q: One day while we were performing `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) stood up for a fifth Rak`ah (unit of Prayer). Hence, the Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) reminded him by reciting Tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"). Nevertheless, the Imam - who stood up fully - did not sit down. Rather, he completed the fifth Rak`ah and then made Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before Taslim. Then the people disagreed. Some said that the concerned Salah (Prayer) was Batil (null and void). Others claimed it was valid, whereupon the Imam said that it is not permissible for a person to return to the sitting position to make Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) after standing up fully for a fifth Rak`ah. Could you please inform us of your opinion on this? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If a person stands up - fully or partially - for a fifth Rak`ah in an obligatory Salah and remembers or is reminded that such Rak`ah is additional, he has to return to the sitting position. If the person completes the fifth Rak`ah even though he knows that it is an extra one and that he has to return to the sitting position; his Salah is Batil. The same ruling applies to the Salah of the Ma'mums who follow the Imam even though they know that he is performing an extra Rak`ah and that they have to return to the sitting position. It is worth mentioning that the Salah of those who are not aware of this ruling is valid i.e. they are excused because of their ignorance. Any way, you should not make the same mistake in the future.

Q: When the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) was about to sit for the second Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position), in the last Rak`ah (unit) of the `Isha' (Night) Prayer, two persons said loudly "Subhana Allah (Glorified be Allah)", hinting that he missed a Rak`ah. However, the Imam and the entire congregation were quite sure that the prayer was complete except those two persons. Nevertheless, the Imam stood up and performed another Rak`ah though being sure that it was the fifth. Before Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), the Imam offered Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Is the prayer valid or should we repeat it?

A: If the Imam is quite sure that he is right, it is not permissible for him to consider the Tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]") of those who are led by him in the prayer. Their Tasbih indicates suspicion and certainty is given privilege. What the Imam did was wrong. Q: Shaykh `Abdullah bin `Abdul-`Aziz bin Khanin is the appointed Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of Masjid (mosque) II in Bilsamar. He studied in the Halaqahs (learning circles) of Shaykhs Muhammad ibn Ibrahim and `Abdul-Latif (may Allah be merciful with them both). Being assigned in the year 1367 A.H., our concerned Imam was the first appointed Imam in the area of Bilsamar. Thanks to Allah, he has a sound `Aqidah (creed). The point is that while performing one Salah (Prayer), this Imam offered one extra Sajda (Prostration) out of forgetfulness. People told him about it after finishing Salah. The Imam then offered Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Nevertheless, some worshippers who had performed Salah with the Imam formed another congregation and repeated the same Salah. As this offended the Imam, we tried to reconcile between the two parties but the man who led the second congregation insisted that we refer the matter to your Eminence. It may be worth mentioning that the answer of `Ali ibn Nasir implies vagueness when saying: Whoever leads another congregation. He said that people who prayed behind him were late comers i.e. they did not perform Salah with the first congregation. However, the Imam said that they were amongst worshippers who initially performed Salah behind him. `Ali ibn Nasir then commented that only two of those who initially performed Salah behind him prayed with the first congregation. Even so, the Imam asserted that all those who prayed with the second congregation had first prayed behind him. Of course, this caused a great deal of confusion. Moreover, this as well as other similar incidences negatively affect Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) causing them to doubt their Imams. Please advise! May Allah safeguard you!

A: The Imam in question acted correctly by offering Sujud-ul-Sahw.

As he did not intend to perform any extra Sujud, his Salah is valid. The same is the ruling on the Salah of the Ma'mums who followed the Imam while they were not aware of the additional Sujud. A proof for this is a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(If a person adds something to his Salah or misses something thereof, he is to perform two Sujuds 'Prostrations'.\) (Related by Muslim). Therefore, whoever performed the extra Sujud following the Imam knowing that it is not permissible for them to do so; their Salah is Batil (null and void) for they deliberately made an addition to Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20594

Q: I said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) had said the first Taslim to his right side, but before he had said the Taslim to his left side. What is the ruling on this?

A: If someone says the Taslim before the Imam by mistake, they have to say it again after the Imam finishes saying it; but they do not have to offer Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) for this.

Q: The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) performed only one Sujud (Prostration) during the last Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) of `Isha' (Night) Prayer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 35)

One of the Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) notified the Imam during Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer) that he had made a mistake (by saying Tasbih: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"). Nevertheless, the concerned Imam performed two more Sujuds (Prostrations). He thus made Sujud three times: what should he do before Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)? It is worthy mentioning that the Ma'mums doubted whether they had to make up for the Salah.

A: If an Imam forgets to perform the second Sujud of the last Rak`ah and then he is reminded during the last Tashahhud, he has to perform only this one Sujud and he is to offer the last Tashahhud again then Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). This is because following the prescribed sequence in Salah (Prayer) is one of its Rukns (Pillars). Regarding the case mentioned in the question, if the concerned Imam intended Sujud-ul-Sahw by the two Sujuds that he offered after being notified that he had made a mistake; his and his Ma'mums Salah is Batil (null and void). This is because the Salah lacked one of its Rukns which is the second Sujud of the fourth Rak`ah and that - as well as all the other Rukns of Salah - may not be compensated for by Sujud-ul-Sahw. Consequently, both the Imam and the Ma'mums have to make up for the whole Salah. The same is true if the Imam in question intended by the same two Sujuds to offer the two Sujuds of the last Rak`ah again without following them by the last Tashahhud as the Salah lacked another Rukn (Pillar) i.e. the last Tashahhud. This is because the Tashahhud that the concerned Imam offered before the two Sujuds in question are not counted. Since there was - in such case - a long separation between the Tashahhud and Taslim without offering Tashahhud again, both the Imam and the Ma'mum have to offer the whole Salah again.

Q 1: I was offering Zuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation. I joined them in the third Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). When the Imam (the one leading the congregational Prayer) finished the Salah (Prayer), he offered Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), so i stood up to complete the parts of the Salah i had missed. However, when i stood upright performing the parts i missed, the imam prostrated to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). What should I do in such situation?

A: If you stood to complete what you had missed from the Salah and had already stood fully upright, then the Imam prostrated to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, you should continue with performing the parts of Salah you had missed and not sit to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw with the Imam. This is because, if you starts a Rak'ah, it is not permissible to go back (in the steps). However, you have to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw after completing the parts you have missed, and it is better to perform it before the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer).

Q 2: A man often makes mistakes while offering his Salah (Prayer), and when he concludes his Salah, he performs Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). However, he also makes mistakes while performing Sujud-ul-Sahw by adding one Sujud (prostration) to it. What should this man do?

A: If someone frequently makes mistakes in Salah that can be compensated for by Sujud-ul-Sahw, it is enough for them to offer two Sujud for all their mistakes.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 37)

They do not have to repeat Sujud-ul-Sahw for mistakes made in it.

Q 1: When I was offering the congregational Salah (Prayer), the Imam stood up for a fifth Rak`ah (unit of Prayer). I thus alerted him (by saying Tasbih: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"), so he returned to the sitting position, made Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), and then performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) before making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Was this Imam right or he had to make Sujud-ul-Sahw after Taslim and make another Taslim?

A: Sujud-ul-Sahw for adding extra part to the Salah may be performed before Taslim or after it. Accordingly, what the Imam did in the question was right and the Salah is valid for both the Imam and the Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer).

Q 2: While I was performing Fajr (Dawn) Prayer with the congregation, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) - out of forgetfulness - performed only one Sujud (Prostration) for the second Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) and made Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) and Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). When Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) told the concerned Imam that he missed one Sujud, he stood up making Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") to redo the second Rak`ah. Nevertheless, I thought that the Imam would redo the entire Salah (Prayer) and intended so by my Takbir. The Imam performed the second Rak`ah again then made Taslim and I did the same following him. What is the ruling on this?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 38)

A: If a person forgets to perform the last Sujud before making Taslim and remembers or is reminded of it; they have to offer such Sujud then Tashahhud then Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). They do not have to redo the entire Rak`ah. Accordingly, what the Imam did in the question was wrong and an addition to Salah. However, the Imam is excused for being ignorant of the concerned ruling. Moreover, your intention of redoing the Salah for thinking that the Imam intended so does not affect its validity.

Q: While the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) was leading the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, he forgot to recite two Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) from Surah Al-Fatihah. The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) were sure that he had not recited them, but they did not correct him until after they had concluded the Salah (Prayer). When the Imam said the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), they told him that he had missed the two Ayahs. He agreed with what they had said and added that he felt that he had finished reciting Surah Al-Fatihah too quickly, but he said that if he had made a mistake, one of the Ma'mums would have drawn his attention to it. What is the ruling on this Salah?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, then you should all repeat the Salah, because a Salah is not correct without the recitation of the whole of Surah Al-Fatihah and you did not do that. It was obligatory on the Imam, when he became sure that he had missed some Ayahs from Surah Al-Fatihah, to stand up at once and offer another Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), recite the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), and then say the Taslim.

If he did not do that and there was a long gap between saying the Taslim and offering another Rak'ah, then you should all repeat the Salah.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 19576

Q 4: An Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) made a mistake in Salah (Prayer) that necessitated the performance of Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), but he forgot to do it. When he turned around to face the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer), they reminded him that he had forgotten to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw. Is it permissible for him to face the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) again and perform Sujud-ul-Sahw? What is the ruling on this?

A: If the Imam forgets to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw and is reminded after turning to the Ma'mums, he should face the Qiblah, say the Takbir ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), prostrate twice for Sujud-ul-Sahw, and then say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). He then intended to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), but instead of offering two Sujud (prostrations) he offered only one and forgot the second. Is his Salah (Prayer) Batil (null and void) and needs to be repeated or should he perform Sujud-ul-Sahw once again after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) to correct his Salah?

A: If he did not perform the second Sujud of Sujud-ul-Sahw and remembered it shortly after he had said the Taslim, he should return and perform the second Sujud and say the Taslim again, and his Salah will be correct. If he did not remember about it until a long time has passed after the Taslim, he does not need to perform Sujud and his Salah will be correct, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Q 3: If the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) mistakenly offers an extra Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) or he wants to get up in place of sitting, but the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) remind him, should he say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), then perform Sujud (prostration) and then say the Taslim again? That is what we know, but some of the Du'ah (callers to Islam) say that if someone mistakenly adds an extra action to Salah (Prayer), they should say one Taslim to the right side, perform Sujud twice, and then say one Taslim to the left side. They take as evidence that the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not say the Taslim four times in one Salah. They misinterpret the Hadith which was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim about the account of Dhu Al-Yadayn, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who narrated: «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) completed the remaining part of the Salah and said the Taslim and then performed two Sujud and then said the Taslim.» They claim that it means that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said the Taslim to his right side, prostrated twice, and then said the Taslim to his left side. Respected Shaykh, big disputes have occurred between the Muslims, and they do not know where to seek guidance due to the differences between the Du'ah. Please inform us so that we can benefit the Muslims. May Allah reward you!

A: We do not know of any evidence for this method, and none of the reliable scholars said that; therefore, it is not lawful to state or circulate it. According to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), you should say the Taslim twice. As for Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), it is preferable that it be performed before the Taslim, unless one ends the Salah by saying the Taslim but there remains one or more Rak'ahs missing or one doubts having completed or omitted some part of the Salah and builds on what is more likely to have occurred; in these two cases it is better that after the Taslim Sujud-ul-Sahw is performed, followed by Taslim again, said twice (one to the right and one to the left).

Q: The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of the Masjid (mosque) led us in a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units). He sat down to recite the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) in the second Rak'ah then rose up and offered one more Rak'ah, and then sat down. The Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) said, "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]", to draw his attention to his mistake but he did not respond and said Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Is the congregation obligated to complete the fourth Rak'ah or follow the Imam then repeat the whole Salah?

A: The Imam and Ma'mums are both obliged to offer the fourth Rak'ah to complete the Salah. The Imam should rise up to perform the fourth Rak'ah by facing the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) while sitting, then standing up to perform the fourth Rak'ah. The Ma'mums have to follow the Imam and not to pray on their own. The Imam should then offer the two prostrations of Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). In case the Imam does not rise up after the Ma'mums have drawn his attention, they should rise up and complete their Salah and say Taslim and they are not required to do anything further.

Q 3: I was traveling; so I combined the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers together at the time of the 'Isha'. I offered the Maghrib with its full number of Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) and then offered the first and second Rak'ahs of the 'Isha' Prayer. But instead of concluding the Salah with Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) in the second Rak'ah after reciting Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), I mistakenly rose up to offer a third Rak'ah then a fourth though my intention was to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) to two Rak'ahs. After saying the Taslim, I offered Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness). Must I repeat my Salah (Prayer)? Please, inform me, may Allah enlighten you!

A: If you are traveling for a distance of eighty kilometers or more, it will be better for you to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) to two Rak'ahs. There is nothing wrong if you offer it as complete. If you intend to shorten the Salah when saying Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) but then forget and rise to offer the third Rak'ah, you have either the choice to continue offering the Salah as complete four-Rak'ahs; in this case you are not required to offer Sujud-ul-Sahw, or you may sit, recite the Tashahhud, say the Taslim, and then offer Sujud-ul-Sahw.

A: You did the right thing when you performed Ruku' (bowing) in place of which you mistakenly made Sujud (prostration) and then you followed the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer); this is what you were obligated to do in this case. The repetition of the Salah was not necessary, because your first Salah was valid.

Q: One day we were in the Masjid (mosque) offering the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in congregation. We performed the first Sujud (prostration) of the third Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), and when we raised our heads from the Sujud, one of the men was still prostrating. When he rose up, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) said the Takbir ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") for the second Sujud. The man then prostrated for the second time. What is the ruling on this? It is worth mentioning that the Imam was offering Salah (Prayer) quickly.

A: If this man sat between the two Sujud and then followed the Imam, he did nothing wrong. If he did not sit between the two Sujud, he should offer another Rak'ah after the Imam says the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) in place of the Rak'ah in which he did not sit between the two Sujud, as this Rak'ah is thus rendered Batil (null and void) and the Rak'ah following it will replace it.

This is because sitting between the two Sujud is a Rukn (integral/Pillar) of the Salah that cannot be omitted, whether unintentionally or intentionally. If he did not make up for the Rak'ah after the Imam said the Taslim, and there was a long gap between both actions, he should repeat the whole Salah.

Fatwa no. 17211

Q: I was in a Masjid (mosque), while the Zhuhr (noon) Prayer was being offered. The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offered four Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) and then rose up to offer a fifth. Although all the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) said Tasbih (Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]) [to draw his attention to the mistake he had made], he stood up. One of the Ma'mums spoke and told him that it was a fifth Rak'ah, but the Imam did not listen and completed it. The Imam and the Ma'mums had an argument, each defending their opinions.

My questions are:

- 1. Is it permissible for the Imam to continue the Rak'ah although the Ma'mums drew his attention to his mistake?
- 2. Is it permissible for the Ma'mum to speak while offering Salah (Prayer)?
- 3. Is a latecomer who misses a Rak'ah from this congregational Salah considered to have completed the Zhuhr Prayer because of this additional fifth Rak'ah or should they make up for the Rak'ah they missed?

A: First: It is obligatory for the Imam who forgetfully rises up to offer a fifth Rak'ah and then it is brought to his attention by the Ma'mums, and he is not sure that what he is doing is correct, to respond to the Ma'mums.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 47)

If the Imam intentionally continues offering the fifth Rak'ah, his Salah will be rendered Batil (null and void) and the Salah of the Ma'mums who follow him in this will also be Batil, if they know that it is a fifth Rak'ah.

Second: Speaking intentionally renders the Salah Batil. However, if the speaker does that unintentionally or forgetfully, it does not nullify it, according to the preponderant scholarly opinion, because of the Hadith narrated by Mu'awiyah ibn Al-Hakam that a man sneezed while offering Salah in congregation. Mu'awiyah responded with, "Yarhamuka Allah (may Allah have mercy on you)," but the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet - may Allah be pleased with them) disapproved of what he did. Thus, when he concluded his Salah, he went to ask the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: “Truly, nothing of people's talk is right during this Salah; it is only Tasbih (glorification of Allah), Takbir (magnification of Allah) and recitation of Qur'an.” In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order Mu'awiyah to repeat his Salah. This shows that speaking during Salah does not nullify it if the speaker is ignorant of the legal ruling. Also, speaking for the interest of the Salah does not nullify it, based on the Hadith of Dhul-Yadayn.

Third: If someone misses a Rak'ah of the congregational Salah and the Imam mistakenly offers a fifth Rak'ah, the late-comer should not count in this additional Rak'ah and they should make up for the Rak'ah which they missed.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16336

Q 4: Whenever I pronounce Takbir, i.e. Allah Akbar (Allah is the Greatest), to start any of the five obligatory prayers, bad thoughts haunt me and keep me away from following the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). What should I do in this case? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: being mentally distracted during Salah (Prayer) does not invalidate it. However, one should free his heart, stop insinuations, and seek refuge in Allah against the devil three times when he starts offering Salah. He will only be rewarded for the parts of the Salah he is aware of.

Q 4: What is your advice to a worshiper, who suffers frequent insinuations during salah (Prayer)?

A: We advise whoever undergoes doubts and insinuations in Salah to neglect such whispers and doubts and to seek refuge with Allah from the whispers cast by Satan to nullify the Muslim's Salah or minimize its reward. It has been reported in Sahih Muslim that (`Uthman ibn Abu Al-`As (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "O Messenger of Allah, the Devil confounds my prayer." He (peace be upon him) said: "That is a devil called Khanzab. When you feel his illusory acts, spit three times to the left and seek refuge with Allah from the devil three times.")

Q: i am obsessed and i repeat Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity) several times. When I want to offer Salah (Prayer), I can hardly pronounce Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and recite the Fatihah (first chapter of the Qur'an). I do not know what the reason behind this obsession is. A shaykh recited Qur'an on me and said that it might be a devil haunting me. He told me that I can offer Salah without Takbir or reciting the Fatihah. What should I do, may Allah reward you well.

A: This is a kind of obsession and insinuations. One should be steadfast, determined and have strong belief in Allah, keeping away from obsessions and insinuations of Satan. You should adopt the Shari`ah means for driving away these insinuations, including: reading Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), reciting the Qur'an, Wird (portion of Qur'an recited with consistency) in the morning and evening, observing the five daily prayers in congregation in the Masjid (mosque), keeping good company, attending Halaqahs (learning circles), resorting to Du`a' (supplication), asking for Allah's Forgiveness and Well-being and seeking refuge with Allah (Exalted be He) from the accursed Satan, even in prayer. Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units)

The first and third questions of Fatwa no. 16044

Q 1: Is it obligatory to perform Witr at night as two or four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) according to one's ability, given that I perform Witr along with the `Isha' (Night) Prayer? Should I delay it until a late hour at night or not?

A: Witr is a stressed Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Allah is Witr \(single, odd\) and loves what is Witr. So perform Witr Salah, followers of Qur'an!\) (Related by Al-Tirmidhy and Abu Dawud). The time of Witr is due after the `Isha' prayer until the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. However, it is better to perform it at the end of the night if the person is sure that he can wake up at night. If he is not sure, he is to perform Witr at the beginning of the night and if he happens to wake up at the end of the night, he is to offer as much Salah as he wishes, but he should not offer Witr again, for the first Witr is sufficient. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Two Witr's are not to be offered during one night.\) (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah) except Ibn Majah). It is sufficient to offer the Witr as one Rak`ah (unit of Prayer), but the minimum is three Rak`ahs and the optimum is eleven or thirteen Rak`ahs, making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after each two Rak`ahs and then ending with one Rak`ah as Witr. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The optional Prayers at night are to be offered two by two \(two Rak`ahs at a time\). If any of you fears that the time of dawn is approaching,

Q 3: What is the ruling on performing the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) along with Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan)? Should I offer Witr and then go to sleep or should I delay it to the last part of the night along with Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night), given that I sleep between the Tarawih and Qiyam-ul-Layl?

A: if you pray the Tarawih with the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), it is preferable to perform the Witr with him in order to get the complete reward. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿"If one prays with the Imam until the Imam ends, it is regarded as having spent a whole night in prayer."﴾ Reported by Abu Dawud and Al-Tirmidhy. If you woke up during the night and wanted to offer optional Salah (Prayer), you can offer whatever you want without offering Witr, for it is not permissible to offer two Witr's during one night. However, If you left the Witr till the end of night, there is no problem.

Q 2: is the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) Wajib (obligatory)? is a person who abandons it to blame?

A: The Witr is a stressed Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). The person who leaves it is not sinful. However, it is Makruh (reprehensible) to abandon it.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19990

Q 1: Are the Fajr (Dawn), Zhuhr (Noon), `Asr (Afternoon), Maghrib (Sunset), and `Isha' (Night) Prayers invalid if a Muslim does not perform Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) after `isha'? Please advise us, May Allah reward you!

A: According to the stronger of the two opinions of the scholars, Witr Prayer is a stressed act of Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). Whoever observes it will be rewarded while whoever abandons it will not be punished. Therefore, abandoning an act of Sunnah does not invalidate the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers which are performed before Witr. They are only nullified by Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship), Riddah (apostasy), or not observing any of prayer's pillars or conditions. A Muslim should be keen on observing Witr Prayer in compliance with the example of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him). It was authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to offer Witr Prayer whenever at home or in a journey. It is better for a Muslim not to miss this great reward from Allah (Exalted be He).

Q: is it permissible for me to pray Shaf` (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer) and Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) before performing `isha' (Night) Prayer?

A: Time for Witr Prayer starts after the performance of `Isha' Prayer and continues until the break of Dawn. Proof for the foregoing is a Hadith which is narrated by Imam Ahmad on the authority of Abu Basrah that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Allah has given you an extra Salah \(Prayer\), so you should pray it. Its time is between 'Isha' Prayer and the Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer; this is the Witr Salah.» Moreover, it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «If you are afraid of Fajr Prayer \(the approach of its time\), pray one Rak'ah \(unit of Prayer\).»

Q: A man prays Witr (prayer with an odd number of units) after 2 am. He prays it in five connected Rak`ahs (units of Prayer). Should he continue doing so or should he pray Witr before midnight? five Rak`ahs? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: Time for Witr Prayer starts after the performance of `Isha' (Night) Prayer and continues until the break of dawn. A person may therefore pray Witr at any time within this period. On the other hand, it is preferred that a person prays pairs of Rak`ahs then concludes this by praying Witr in only one Rak`ah. However, praying five connected Rak`ahs for Witr with one Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) is permissible though it is not preferred. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The \(optional\) Salah during the night should consist of pairs of Rak`ahs, but if one of you is afraid that morning is near, they should pray one Rak`ah, which will make their Salah an odd number for them.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and narrated on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both)).

Q 1: is it permissible to offer two Rak`ahs (unit of Prayer) after Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units)?

A: It is in accordance with the Sunnah to make Witr prayer the last prayer offered at night, for the Messenger of Allah, peace be upon him, said: \(Make Witr \(odd prayer\) your last prayer at night.\) However, it is permissible to offer two Rak`ahs after Witr, for what is related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad on the authority of Abu Umamah that he said: \(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to observe the Witr with nine Rak`ahs. However, when he became old, he observed it with seven Rak`ahs and offered two Rak`ahs while sitting in which he read Surah Al-Zalzalah and Surah Al-Kafirun.\) It is also reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 58)

\(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to observe the Witr with nine Rak`ahs and two Rak`ahs offered while sitting. When he became weak, he observed it with seven Rak`ahs and offered two Rak`ahs while sitting.\) It is also narrated by Ahmad on the authority of Um Salamah (may Allah be pleased with her) \(that the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to offer two Rak`ahs after praying the Witr while he was sitting.\) The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) did that to show the permissibility of offering Salah after performing Witr Prayer, and that such Salah does not come in contradiction with the Hadiths related to Witr Prayer, and that offering it does not forbid offering supererogatory prayers at a later time at night. Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful with him) said that the soundest view is that these two Rak`ahs come under the ruling of Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah and to complete the defects that may happen when offering Witr Prayer, which is considered an independent Nafilah (supererogatory act of worship), especially if it takes the ruling of obligation. Accordingly, these two Rak`ahs after Witr Prayer have the same ruling as that of the two supererogatory Rak`ahs offered after Maghrib Prayer, as they are regarded to be the Witr Prayer after the obligatory prayers offered by day. Likewise, these two Rak`ahs are the Witr prayer after the obligatory prayers offered by night. Allah knows best!

The third question of Fatwa no. 18591

Q 3: I offer Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) after `Isha' (Night) Prayer for fear that I may sleep without performing it. Is it permissible for me to perform Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) in the last third of the night? How many Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) does Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) consist of? When does the last third of the night start and end?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 59)

A: the time of Witr Prayer is from `Isha' until the break of dawn. If one is certain of waking up at the end of the night, it is best to offer it at that time. However, if one offers it at the beginning of the night and then wakes up at the end of the night, one can offer prayer as much as one wills, but should not perform Witr again. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿\(There are\) no two Witr \(to be offered\) during one night.﴾ As for Salat-ul-Duha, it is permissible. The least to be offered is two Rak`ahs, however, a person will be rewarded if they offer more than this. In addition, it is best to perform the optional night prayer as eleven Rak`ahs. One is to perform Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after each two Rak`ahs. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿The optional night prayer is performed in pairs, but if one of you fears that morning is near, they should pray one Rak`ah of the Witr Prayer, an odd number for them.﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Second question of Fatwa no. 20756

Q 2: If a person does not pray Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) until the break of Dawn, should they pray it before praying Fajr (Dawn) Prayer if time allows them to do so before the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) starts the congregational Salah (Prayer)? Besides, should they perform it in one or two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer)?

A: Time for Witr Prayer starts after the performance of `Isha' (Night) Prayer and it is a Sunnah Ba`diyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed after an obligatory Prayer on a regular basis) and continues until the time of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq (true dawn) begins. However, it is preferred that a person delays the performance of Witr Prayer until the last part of the night provided that they are able to do so and they are not afraid they may miss Witr because of being asleep etc. on the other hand, if the time for Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq starts before a person prays their normal voluntary night Salahs (Prayers) or before they pray Witr; they may make up for the Salahs that they missed after sunrise and add one Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) to their Witr to make it Shaf` (two units of Prayer). Accordingly, if a person normally prays five voluntary Rak`ahs during the night; they are to pray six Rak`ahs in pairs each with an independent Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). Likewise, if a person normally prays eleven Rak`ahs, they are to pray twelve Rak`ahs in pairs each with independent Taslim and so on. Proof for the foregoing is the Hadith which is authentically reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said: When sleep or pain overpowered the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and made it impossible \(for him\) to observe the Witr, he used to offer twelve Rak`ahs during the daytime.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16499

Q: what Surahs (Qur'anic chapter) are to be recited in the Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah offered after `Isha' (Night) Prayer and witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) prayer? what Du`a' (supplication) is to be recited after witr prayer?

A: There is no authentic narration that certain Surahs should be recited in the Sunnah Salah that comes after `Isha'. As for Witr Salah, it is a Sunnah to recite Surah Al-A`lah, Surah Al-Kafirun and Surah Al-Ikhlās. Once a worshiper ends his Witr Salah, it is a Sunnah for him to say, "Glory be to the King, the Most Holy" three times, as narrated by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah) except for Al-Tirmidhy on the authority of Ubay ibn Ka`b (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to recite in the Witr prayer Surah Al-A`la, Surah Al-Kafirun and Surah Al-Ikhlās.\) Ahmad and Al-Nasa'y added: \(If he uttered Taslim, he would say, "Glory be to the King, the Most Holy" three

Q 4: A person, after performing `Isha' (Night) Prayer, offers two Rak`ahs (unit of Prayer) then the Shaf` prayer (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer). After that, he goes home and after midnight, he offers two Rak`ahs as Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) before he offers one Rak`ah as Witr. Is this permissible?

A: the minimum for Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) is one Rak`ah and it has no maximum limit. Therefore, there is no harm in performing one, three, five, seven, nine, eleven, thirteen Rak`ahs, or more as Witr. And as for what you mentioned in your question regarding a person who begins the night prayer by offering two Rak`ahs then another two Rak`ahs after midnight before he offers one Rak`ah as Witr, there is also no harm in doing this; rather this is preferable, for the Prophet (Peace be upon him) said: «Make Witr \(odd prayer\) your last prayer at night.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: «The \(optional\) Salah during the night should consist of pairs of Rak`ahs, but if one of you fears morning is near, he should pray one Rak`ah, which will make his Salah an odd number for him.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). He further said: «If anyone is afraid that he may not get up in the latter part of the night, he should observe Witr in the first part of it; and if anyone is eager to get up in the last part of it, he should observe Witr at the end of the night, for Prayer at the end of the night is witnessed \(by the angels\) and that is preferable.» (Related by Imam Muslim). It is however desirable to offer Witr as eleven or thirteen Rak`ahs to be performed two by two and then offer one Rak`ah of Witr. It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do that and in most cases he used to offer Witr as eleven Rak`ahs.

Q 3: What is the ruling on someone who does not offer the optional night prayer, but offers it at sunrise? Although he is in good health, he fails to wake up at night despite his many attempts.

A: Whoever is sure they can wake up to perform Qiyam-ul-Layl (optional night Prayer) during the last part of the night may delay Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) and offer it after Qiyam-ul-Layl. Otherwise, the Witr should be performed before one goes to sleep. Nevertheless, if one sleeps without offering Witr, one may make up for the missed Witr as Shaf' (even-number prayer) after sunrise.

Q 2: Is it permissible to delay offering Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) until after `Isha' (Night) to midnight or until the first Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) prayer? I used to do this and sometimes I was able to wake up, but at other times I was not. If I remember some minutes before or after the Adhan of Fajr, should I offer it or not? I should mention that I used not to offer it under such circumstances. Am I sinful for this? Should I make up for the missed Rak`ahs of Witr? Please advise, may Allah bless you in your knowledge!

A: the last part of the night is the best time to offer Witr prayer for those who are sure they can wake up at that time; however, for those who cannot, it should be performed during the first part of the night. The time of Witr prayer ends at the break of dawn so, it should be made up after sunrise offering it as Shaf` (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer) i.e. offering three Rak`ahs as four, and five Rak`ahs as six and so on. Also, one should offer Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after each pair of Rak`ahs.

However, during the last third of the night, she began menstruating. Should she make up for the missed Witr or not, given that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) never neglected the two supererogatory Rak'ahs of Fajr and the Witr even when traveling?

A: According to the regular practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him), whenever he missed Witr prayer in the last part of the night due to an illness or oversleeping, he would make up for the Witr he missed at the time of Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) adding a Rak'ah to make it an even-number Salah (prayer). Q1: When combining `Isha' (Night) Prayer with Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer at the latter's time due to rainfall, is it permissible to perform Shaf` (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer) and Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) in the Masjid (Mosque) after the combined prayers? Or should one wait until the actual time of `Isha prayer, offer it and follow it by the Sunnah (supererogatory) prayer then Shaf` and Witr? What is the soundest opinion in this regard? Kindly let us know, may Allah reward you!

A: If you combine `Isha' with Maghrib Prayers at the time of the latter due to a legal excuse, it is permissible to offer Witr after them. However, delaying the Witr prayer to the last portion of the night is actually much better if possible.

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 16402

Q 7: The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Make Witr \(odd prayer\) your last prayer at night.\) what should one do if he offered witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) at the beginning of the night then he wanted to offer Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) during the last part of the night?

A: If a person offers Witr at the beginning of the night and he woke up during the last portion of the night, then he is permitted to offer supererogatory prayers as he wishes without repeating Witr. However, if he is sure of his awakening during the last portion of the night, he should delay the Witr until the last part of the night, as this is preferable as the Prophet (peace be upon him) indicated by his saying: \(Make Witr \(odd prayer\) your last prayer at night.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Q: If I performed `Isha' (Night) Prayer and Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in Ramadan and at other times, then i offered Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) before going to sleep, and then i woke up to offer Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer), should i repeat Witr prayer, or what should I do, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, (Make Witr (odd prayer) your last prayer at night.) Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: It is impermissible for you to repeat Witr, for the Hadith which states: ((There are) no two Witr's (to be offered) during one night) However, if you want to offer supererogatory prayers, you are entitled to do that as you wish, but without repeating the Witr prayer.

Q 1: One day i offered the `isha' (Night) Prayer but i did not perform Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) after it until the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer was pronounced. I was then at a loss whether I should offer Witr first then offer the supererogatory Prayer before Fajr. I did not know which to do first.

A: Witr Prayer is a stressed Sunnah and its due time includes the period from after the `Isha' Prayer until the break of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq (true dawn). This is indicated by the Hadith narrated on the authority of Kharijah ibn Hudhafah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: The Messenger of Allah came out to us and said: «Allah has given you an extra Salah \(Prayer\) which is better for you than red camels \(i.e. high bred camels\). We said: What is it, Messenger of Allah? He said: This is the Witr \(which Allah has appointed for you\) between the `Isha' Prayer and break of dawn.» (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah) except for Al-Nasa'y and Al-Hakim ranked it as Sahih (authentic)) It was also authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) that he said: «Perform Witr before the morning.» (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih Book of Hadith) Accordingly, if anyone does not offer the Witr before the break of Al-Fajr-ul-Sadiq, they should start by offering the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) before the Fajr Prayer after the Adhan, then they should offer the obligatory Fajr Prayer. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «There is no Salah \(to be offered\) after dawn except the two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\) of the Fajr Prayer.» (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Haidth compilation), vol. 2, p. 23, 104; Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes), vol. 2, p. 58; and Al-Tirmidhy in Al-Gami`, vol. 2, p. 279) In this case, they are permitted to make up for the Witr Prayer at the time of Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) and offer it as a two-Rak`ah Prayer. In light of this, if they are used to offer Witr as one Rak`ah, they should offer it as two Rak`ahs; and if they are used to offer it as two Rak`ahs, they should offer it as four Rak`ahs; and six Rak`ahs if they are used to offer it as five Rak`ahs. They should say Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after each pair of Rak`ahs according to the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said: «When sleep or pain overpowered the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and made it impossible \(for him\) to observe the Night Prayer, he used to offer twelve Rak`ahs during the daytime.» (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih, vol. 1, p. 514; and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, vol. 1, p. 54, 95, 109, 258)) Al-Tirmidhy, Abu Dawud, and Al-Nasa'y also related a similar Hadith. The Prophet (peace be upon him) offered twelve Rak`ahs, because he used to offer eleven Rak`ahs at night, and he added one Rak`ah to make it twelve Rak`ahs as he (peace be upon him) said: «The \(optional\) Salah during the night should consist of pairs of Rak`ahs, but if one of you fears morning is near, they should offer one Rak`ah, which will make their Salah an odd number for them.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

The first question of Fatwa no. 19176

Q 1: is it sufficient to offer the supererogatory prayer and one Rak`ah of Witr after the `isha' (Evening) Prayer? Or should one offer two Rak`ahs of Shaf` before the one Rak`ah of Witr after the `Isha' Prayer? Give us the ruling on this, may Allah bless you for it!

A: The performance of two Rak`ahs of Shaf` before the single Rak`ah of Witr is better than the performance of one Rak`ah of Witr only. Moreover, the performance of the supererogatory prayer after the `Isha' Prayer can not be a substitute for the two Rak`ahs of Shaf`. Also, a Muslim can perform the Witr as one Rak`ah and there is no sin on him.

Q 1: is it permissible for a Muslim to perform the Shaf` Prayer (two units of Prayer, particularly before the final unit of the odd-number prayer) and the Witr Prayer (Prayer with an odd number of units) with loud recitation?

A: It is permissible for a Muslim to perform the Shaf` Prayer and the Witr Prayer either with a loud recitation or a subvocal recitation, but loud recitation is better as long as loud recitation does not harm anyone. This is because the Shaf` Prayer and the Witr Prayer are regarded as Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) in which loud recitation is recommended.

Q 1: regarding Shaf` and Witr which are offered after `Isha' (Night) Prayer, is Shaf` considered Sunnah Ba`diyyah (supererogatory Prayer) which is performed on a regular basis after `Isha' Prayer?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 70)

A: Shaf` is two units of Salah (Prayer) which are particularly performed before Witr, which is a Salah with an odd number of units. However, Shaf` is an independent Nafilah (supererogatory act of worship). The Sunnah Ba`diyyah which is performed on a regular basis after `Isha' Prayer is another Nafilah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20815

Q 1: Is true that Du'a'-ul-Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) should not be constantly made in Ramadan i.e. the Imam can supplicate once or twice during the same night either in the first, middle, or last ten nights of Ramadan? Did that happen during the lifetime of the Messenger (peace be upon him) and his Sahabah (Companions)? What is actually followed in Madinah, Makkah the central city of Masjids (mosques), and Riyadh? If Du'a'-ul-Qunut is permissible once or twice during Ramadan, please explain this to the Ummah (nation based on one creed) to be made clear in every Masjid no matter big or small.

A: Du'a'-ul-Qunut in Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) is Mustahab (desirable) because of the Hadith reported by Al-Hasan ibn 'Aly (may Allah be pleased with them) who said: [\(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) taught me some words to say during Qunut in the Witr Prayer. They are, 'Allahumma ihdini fiman hadayta, wa 'afini fiman 'afayta, wa tawallani fiman tawallayta, wa barik li fima a'tayta, wa qini sharra ma qadayta, fa inaka taqdi wa la yuqda 'alaik, wa inahu la yadhilu man walayta, tabarakta Rabana wa ta'alayta \[O Allah! The first question of Fatwa no. 16988

Q 1: Which is better, making Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) in the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or in the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units)? Should the recitation in the Witr prayer be loud or sub-vocal?

A: It is desirable for Qunut to be made in the Witr. As for Qunut in the Fajr Prayer, it is made only in the time of hardships and afflictions. This is because it was authentically reported that the Prophet (may peace be upon him) never made it in the Fajr Prayer except when there was hardship or an affliction. It is worth mentioning that this is the opinion adopted by the Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars), which is the right opinion. If a person performs the Witr alone, the supplication should be made sub-vocally. If a person is the Imam of the congregation, the supplication should be made out loud by the Imam so that the people being led in the Prayers can say, "Ameen," after him.

Q: What is the ruling on adding some supplications to those made in the Witr Prayer (Prayer with an odd number of units)? Is such a practice permissible or not? I read a book on the Description of the Prophet's Salah by Shayk Muhammad Nasir Al-Dayn Al-Albany in which he said, "It is of the Prophetic Sunnah to add some supplications to the Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) made in the Witr, as the Prophet's Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) did so. I myself hear some people during the month of Ramadan who add some supplications to the Qunut made in the Witr.

A: It was authentically reported from the Hadith reported by Al-Hasan ibn `Aly (may Allah be pleased with them) with regards to the Prophet's teaching him the Qunut made in the Witr, as in the book Al-Musnad by Ahmad, the books As-Sunan by Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhy, An-Nasa'iy, Ibn Majah and others that Al-Hasan (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "Allah's Messenger taught me some supplications that I can say in the Qunut made in the Witr Prayer: ﴿O Allah, guide me among those You have guided, grant me security among those You have granted security, take me into Your charge among those You have taken into Your charge, bless me in what You have given, guard me from the evil of what You have decreed, for You do decree, and nothing is decreed for You. He whom You befriend is not humbled. Blessed and Exalted are You, our Lord.﴾ As said by At-Tirmidhy, "This is a Hadith Hasan (good Hadith) and no other Hadith was reported that is better than such a Hadith with regard to the Qunut." As said by Ibn Hajar, "This is a Hadith Hasan (good Hadith)." It was reported by `Aly ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him) that Allah's Messenger (may peace be upon him) would say in the Qunut made in the Witr Prayer: ﴿O Allah! I seek protection against Your Wrath in Your Pleasure. I seek protection in Your Pardon against Your chastisement, I am not capable of enumerating praise of You. You are as You have lauded Yourself﴾ (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhy, An-Nasa'iy and Ibn Majah). It is permissible for a Muslim to add other supplications reported from the Prophet (may peace be upon him) in other situations, as mentioned by some scholars.

The second and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 17972

Q 2: The supplication, "Oh Allah, guide me with those whom you have guided, etc!" was reported to be said in the Witr Prayer (Prayer with an odd number of units): should a person raise their hands when supplicating to Allah in Prayers or not? As reported from the Prophet (may peace be upon him), when can a person raise their hands on supplicating to Allah in Prayers? May Allah reward you!

A: raising one's hands on supplicating to Allah in the Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) and other situations is Sunnah (a supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) except in the situations the Prophet (peace be upon him) himself would not raise his hands, such as the supplications recited after the Five Obligatory Prayers, the supplications recited before the end of the Prayers, and the supplications recited in the sermons of Friday Prayer and the two 'Eids Prayers as for the preacher. This is because the Prophet (may peace be upon him) would not raise his hands on supplicating to Allah during these sermons except when he supplicated to Allah for Istisqa' (Asking for rain). Also, the people led in the Prayers raise their hands on supplicating to Allah in the Istisqa' Prayer as done by the Imam.

Q: Since I was a child, I have learned to offer the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) as follows; three consecutive Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) without saying Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after the second Rak'ah and saying the Du'a' (supplication) of Witr before the Ruku' (bowing) of the third Rak'ah. In the third Rak'ah, I am used to recite Surah Al-Fatihah followed by another Surah, I then utter Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), say Du'a' of Witr, and then perform Ruku' of the third Rak'ah. When I asked my father about this, he told me that we follow the Hanafi Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence of Imam Abu Hanifah) and that I have been taught to offer Witr according to this Madh-hab. What is the opinion of Your Eminence? Is it a sin if I offer Salah in the same manner that they are offered in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) during Ramadan?

A: The place of saying Du'a'-ul-Qunut as prescribed in Islam is after the Ruku' of the last Rak'ah, which is the Witr Rak'ah (the single Rak'ah offered separately at the end).

Q 1: What is the ruling on the Du`a' (supplication) said on finishing reciting the entire Qur'an? I have heard that saying this Du`a' is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion), is this true?

A: The Du`a' said on finishing the recitation of the Noble Qur'an was observed by the Salaf (righteous predecessors). This was the practice of Muslims in the best and early centuries when Islam was prosperous. The Salaf used to gather on finishing the recitation of the Noble Qur'an

Q 1: Our Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who has memorized the whole Qur'an has a sweet voice which makes many people come to pray behind him. Yet we notice certain things he does during the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) after offering Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) and wish to know the ruling on them. he intones the Du`a' (supplication) and says it in a way similar to what he does while reciting the Qur'an. In addition, most of his supplications rhyme and he prolongs the supplication for almost half an hour of more. When people drew his attention to this point, he said that he did so during the blessed last ten days of Ramadan and that some sick or afflicted people ask him specifically to prolong, hoping that

(Part No. 6; Page No. 76)

Allah may accept it from them.

A: It is necessary for anyone making Du`a' to avoid rhyming and exceeding the proper limits in using rhyming words. While supplicating, a Muslim should observe Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) and humility and show their need to Allah, as this makes the supplication more likely to be heard and answered. Moreover, the person making Du`a' should not say it in a way similar to Qur'an by using the rules of Tajwid (art of Qur'anic recitation) and intoning. This was not confirmed from the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor from his Sahabah (Companions). Furthermore, the person making Du`a' should not prolong it in a way that may cause people harm, rather they should be moderate, concentrating on the most comprehensive supplications and disregarding anything else, as stated in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 4: What is the ruling on a person who performs the Tarawih Prayer (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) before the `Isha' (Night) Prayer? By doing so, would they be considered as having offered the Tarawih Prayer or not?

A: It is an act of Sunnah (reported from the Prophet) to offer the Tarawih Prayer in Ramadan after the `Isha' Prayer and its Sunnah Ba`diyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed after an obligatory Prayer), and this is what is done by Muslims all over the world.

Q 2: Is it permissible for a Muslim to say Du`a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) only in the first pair of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of the tarawih Prayer (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan)? Is there a particular Du`a' to say when starting Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) that is different from Du`a'-ul-Istiftah of the Obligatory Prayers and the Tarawih Prayer? We would be grateful if you could highlight this point. May Allah bless you!

A: It is desirable for a Muslim to say Du`a'-ul-Istiftah every two Rak`ahs of the Tarawih Prayer. This is because every two Rak`ahs are regarded as an independent Prayer. There is no difference between the obligatory Prayers and supererogatory ones with regard to the wording of Du`a'-ul-Istiftah. This Du`a' should be one of those reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him), and the most famous of which is: "Subhanak Allahuma wa-bihamdika, wa-Tabarak Ismuka, wa-Ta`ala Wahduka, wa-la Ilaha Ghayruk (Glory be to You, O Allah! All Praise be to You! Exalted be Your Name! Glorified be Your Oneness! There is no deity but You!)."

Q 2: did not the Salaf (right predecessors) offer the Tarawih Prayer (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in congregation?

A: The Tarawih Prayer is a Sunnah (a commendable act) reported from Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him). He (peace be upon him) has urged Muslims to offer the Tarawih Prayer during Ramadan, saying: «Anyone who observes the Prayer at night during Ramadan \(i.e. Tarawih Prayer\), out of sincere Faith and hoping for a reward from Allah, their previous sins will be forgiven.» The Prophet (peace be upon him) offered it in congregation with his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet - may Allah be pleased with them) for three successive nights, then he abstained from leading them in it and offered it at home individually lest it might be made obligatory for Muslims. Al-Bukhari related in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that one night the Prophet (peace be upon him) led Muslims in a night Prayer. On the second night, the people began to gather in large numbers to offer the night Prayer. On the third or the fourth night, more people gathered to offer the night Prayer, but he (peace be upon him) did not go out to lead them in this Prayer. The following morning, he said: «I saw what you were doing, but I desisted to come to you \(and lead the Prayer\) for fear that it \(i.e. this Prayer\) might become obligatory for you.» The Prophet (peace be upon him) urged his Sahabah to offer this night Prayer; some of them offered it individually and others offered it in a congregation of two or three persons. Muslims remained doing so during the era of the Caliph Abu Bakr and the first years of the era of the Caliph `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them). `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) then saw that Muslims were better to be led in the Tarawih Prayer by one Imam when he was sure that it would never be made obligatory because the Wahy (Revelation) had stopped after the death of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Thus, he decided to gather them in the Tarawih Prayer as led by Tamim Al-Dary and Ubay ibn Ka`b (may Allah be pleased with both of them), since their gathering and listening to the Qur'an during the Prayer would entail much good. As a result, Muslims have been offering this Prayer in congregation up to the present time and all praise be to Allah!

The first question of Fatwa no. 17882

Q 1: Our mister says that the Tarawih Prayer (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) is not a congregational Salah (Prayer); is this true?

A: according to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), the Tarawih Prayer is to be performed in the Masjid (mosque) as a congregational Salah, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) led the Muslims in this Salah for some nights in Ramadan. He (peace be upon him) led the Muslims in the Tarawih Prayer for three nights, but on the fourth night he did not go out to lead them, saying: (I feared that it (i.e. the Tarawih Prayer) might become obligatory for you.) During the era of Caliph `Umar ibn Al-Khattab (may Allah be pleased with him), he saw people offering the Tarawih Prayer individually, so he believed that it was better to gather them behind one Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). As a result, he gave his orders to Ubay to lead people in the Tarawih Prayer, as the reason for which the Messenger (peace be upon him) abstained from continuing to observe this Salah as a congregational Salah was over. The Prophet's Sahabah (Companions - may Allah be pleased with them) unanimously agreed upon what was decided by `Umar and saw that this practice is a revival of the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). None of the earlier or contemporary scholars has been reported as contradicting this Sunnah.

The third question of Fatwa no. 20795

Q 3: Is it permissible for an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) to perform tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in congregation while a group of people perform `Isha' Prayer in congregation?

A: There is nothing wrong with an Imam performing Tarawih after finishing the `Isha' Prayer and its Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayers, even if there is a congregational Salah performed by the persons who missed the `Isha' Prayer with him. Those people may, with the intention to perform `Isha' Prayer, join the Imam who is performing Tarawih.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 81)

Once he makes Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), they can stand up to complete the remaining Rak`ahs of `Isha' Prayer. Another option is that they may perform Salah in congregation in a place that does not cause any disturbance for them or the Imam.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 19854

Q: During the first twenty days of Ramadan, we are used to offering eleven Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan). In the last ten days, we offer ten Rak'ahs at the beginning of the night and ten Rak'ahs at the end of it, then we pray three units of Witr, so that the total becomes twenty-three Rak'ahs. A knowledge seeker claimed that differentiation in the number of Rak'ahs between the first twenty days and the last ten days is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion), and that the original ruling is complete equality in their number in all days throughout the whole month. He claimed that if we want to offer eleven Rak'ahs at the beginning of the month, we should do the same at its end. If we want to offer twenty-three Rak'ahs in the end of the month, we should do the same at the beginning. He also claimed that it is a Bid'ah to differentiate between Salah (Prayer) in the beginning and the end of the night in the last ten days, as we offer ten short Rak'ahs in the beginning of the night and call them Tarawih, and ten long Rak'ahs at the end of the night and call them Qiyam-ul-Layl (optional Night Prayer). Please advise, may Allah benefit people by your knowledge and raise your rank.

A: Tarawih Prayer offered in Ramadan is a stressed Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) performed by the Prophet (peace be upon him) who led his Sahabah (Companions) in offering it for many nights, and then he discontinued it lest that it should become obligatory on them. His Sahabah did it after his death (peace be upon him), and it is still offered to the present day. As for the number of its Rak'ahs, there is no fixed authentic number. Some people claim that it is twenty-three; others claim that it is thirty-six; others claim more; and others claim less. During the era of 'Umar the Sahabah used to offer twenty-three Rak'ahs in the Messenger's Mosque (peace be upon him). The Prophet (peace be upon him) never used to offer more than eleven or thirteen Rak'ahs, whether in Ramadan or at any other time. He (peace be upon him) did not fix a certain number of Rak'ahs for the people in Tarawih and Qiyam-ul-Layl; he (peace be upon him) used to exhort them to perform Qiyam-ul-Layl, especially in Ramadan, saying, Anyone who spends Laylat-ul-Qadr \(the Night of Decree\) in Qiyam, out of Iman \(Faith\) and Ihtisab \(confident anticipation of Allah's Reward\), will have their past sins forgiven. He (peace be upon him) did not fix a certain number of Rak'ahs. This depends on the way a person offers Salah (Prayer); those who offer long Rak'ahs can offer a small number of Rak'ahs like what the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do, while those who offer short Rak'ahs out of mercy on people can offer a large number of Rak'ahs like what the Sahabah used to do during the era of 'Umar. There is nothing wrong in increasing the number of Rak'ahs in the last ten days of Ramadan in comparison to the first twenty days, and dividing them into two parts: one that is offered in the beginning of the night in the form of short Rak'ahs for Tarawih, and another that is offered in the end of the night in the form of long Rak'ahs for Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer). The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to exert himself more in worship during the last ten days of Ramadan than any other time. When the last ten days of Ramadan began, he (peace be upon him) used to gird himself for the purpose, stay up the night, devote himself to worship with abstention from conjugal intercourse, and wake his family up to seek to attain Laylat-ul-Qadr (the Night of Decree).

A person who forbids increasing the number of Rak'ahs at the end of the month than its beginning contradicts the guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Salaf (righteous predecessors). We should follow the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Rightly-Guided Caliphs and urge the people to follow it, not spread claims that decrease their interest in devoting themselves to worship in Ramadan.

Fatwa no. 14420

Q: There is a Masjid (mosque) in our village where the Friday Prayer is offered every Friday and all the people gather in this masjid to offer the Friday Prayer there. In the month of Ramadan, most people gather to offer the Tarawih Prayer. During the last ten days of Ramadan, some people perform I`tikaf (seclusion for worship in a Masjid) whereas others offer the Tarawih Prayer and insist that the Imam offers the Witr with them although he offers I`tikaf with the others. They take as evidence what happens in the Holy Masjid in Makkah where people perform the Witr Prayer twice, early and late at night. As we know, Salat-ul-Layl (optional Prayer at night) is performed as two Rak`ahs following two Rak`ahs, etc. and then finished with one Rak`ah of Witr.

We would be grateful if your Eminence can show us in detail how to perform the Witr for a person who does not want to perform `Itikaf, as there is much argument about this point and you are the only reference whom we can consult regarding what Muslims differ on.

A: It is legally prescribed that those who offer the Tarawih Prayer should perform the Witr Prayer only once at the end of their prayers. It is not permissible for a person to perform the Witr Prayer twice on the same night, as it was authentically reported that the Prophet (may peace be upon him) said: «(There are) no two Witr (to be offered) during one night» If the Imam offers the Witr Prayer with some people in the first part of the night, he should not offer the Witr Prayer a second time.

Q 1: There are some Imams who recite in the tarawih Prayer some long or medium sized Surahs after Surah Al-Fatihah in the first Rak`ah, whereas they recite Surah Al-Ikhlās after Surah Al-Fatihah in the second Rak`ah. They do so with no change during all the nights of Ramadan. Is such a practice permissible? It is worth mentioning that after every four Rak`ahs of the Tarawih Prayer they recite some group supplications such as, "Oh Allah! You are a Forgiver Who loves forgiveness, so forgive us." What is the opinion of Your Eminence on such a practice?

A: In the Tarawih Prayer it is better for the Imam to recite the whole Qur'an by beginning recitation from the first Surah of the Qur'an on the first night and continue recitation during the nights of Ramadan and then finish recitation of the Holy Qur'an on the last night of Ramadan as done by the Prophet's Companions (may Allah be pleased with them). However, it is permissible for the Imam to recite some parts of the Holy Qur'an during all the nights of Ramadan, but he should not recite some particular Surahs every night. Also, it is not permissible to recite group supplications after every four Rak`ahs of the Tarawih Prayer, as such a practice is a Bid`ah (an innovation in religion) on which there is no evidence from the Holy Qur'an or the Prophetic Sunnah.

Q: During the month of Ramadan, some performers of Prayer reprimand us for the recitation of one Ayah (Qur'anic verse) or two Ayahs only in each Rak`ah. We may recite from Ayah no. 1 to Ayah no. 13 of Surah Al-Baqarah in four Rak`ahs and sometimes in six Rak`ahs. Is such practice permissible? May Allah safeguard you and guide you to the right path!

A: With regard to Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night), it was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) would prolong the Prayer including the recitation. Moreover, there are many Prophetic Hadiths on this point. When Abu Salamah (may Allah be pleased with him) asked `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) about the prayer of Allah's Messenger during the month of Ramadan, she said, "Allah's Messenger never exceeded eleven Rak`ahs in Ramadan or in other months; he used to offer four Rak`ahs -- do not ask me about their beauty and length,

then four Rak`ahs, do not ask me about their beauty and length, and then three Rak`ahs.") (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Also, it was authentically reported that the Prophet's Companions (may Allah be pleased with them), who were gathered by `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) to perform the Tarawih Prayer as a congregational prayer, would prolong recitation to the point that they would lean over their sticks to bear standing for prayer. Thus, it is legally prescribed that during the Tarawih Prayer the Imam should prolong recitation to the extent that the Prayer does not become burdensome for the performers of Salah; otherwise he should recite some few Ayahs of the Holy Qur'an in each Rak`ah. As for the practice of reciting one Ayah or two Ayahs of the Qur'an in each Rak`ah, it is better to abandon such practice, as it leads the performers of Prayer not to listen to as many parts of the Holy Qur'an and deprives them of the reward of listening to the Holy Qur'an. The Imams should fear Allah (Exalted be He) as regards the Prayer. Moreover, they ought to give advice to the people being led in the Prayers and interest them in the Prayer with long recitation to get the best reward, as much as possible.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The third and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 16396

Q 3: During the month of Ramadan, we offer the Tarawih Prayers as twenty Rak`ahs in which we recite from Surah Al-Takathur to Surah Tabbat in ten Rak`ahs and Surah Al-Ikhlās in the other ten Rak`ahs during the first half of Ramadan, whereas we recite the same Surahs but we recite Surah Al-Qadr instead of Surah Al-Ikhlās in the same way mentioned above during the second half of Ramadan. What is the ruling on such a practice?

A: As detailed in the Prophetic Sunnah, the Tarawih Prayer is performed as a congregational prayer in the Masjid (mosque) in tranquility and reverence on standing, bowing and prostrating. Moreover, it is a blessed occasion for reciting and listening to the Holy Qur'an. As for what you have mentioned, the practice of reciting one or more of the short Mufasssal Surahs (the last 65-70 chapters of the Qur'an) during the tarawih prayer has not been reported from the Salaf (righteous predecessors) who are better to follow their guidance. In addition, it is better for us to do what realizes the purpose of such optional prayer as fixed by the Shari`ah (Islamic Law).

It is worth mentioning that he moves a lot while opening and turning the pages of the copy of the Holy Qur'an. What is your opinion on such a practice?

recite the second half of the part from a copy of the Qur'an and people listen to him while they all are sitting together in the mosque? Give us the ruling on such a practice, may Allah bless you for it!

A: the Imam's recitation of the rest of a part of the Qur'an after offering the tarawih Prayer is a Bid`ah (an innovation in religion) and such a practice can not be a substitute for reciting that part of the Qur'an in the Tarawih Prayer.

A: If the Imam concludes reciting the whole Qur'an during the month of Ramadan on the twentieth night or before or after it, he can restart another recitation from the beginning of the Holy Qur'an. Also, it is permissible for him to recite from any part or any Surah of the Holy Qur'an.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18426

Q 3: In one of the Masjids (mosques) we do not conclude reciting the whole Qur'an during the month of Ramadan in the Tarawih Prayers because the Imam deputizes some young people to lead people in the Tarawih Prayers. These young people, may Allah bless them, recite the Holy Qur'an slowly, a matter that leads us not to conclude reciting the entire Qur'an during the month of Ramadan in the Tarawih Prayers. Is it permissible for me to go to one of the neighboring masjids where I know that the Imam will conclude reciting the Holy Qur'an on a particular night, though I do not offer the Tarawih Prayers with this Imam except on the night when the recitation of the entire Qur'an is concluded?

A: It is desirable for a Muslim to supplicate to Allah upon finishing reciting the entire Qur'an in the tarawih Prayers. Also, it is desirable for a Muslim to attend the conclusion of reciting the whole Qur'an, as many of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) would do so. There is no sin in going to any Masjid to attend the conclusion of reciting the entire Qur'an.

Q 2: When the Imam told those being led in Salah (Prayer) about the night on which he will recite the supplication of concluding reciting the whole Qur'an, they asked him how could he do so though he had not finished reciting the entire Qur'an neither in the Tarawih Prayers nor in Salat-ul-Layl (optional prayer at night), but he replied that he recited the Qur'an in the Tarawih Prayer and in Salat-ul-Layl and outside Prayer to conclude reciting the whole Qur'an. He assured them and told them that he was very intent on finishing reciting the whole Qur'an during the month of Ramadan. is it permissible for the performers of Salah to continue reciting the Qur'an outside the Prayer to conclude reciting the entire Qur'an during the month of Ramadan ?

A: Such a practice was neither an act of the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor of the Salaf (righteous predecessors). It is better to follow in the footsteps of the Salaf. It is worth mentioning that all acts of worship are based on Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion), so no Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings) or Qiyas (analogy) should be adopted in such cases.

If offering the Tarawih Prayers until supplication is better, how can I offer some optional prayers before sleeping? Should I offer Shaf` Prayer? Or Should I offer Witr Prayer? Or is there no Prayer to be performed after offering the Witr Prayer behind the Imam?

A: It is better to offer the Tarawih Prayers and the Witr Prayer behind the Imam, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If a man prays with an imam until he leaves, he is reckoned as having spent a whole night in prayer.\) If you want to offer some optional prayers at night before sleeping, you can offer whatever prayers you want, but you should not offer the Witr Prayer again as you have already offered it behind the Imam.

Q 2: I am a senior student in one of the Egyptian universities. Usually students are overburdened with studies during Ramadan, since the final exams are immediately after that month.

We have lots of studying to do during Ramadan and this deprives us from doing as much good deeds as we can, as we are commanded to. We wish to always recite the Qur'an and finish a Khatmah (one complete reading of the whole Qur'an) during the Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan). However, we pray in a nearby Masjid (mosque) where the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recites short Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and finishes prayer early. Deep inside, I wish the Imam could complete the recitation of the whole Qur'an during the Tarawih like in other Masjids, yet, again, there is not much time to study. Please answer me and may Allah benefit you! Will I bear a sin for that? Note that I offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers at their due times and fast perfectly.

A: Tarawih Prayer is a stressed Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) and it is necessary to feel calm and tranquil while performing its recitation, standing, bowing, prostration and the rest of its Rukn (integral parts). This makes us have Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) earlier for realizing such Prayer. Is such a practice an act done by the Prophet (peace be upon him)? Is such prayer which we offer as congregational between the two Adhan regarded as a Bid`ah (an innovation in religion)?

A: offering Tahhajjud in Ramadan is a good practice which was done by the Prophet (peace be upon him), who would offer extended optional late night Prayer during the last ten nights of Ramadan and do acts of worship which he would not do on other nights of the year. However, it is prescribed for the Imam to finish the Tahhajjud Prayer some time before the Fajr Prayer to allow people to have Suhur, as delaying Suhur is an act done by the Prophet (peace be upon him)

Q: We are Arab students studying in America, and there are some Islamic centers and mosques where we offer the Five Obligatory Prayers and other supererogatory prayers such as the Tarawih Prayers.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 96)

My question is: When we offer the Tarawih Prayers behind some Pakistani Imams, they offer it as twenty three Rak`ahs. They offer such a Prayer as pairs of Rak`ahs. after finishing the twentieth Rak`ah, they make the Qunut supplications while sitting. After finishing supplication, they stand to offer the Witr Prayer as three Rak`ahs like the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, but they add one Takbirah (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") after rising from bowing and before prostration so as to make it different from the Maghrib Prayer. Is such a Prayer valid in such a way? Is it offered in this way by the followers of the Hanafi School of Fiqh? Or is it a Bid`ah (an innovation in religion)? Is it permissible for us to offer the Tarawih Prayers behind those people? Or is it better to offer the Tarawih Prayers as it is legally prescribed in our mosque? It is worth mentioning that this way of offering the Tarawih Prayers is adopted by some Islamic centers in America without having the ruling on the way of offering the Tarawih Prayers. We would be grateful if you could give us the ruling on this question, may Allah bless you for it!

A: Making supplications after finishing the twentieth Rak`ah is a Bid`ah. Moreover, offering the three Rak`ahs of Witr as the Maghrib Prayer is not Islamically acceptable. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade offering the three Rak`ahs of Witr as the Maghrib Prayer, but a Muslim can perform them without sitting for Tashahhud in the second Rak`ah, as Allah's Messenger sometimes did so. In addition, adding one Takbirah after rising from bowing in the third Rak`ah of the Witr Prayer is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). If they don't respond to your advice, it is permissible for you to offer the Tarawih Prayers independently in your mosque as eleven or thirteen Rak`ahs, as this is the best way to offer the Tarawih Prayers, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did so. Whoever offers the Tarawih Prayers as twenty three Rak`ahs or more, is not sinful, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The \(optional\) Salah during the night should consist of pairs of rak`ahs, but if one of you fears morning is near, he should pray one rak`ah, which will make his Salah an odd number for him.\) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Imam Muslim). The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not specify a particular number for the Tarawih Prayers.

Fatwa no. 19807

Q: In some neighboring villages and in the village where I live, it is the custom of people in the month of Ramadan that immediately after finishing the 'Isha' (Evening) Prayer, the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) calls people to the tarawih Prayers saying, "Oh nation of Fasting and Optional Prayer! Oh nation of the best of all creatures! Oh nation of the All-knowing King! Stand for the tarawih Prayer, may Allah reward you!" We then offer a pair of Rak'ahs after which the Mu'adhin repeats the same call as mentioned above. After that, we offer another pair of Rak'ahs after which the Mu'adhin repeats the same call. We do the same practice till the Tarawih Prayers are concluded. As for my question, is it permissible for me to offer Prayer with those people? Please note that there are no other mosques in our village. If it is not permissible for me to offer Prayer with them, does this apply to the Obligatory Prayers and the Tarawih Prayers or the Tarawih Prayers only? If it is not permissible for me to offer the Tarawih Prayers with them, can I offer such Prayers with my family at home? I would be grateful if Your Eminence could give me the ruling on the question, may Allah safeguard you and guide you to the right path!

A: Such a call after each pair of Rak'ahs in the Tarawih Prayers is a Bid'ah which a Muslim is not permitted to do, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Avoid novelties \(in religion\), for every novelty is an innovation, and every innovation leads to misguidance.\) Also, he (peace be upon him) said: \(He who did any act for which there is no sanction from our behalf, that is to be rejected.\)

Thus, you have to forbid people from doing such a practice. If they don't respond to your advice, you have to inform the authority responsible for mosques to prevent such practices and dismiss whoever does not respond to their command and substitute whoever acts upon the Prophetic Sunnah and shun all forms of innovations in religion for such wrong people. If they don't give up such a practice, you should not offer the Tarawih Prayers with them for the wrong practice they do and which you are unable to remove. With regards to the Obligatory Prayers, you can offer them with these people as the wrong practice is done in the Tarawih Prayers only. There is no sin in offering the Tarawih Prayers with your family at home. May Allah bless you for it!

Salat-ul-Layl

The first question of Fatwa no. 20398

Q 1: On standing for late night optional prayers, is it desirable to begin with a short pair of Rak`ahs?

A: As stated in the Prophetic Sunnah, it is desirable for a Muslim, if he offers the late night optional prayers on his own, to begin them with two short Rak`ahs, acting upon the Sunnah of our Prophet (may peace be upon him).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q 1: are the night Salahs (prayers) performed as Salahs recited out loud or as Salahs with sub-vocal recitation? How many Rak`ahs are they? What are the supplications recited in such Salahs? What is the best time to offer such Salahs?

A: The night prayer is fundamentally offered as prayer recited out loud. It is desirable for a person who wants to offer optional prayer to offer it as a prayer recited out loud unless such loud recitation harms others. If any person is harmed by loud recitation; for example, another person offering Prayer next to him, etc., he has to recite with a low voice. The number of Rak`ahs of optional prayer is not specified, as one can offer however many Rak`ahs he likes. This is because it was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «The night prayer is offered as two Rak`ahs followed by two Rak`ahs and so on, and if anyone is afraid of the approaching of the Fajr Prayer he should pray one Rak`ah

and this will be a Witr for all the Rak`ahs which he has prayed before.» (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim from Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them)). Also, it was authentically reported about the Prophet (peace be upon him) from the Hadith reported by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: «Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to offer ten Rak`ahs \(at night\), saluting after every two Rak`ahs and then observing the Witr with a single Rak`ah.» (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). This is what was often done by the Prophet (peace be upon him). Moreover, it was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) sometimes offered more than the number mentioned above and sometimes less than it, but he did not offer more than thirteen Rak`ahs. However, he did not say a specific number of Rak`ahs to be performed in the night prayer. as for the time of night prayer, it is the whole night, as one can offer the night prayer at any time of the night. The night ends with the rising of the real dawn. On the other hand, the time of the Witr Prayer is due only after a Muslim offers the `Isha' (evening) Prayer. Its time lasts till the rising of the real dawn. As for the Tahajjud and the Witr Prayers, they are better to be performed in the third part of the night if possible. If a person fears missing such Prayers due to sleep or any other reason, he can offer whatever Rak`ahs of optional prayer he likes and then offer the Witr Prayer in the first half of the night before going to sleep. Also, he can make whatever supplications he likes while prostrating himself to Allah, asking Allah for the best in the life of this world and in the Hereafter. A Muslim has to be humble and persistent while making supplications so that Allah may accept his Prayers and respond to his supplications.

The second question of Fatwa no. 15619

Q 2: Is it necessary to offer a specific number of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) for Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night)

every night or is it done according to one's ability?

A: It is prescribed for a Muslim to offer eleven Rak`ahs on standing for optional night Salah (Prayer), as this was the number mostly observed by the Prophet (peace be upon him). It was authentically reported that `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) did not observe more than eleven Rak`ahs \(of optional night Salah\), be it in Ramadan or any other month.\) Also, it is permissible for a person to offer as much supererogatory Rak`ahs during the night as they like, because when the Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked about night Salah, he said: \(\(Optional\) Night Salah is two Rak'ahs \(units of Prayer\) followed by two Rak'ahs \(and so on\), and when one of you fears the break of dawn \(Fajr Prayer\), let them offer a single Rak'ah to make the Salah they have offered Witr \(Prayer with an odd number of units\).\) The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) also said: \(The most excellent Salah after the prescribed ones is Salah during the night.\) The night Salah is to be concluded with Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) by praying a single Rak`ah.

Q 2: Is it a Sunnah (an act reported from the Prophet) to keep up offering Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) in congregation with my wife at home?

A: It is not permissible to keep up offering a supererogatory Salah (Prayer) in congregation, except for the Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan).

Q: We are a group of young ladies. One of us suggested that we single out certain days for Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) and other good deeds such as visiting the sick and fasting. The one who neglects these deeds has to pay a sum of money. Some of us accepted the idea and others did not accept until they ask the reliable scholars about this act. Please tell your opinion on this act.

A: You should neither gather nor single out certain days for offering Qiyam-ul-Layl except in Ramadan. Muslims are allowed to offer Qiyam-ul-Layl at their home as much as they can. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(The Salah a man offers in his house is more excellent than any other Salah performed in the Masjid except for the obligatory one.\) Imposing a fine on a person who fails to attend this gathering is illicit, as it entails eating up money unjustly and this gathering is not Islamically acceptable.

Q 2: Is it permissible for the husband to offer qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) with his wife standing beside him even though he is not leading her in Salah (Prayer)?

A: Offering Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) in other than Ramadan is not permissible in congregation continuously; rather, each person has to offer it individually. However, it is permissible for your wife to offer Salah beside you as long as you do not lead her in Salah and she does not follow you. Also, there is no harm for her to offer Tahajjud with you in other than Ramadan occasionally but not continuously; because Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) offered optional night Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) and so did Abu Al-Darda' who offered Salah with Salman (may Allah be pleased with them). Your wife should stand behind you when you lead her in Salah.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 20834

Q 5: which Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) should be recited during Night Salah (Prayer)?
What is the best time for offering this Salah?

A: There are no specific Surahs that should be recited when performing Night Salah; you can recite whatever you can from the Qur'an. As for its time, if the meant Salah is Salat-ul-Tahajud (optional late night Prayer) and Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), their time starts after offering the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer and its accompanying Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) until the break of the "second dawn" (true dawn).

It is worthy to note that performing Salat-ul-Tahajud and Witr in the last third of the night is preferable, if this is possible; but if you fear that you may not be able to wake up at the end of the night, you may offer what you can of voluntary Salah and then perform Witr at the first third of the night.

Q 2: What is the ruling on performing Salat-ul-Tahajjud (optional late night prayer) while I am on guard duty? It is worth mentioning that I can offer it easily and without problem; am I sinful in this?

Q 3: What is the ruling on reciting short Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) in Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer), such as Surah Al-Nas or other short Surahs? May Allah reward you with the best for serving Muslims and Islam.

A: It is permissible for the person who offers Tahajjud or other supererogatory Prayer to recite any Surah after Al-Fatihah even if it is a short Surah. However, the longer Surahs the person recites, the better and more rewarding their Salah will be, except when offering the supererogatory Prayer before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer which should be brief.

Q 2: In our neighborhood there is a sign in the Masjid (mosque) informing the people that Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) will be performed on a certain day and at a fixed time of the week. Is this act permissible? Kindly answer with supporting proof.

A: Qiyam-ul-Layl is only performed in congregation in Ramadan as was reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). In other than Ramadan, it is to be performed individually. However, if such optional night Prayer is sometimes offered collectively without singling out a certain night or placing a sign to inform the people about it, there is no harm in doing that. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) occasionally did that with some of his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet). As for dedicating a certain night to perform Qiyam-ul-Layl in congregation and announcing that through a sign, this is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) which should be forbidden.

Q 4: First, when I offer Salah (Prayer), I frequently forget to raise my hands to the level of my shoulders before and after Ruku` (bowing). What should I do?

Second, if a Muslim offers Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night), does it become obligatory to perform it every night, even if they are tired, sleepy, or in a state of Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge) and cannot perform Ghusl (bath following major ceremonial impurity)? Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: First, if a person forgets a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) of Salah, there is no harm on them and their Salah is valid.

Second, Qiyam-ul-Layl is a stressed Sunnah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) never left it, whether he was at home or traveling, whether he was sick or healthy. However, if a person misses Qiyam-ul-Layl because of sleep, sickness or forgetfulness, it is permissible to make up for the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) the next morning by performing two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) at the time between sunrise and noon. It is related from `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that "When the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) missed the Witr due to sleep or pain, he used to offer twelve Rak`ahs during the daytime." (Related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith) He (peace be upon him) usually offered eleven Rak`ahs in pairs, and then offered one Rak`ah as Witr.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19886

Q 1: is the hour that precedes the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer considered as part of the last third of the night?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 108)

A: The hour that precedes the second Fajr (true dawn), which consists of 60 minutes, is part of the last third of the night and is considered to be the last hour of the last third of the night. This is because the night begins from the sunset and lasts until the emergence of the second Fajr. It is authentically reported that Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) descends to the worldly heaven in the last third of the night. It was related by Al-Bukhari in his "Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith)", vol. 2, p. 47, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Our Lord, Blessed and Exalted is He, descends every night to the heaven of the world, when only the last third of the night remains and says, 'Who will supplicate Me that I may respond to him; who will ask Me that I may give him; who will beg My forgiveness that I may forgive him?'''﴾ Every Muslim and Muslimah is free to benefit from the blessed times and the times when supplications are answered, to supply themselves with good righteous deeds and supplicate for whatever they like from the matters of the Din (religion) or the Duniya (this world).

Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib

Q1: What are the prayers that are offered after obligatory prayers especially after Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer?

A: The prayers to be offered after obligatory prayer are called al-Sunan al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet), that is, four Rak`ahs (unit of Prayer) before Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and two Rak`ahs after Zuhr, two Rak`ahs after Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and two Rak`ahs after `Isha' (Night) Prayer and two Rak`ahs before Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. It is reported from Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that he said, "I memorized \(a tradition\) from the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) two Rak`ahs before Zhuhr and two after it; two Rak`ahs after Maghrib, and two Rak`ahs after 'Isha', and two Rak`ahs before Fajr." (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) It is also reported from `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said, "The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) never missed offering four \(Rak`ahs\) before the Zhuhr Prayer." (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih) As for Jumu`ah Prayer, there is no supererogatory prayer before it, yet it is desirable to voluntarily offer some Rak`ahs before it and recite Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) after each two Rak`ahs. As for the supererogatory prayer offered after Friday Prayer, it is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he stated, "When any one amongst you observes prayer after Jumu`ah, let it be four Rak`ahs." (Related by Muslim in his book Sahih) Also it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him)

Q 9: When people get up to offer the supererogatory Salah (Prayer), many of them change the spot where they have offered the obligatory Salah in the Masjid (mosque). Does this have an origin in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet)?

Q: I perform all the Salah (Prayers) on their due times and in congregation, but after the obligatory Salah are over, I do not offer the Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah or the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units). My father blames me for that and says that I have to offer the Sunnah Salah and the Witr, because they are obligatory. I tell him that these Salah are Nafilah (supererogatory) and the one who offers them will be rewarded and the one who neglects them will not be punished. is it obligatory for me to offer the Sunnah Salah and Witr? What is the ruling if i do not?

A: The Sunnah Salah which are offered before or after obligatory Salah are known as Sunan Ratibah (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) and they are stressed Sunan that should be maintained regularly. They are two or four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) before the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and two after it, two Rak`ahs after the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, two Rak`ahs after the `Isha' (Night) Prayer, and two Rak`ahs before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Likewise, Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) is a stressed Sunnah which should not be neglected and you have to regularly observe it, seeking the reward from Allah (Glorified be He) and following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in observing it. A: The supererogatory Salah that is offered before or after the obligatory Salah is not obligatory, and if one does not offer it, his Salah is valid. However, offering the supererogatory Salah that is performed with obligatory Salah is much better as well as it being a confirmed Sunnah that should not be neglected. The sixth and seventh questions of Fatwa no. 13842

Q 6 and 7: What are the supererogatory prayers that are permissible for me to offer, if I am in training at a place that is as far as the distance which is permissible to shorten Salah (Prayer)? What are the supererogatory prayers that a traveler is exempted from?

Is it permissible for me to offer Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) when I have free time during training, as some say that since I shorten Salah, I do not have to offer Qiyam-ul-Layl?

A: if one is traveling a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah, one should limit oneself to offering obligatory Salah and leave off supererogatory Prayers. It is authentically reported from Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that he said, \("I accompanied the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) in travel and did not see him offering Subhah \(supererogatory Salah\) and Allah Glory be to Him, says: \(Indeed in the Messenger of Allâh \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) you have a good example to follow\)\) The meaning of Subhah is Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayer. As for the two Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) before Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), one should offer them in travel or residence, according to the Hadith that is authentically reported from `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said, \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered the 'Isha' \(Night\) prayer \(and then got up at the Tahajjud time\) and offered eight Rak'ahs and then offered two Rak'ahs while sitting. He then offered two Rak'ahs in between the Adhan and Iqamah \(of the Fajr prayer\) and he never missed them."\) Also it is authentically reported on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Amir \(that his father told him that "the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) prayed Subhah at night on the back of his mount on a journey, facing whatever direction it took."\)

Q 2: What is the ruling on a woman who spent several years offering the obligatory Salah but did not offer Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) and the supererogatory Salah?

A: Those who abandon supererogatory Salah and Witr will not be punished for it nor are they guilty, but they miss the abundant and great reward. A person should be keen on offering the supererogatory acts of worship and Witr, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did, especially Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) which are performed before and after Salah. It is reported that Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib complete the shortcomings of the obligatory Salah. Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah, Al-Hakim and others related on the authority of Tamim Al-Dary that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «The first thing about which the people will be called to account out of their actions on the Day of Judgment is prayer. If it is perfect, that will be recorded perfect. If it is defective, Allah will say to His angels: See if there are optional prayers to his credit, to compensate the obligatory prayer by the optional prayer for My servant. The servant will be reckoned for Zakah in the same way. Then all the actions will be considered similarly.» Moreover, observing the supererogatory Salah is a sign of good, a cause to draw near to Allah, by which Allah helps His servants and answers their supplications. Al-Bukhari and Imam Ahmad related on the authority of Abu Hurayrah

(may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: [«Allah the Almighty has said: "Whosoever shows enmity to a friend of Mine, I shall be at war with him. My servant does not draw near to Me with anything more loved by Me than the religious duties I have imposed upon him, and My servant continues to draw near to Me with supererogatory works so that I shall love him. When I love him, I am his hearing with which he hears, his sight with which he sees, his hand with which he strikes, and his foot with which he walks. Were he to ask \[something\] of Me, I would surely give it to him, and were he to ask Me for refuge, I would surely grant him it..."»](#) It is obligatory upon every Muslim to maintain offering Witr because the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not quit performing it in residence or travel.

Q: I know that if someone enters the Masjid (mosque) after the second Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn Prayer), they are allowed to perform the Sunnah of Fajr only, not Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque). My question is: Is there any evidence that offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid is not allowed in this case and offering the Sunnah of Fajr would suffice? It is noteworthy that there is enough time to offer both Prayers. Appreciate your making this point clear for me, may Allah guide you!

A: when the prescribed time of prayer begins and the person enters the Masjid, they have to perform the two-Rak`ah-Sunnah of Fajr with the intention of offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid together. The latter is incorporated into the Sunnah. On the other hand, when they perform the Sunnah at home and enter the Masjid, they need to offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid.

Q: If I neglect witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) and the two supererogatory Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, do I incur sin? Please advise in this regard. May Allah reward you!

A: Witr as well as the two supererogatory Rak`ahs of Fajr Prayer are acts of stressed Sunnah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) never neglected them whether he was traveling or not. Therefore, it is incumbent upon the Muslim to regularly observe them, as it was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) never cared to adhere to any of the supererogatory Salah \(Prayer\) more than his care to observe the two Rak`ahs of the Dawn Prayer.» It was also related by Muslim on the authority of `Aishah that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «The two Rak`ahs at the Fajr are better than this world and what it contains.» Furthermore, it was authentically reported that he (peace be upon him) said: «If anyone is afraid that they may not get up in the last part of the night, they should observe Witr in the first part of it; and if anyone is eager to get up in the last part of it, they should observe Witr at the end of the night, for Salah at the end of the night is witnessed \(by the angels\) and that is preferable.» It was authentically reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 118)

«The most beloved Salah to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was the one that was done regularly \(throughout the life\) even if it were little. And whenever the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered a \(supererogatory\) Salah he used to offer it regularly.» In the light of the foregoing, Muslims should regularly observe these two supererogatory Salah, and if it happens that on a certain day they are unable to observe them due to oversleeping, working, or having some other excuse, they are not considered to have incurred a sin.

Q: When I enter the Masjid (mosque) to offer Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, I intend to offer four Rak`ahs (units of prayer); two of them as Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) and the other are the supererogatory Salah (Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. If Iqamah (call to start prayer) is pronounced while I did not offer except two Rak`ahs before Iqamah, I would offer two Rak`ahs of the supererogatory Salah of Fajr after offering Fajr taking into account that the two Rak`ahs I offered were Tahiyat-ul-Masjid. Some people said to me that the two Rak`ahs of the supererogatory Salah of Fajr suffice for Tahiyat-ul-Masjid but I did not stop offering it. Please, elaborate on this. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: if a Muslim enters the Masjid after Adhan (call to prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, he should offer two Rak`ahs only which is the supererogatory Salah of Fajr. This Salah is one of the most confirmed optional Salah as related on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was never more caring in offering any of the supererogatory prayers than the two Rak`ahs of Fajr.\) Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. Moreover, Muslim narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The two Rak'ahs performed before Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer are better than this world and what it contains.\) These two Rak`ahs suffice for Tahiyat-ul-Masjid as a kind of integration of the acts of worship. That is to say that offering a supererogatory Salah owing to entering a Masjid is integrated in offering a supererogatory Salah of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer which is required owing to the emerging of the time of Fajr. Therefore, if you enter the Masjid after the Adhan of Fajr, you should offer the two supererogatory Rak`ahs of Fajr and do not offer the two supererogatory Rak`ahs of Tahiyat-ul-Masjid. However, if you offer the two supererogatory Rak`ahs of Fajr at home then you enter the Masjid before Iqamah is performed, it is desirable for you to offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid before Iqamah according to the soundest opinion of scholars.

The first, second, third, fourth and fifth questions of Fatwa no. 20308

Q 1: should we offer the supererogatory two-Rak`ahs before offering the obligatory two Rak`ahs of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer?

A: Offering two-Rak`ahs before Fajr (Dawn) Prayer is one of the confirmed Sunnahs. The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not stop performing it in residence or travel. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said about its virtue what has been related in Sahih Muslim: \(The two Rak'ahs at Salat al-Fajr \(dawn\) are better than this world and what it contains.\) So, a Muslim should keep to those two Rak`ahs in order to gain reward and to follow the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 2: we offer six supererogatory Rak`ahs (unit of Prayer) before Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, then the obligatory Salah, followed by another four supererogatory Rak`ahs. what is the ruling on this?

A: It was authentically reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that \("The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) never missed four \(Rak`ahs\) before the Zhuhr Prayer."\) (Related by Al-Bukhari) It was also reported on the authority of Um Habibah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, \("Whoever observes the practice of performing four Rak`ahs before Zhuhr prayer and four after it, Allah will shield them against the Fire \(of Hell\)."\) (Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y and Al-Tirmidhi, who said: It is a Hasan (good) Sahih (authentic) Hadith) It is also authentically reported on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that he narrated, \("I performed along with the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) two Rak`ahs of \(optional Salah\) before Zhuhr and two after it."\) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) According to these Hadith and others, it becomes utterly clear that it is Mustahab (desirable) for the Muslim to regularly observe four Rak`ahs before Zhuhr prayer and another four Rak`ahs after it, following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and seeking this great reward. Whoever increases or decreases this, there is no blame on them, because the time before and after Zhuhr prayer is a time during which any number of supererogatory prayers is permissible.

Q 3: we offer the three obligatory Rak`ahs of Maghrib (sunset) Prayer and then six supererogatory Rak`ahs. Is this practice right or wrong?

A: It is an act of Sunnah to offer two Rak`ahs after the Maghrib Prayer. It was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the authority of Um Habibah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said, I heard the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying [﴿If any Muslim servant \(of Allah\) offers for the sake of Allah twelve supererogatory Rak`ahs each day other than the obligatory ones, Allah will build for him a house in Paradise. Q 4: We offer four supererogatory Rak`ahs before `Isha' (Night) Prayer, then we offer `Isha' following it with another four supererogatory Rak`ahs, offer Shaf` (Salah of even numbers) six Rak`ahs and then conclude the night with one Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units). What is the ruling on doing so?

A: It is an act of Sunnah to offer two Rak`ahs after `Isha' as part of Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) which were related in the Hadith reported by Um Habibah (may Allah be pleased with her) which is mentioned in the answer to question 3. It is also a Sunnah to offer two Rak`ahs between every Adhan (call to Prayer) and Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) whether for `Isha' or any other Salah because of the Prophet's saying: \(There is a prayer between the two calls \(Adhan and Iqama\).\) Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. As for the night Salah including Shaf` and Witr, a Muslim may offer the number of Rak`ahs he likes then conclude his Salah by offering one Rak`ah. As for fixing the number of Shaf` to six Rak`ahs, it is invalid and the least permissible number of Rak`ahs is one and the least perfect is to offer three Rak`ahs, while the most perfect is to offer thirteen Rak`ahs in pairs, ending Salah after each two Rak`ahs then offering Witr. Whoever wants to offer more than this number, he is most welcome because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The \(optional\) Salah during the night should consist of pairs of Rak`ahs, but if one of you fears morning is near, he should pray one Rak`ah, which will make his Salah an odd number for him.\) Agreed upon Hadith. The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not specify a certain number of Rak`ahs, and that indicates that the matter is flexible.

Q 5: what is the ruling on offering four supererogatory Rak`ahs before the four obligatory Rak`ahs of the `Asr (afternoon) Prayer?

The first question of Fatwa no. 20196

Q1: Is it permissible to perform Sunnah Qabliyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed before an obligatory Prayer), such as that of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer at home? And if I do so then hear the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) being called, should I interrupt the prayer or complete it?

A: it is preferable to perform Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet) and other Nafilah (supererogatory) prayers at home, based on what is reported in Sahih Muslim in a long Hadith wherein the Prophet's (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"You must perform \(optional\) prayers in your houses, for the best prayer performed by a person is that performed at home, except the obligatory prayer."﴾ Nevertheless, if you fear missing the congregational prayer as a result of offering Sunnah Qabliyyah at home due to the short period remaining before Iqamah, then you should offer it in the Masjid (Mosque). Accordingly, if you are performing Sunnah Ratibah then the Iqamah is called, you must interrupt the supererogatory prayer and make it up after the obligatory Prayer, or after sunrise regarding Fajr Prayer. This is in compliance with what the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"When the prayer commences then there is no prayer \(valid\),

but the obligatory prayer."﴾ (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, and Imam Muslim in his Sahih Book of Hadith) It is also related by Al-Tirmidhy, Ibn Majah, Abu Dawud and Al-Nasa'y. However, if the obligatory prayer commences while you are in the second Ruku` (bowing) of the supererogatory prayer, then it is permissible to complete it reciting shortly and you need not interrupt it.

Q 5: If one wakes up after sunrise, must one offer first the Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or the Fajr Prayer itself?

A: If a Muslim oversleeps or forgets the Fajr Prayer until sunrise, it is permissible to offer its Sunnah first. If one cannot, like one who has joined the congregation; then it should be offered after the obligatory Salah (prayer). It is related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilation classified by jurisprudential themes) on the authority of Qays ibn `Umar that \("The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) saw a person offering two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\) after the Fajr Prayer was over. He \(peace be upon him\) said, 'Fajr Prayer is two Rak`ahs only.' The man replied, 'I did not offer the two Rak`ahs before it, so I have offered them now.' The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) kept silent."\) This indicates that if one cannot offer the Sunnah of the Fajr Prayer before it, it may be offered after it or after sunrise. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Sahabah (Companions) fell asleep while traveling and woke up after sunrise due to the heat, they pronounced the Adhan (call to Prayer) and the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) for the Fajr Prayer and offered its Sunnah before it.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17856

Q 3: is there a confirmed Sunnah that should be performed before or after `Asr (afternoon) Prayer? It is worth mentioning that I have read what Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah wrote in his book Al-Fatawa Al-Kubra, vol.1, p.174, Dar Al-Ma`rifah edition, Beirut, Lebanon; that there is no confirmed Sunnah for `Asr. However, I read two Hadiths in Riyad Al-Salihin; one of them is related on the authority of `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) that: (The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to perform four Rak`ahs before the `Asr (afternoon) Prayer...) Related by Al-Tirmidhy who said: this is a Hadith Hasan (good Hadith). While the other Hadith is related on the authority of Ibn `Umar that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (May Allah have mercy on a man who performs four Rak`ahs before Al-`Asr (Afternoon) Prayer.) Related by Abu Dawud and Al-Tirmidhy who said: This is a Hadith Hasan.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 128)

A: The `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer has no confirmed Sunnah neither before nor after it. As for the Salah which is performed before it, it is supererogatory and is included in the Prophet's saying: (There is a prayer between the two calls (Adhan and Iqama).) As for offering Salah after `Asr, it is a time of prohibition when Salah is invalid except if there is a reason, such as Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse), Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) and the two-Rak`ahs after Tawaf, according to the soundest opinion of scholars.

Q 5: It was reported on the authority of Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) in the Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith of Imam Muslim that he said: (We were in Madinah, and as the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) called for Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, we used to rush to position ourselves behind the pillars (of the mosque), then offer two Rak`ahs (units of Prayers) (supererogatory Prayers). We did this in such a way that if a stranger entered the mosque he would have thought that the (obligatory) Prayer was being observed due to the large number of people offering that (supererogatory) Prayer.) Is this an indication that the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet - may Allah be pleased with them) offered Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) before the start of the Maghrib Prayer in the Masjid (mosque), as he likened the large number of those who offer Salah (Prayer) between the Adhan (call to Prayer) and the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) to the multitude of those who offer the obligatory Salah?

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) to offer Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah after the Adhan of Maghrib Prayer, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: (Offer (two supererogatory Rak`ahs) before the Maghrib Prayer. He repeated this sentence then added, "(This applies) to those who wish to do it.") However, this Sunnah Salah is not Ratibah, because the Sunnah Ratibah of Maghrib Prayer is only to be offered after it. Rather, this supererogatory two Rak`ahs before the obligatory Maghrib Prayer comes under the ruling of an absolute Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayer.

Fatwa no. 16689

Q: I am one of the envoys sent to France. I saw many mistakes made by people who perform Salah in the Masjid (mosque). Some of these include neglecting the Sunnah Ba`diyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed after an obligatory Prayer) of `Isha' (Night) Prayer. In Ramadan they skip this Sunnah and offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) directly. Please explain the ruling on this act, may Allah reward you with the best and make people benefit from your knowledge!

A: the `Isha' Prayer has a Sunnah Ba`diyyah that consists of two Rak`ahs. These Sunnah Prayers are asserted depending on the Hadith of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them) who said, I memorized \(a tradition\) from the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) of two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\) before Zhuhr Prayer and two after it; two Rak`ahs after Maghrib Prayer, and two Rak`ahs after `Isha' Prayer, and two Rak`ahs before Fajr Prayer. (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Furthermore, they are desirable according to the Jumah (dominant majority of scholars), so abandoning them counts as neglect of the Sunnah Prayers. It should be noted that a person who offers them will be rewarded and the one who neglects them will not be punished.

Fatwa no. 15363

Q: Someone told me that when the Khatib (preacher) enters the Masjid (mosque) on Friday and the Mu'adhin (a caller to prayer) calls for the second Adhan (a call to prayer), all the people stand up to offer two Rak`ahs then the Khatib delivers the Khutbah (sermon). The question now is:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 131)

What is the ruling on these two Rak`ahs which are performed after the second Adhan on Friday? As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: The Sunnah (supererogatory prayer) of Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer should be performed after the Prayer. When a person offers it in the Masjid, he should offer it as four Rak`ahs and if he offers it at home, he should offer it as two Rak`ahs. Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer has no supererogatory Salah before it and whoever comes to the Masjid on Friday should offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) even if the Khatib is delivering the Khutbah.

As for those who come to the Masjid before the Adhan of Jumu`ah and offers Salah then sits down, they should not stand again to offer two Rak`ahs. This was not reported from the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) but it is a Sunnah to prepare themselves to listen to the Khutbah.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18694

Q 2: What is the Salah (prayer) of Subhah and how should it be offered?

A: subhah salah is the optional Salah, such as supererogatory Salahs which should be offered after or before obligatory Salahs, Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) and other supererogatory Salahs.

The sixth question of Fatwa no. 18591

Q 6: is it permissible for me to offer two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) before the obligatory Salah (Prayer) if its due time is over?

A: If the Salah is not delayed until just before the end of its due time or the times at which it should be performed, it is permissible to offer the supererogatory Prayers including Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet). This excludes the person who has an excuse, such as someone who oversleeps at the time of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. In this case, they should offer the prior two supererogatory Rak`ahs once they awaken, even if it is after or at sunrise. This is in accordance with what the Prophet (peace be upon him) did when he overslept and missed the Fajr Prayer during some of his travels.

Q 6: should a traveler perform sunan Ratibah (supererogatory Prayers performed on a regular basis)?

A: A traveler who shortens the obligatory Salah (Prayer) is not to pray Sunan Ratibah. This is the recorded practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him) for it is authentically reported on the authority of `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) who narrated, "I accompanied the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) on different journeys, and he offered no more than two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\), until Allah caused him to die..." (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). However, the Prophet (peace be upon him) kept on praying Sunnah Ratibah of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer along with Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) and Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) even during his journeys.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18098

Q 1: Five years ago, Allah guided me to His Path, and I maintained offering the obligatory Salah (prayer) and other optional Salah such as Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night), Sawm (fasting) and Dhikr (remembrance of Allah). But, in the last two years, I abandoned all these optional deeds even the supererogatory Salahs that are performed before and after the obligatory Salahs. Matters got worse and I committed some evil deeds, and I became satisfied with offering the obligatory Salah only without offering anything before or after it such as the supplications that are said after Salahs. I tell myself that the door of repentance is open and my life is long. I have good friends who do not know any of this. I dislike

A: You have to offer repentance to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) from the evil deeds you are committing and return to what you used to do of obedience, uprightness, patience and keep doing them. You should seek refuge with Allah from Satan and his insinuations. May Allah help and guide you!

Q 3: In the case of combining Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and `Isha' (Night) Prayer or Zhuhr (noon) Prayer and `Asr (afternoon) Prayer; should the two (Sunnah) Rak`ahs which are performed after Maghrib or Zhuhr be overlooked as well as their Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah)? What is the meaning of the two Rak`ahs of Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet)?

A: When a person combines Maghrib and `Isha' at times other than traveling, he should offer Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib of Maghrib and `Isha after `Isha'. If a person combines between Zhuhr and `Asr in advance or delayed, he should not offer Salah after them because the time of prohibition comes after `Asr. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(There is no prayer after the `Asr \(Afternoon\) Prayer\) As for Dhikr, it is enough to say only the Dhikr of the second Salah, as for the first Salah, it is an act of Sunnah whose time has elapsed.

Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid

Q 1: Is it permissible to sit in the Masjid (mosque) outside the time of Salah (prayer) to listen to a lecture without being Tahir (ritually pure) from minor ritual impurity; therefore, not being able to offer Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque)? I have heard some people say that they have come to the Masjid to listen to the lecture, not to offer Salah.

A: It is permissible for whomever enters the Masjid at times, other than that when prayers are not forbidden, to offer two Rak`ahs (units) of tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) whether they entered to offer Salah, attend a lesson, or for other purposes before they sit. Furthermore, they must perform Wudu' (ablution) before offering Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid. As for the times in which Salah is forbidden - after `Asr (Afternoon) prayer until sunset and after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer to twenty minutes after sunrise - it is permissible to offer two Rak`ahs of Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid in accordance with the Hadith which indicate such permissibility.

Q 5: what is the ruling on offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) after the Adhan and before the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) of the Maghrib (sunset) Prayer?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 137)

The shaykhs in our neighborhood do not allow us to offer this Nafilah (supererogatory) saying that, according to the Maliky school, no Nafilah should be performed after `Asr and before Maghrib Prayer.

A: It is an act of Sunnah that if a person enters a Masjid at any time, they should offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid because of the general meaning of the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), \(When anyone among you enters the Masjid \(mosque\), he should not sit until he has observed two Rak`ahs.\) (Agreed upon by Imams Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Moreover, if the person is sitting in the Masjid since before Maghrib and remains until the Adhan is called out, they are allowed to offer two Rak`ahs, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(Pray \(two supererogatory Rak`ahs\) before the Magrib prayer. He \(the Prophet\) said it three times, and at the third time he said, "This applies to those who wish to do it."\) (Related by Al-Bukhari, Abu Dawud and Al-Bayhaqy in his Sunnan). The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said, \(There is between the two calls \(Adhan and Iqamah\) a prayer. He repeated it twice, and in the third time he said: This applies to those who wish to do it.\) (Agreed upon by Imams Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Q: When entering the Masjid (mosque) just before the Adhan (call to Prayer) as the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) is preparing to pronounce the Adhan, some people sit as if sitting on the ground, and when reminded that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone of you enters a Mosque, he should not sit until he has offered two Rak'ahs as a greeting to the mosque\) they say, 'We are not sitting we are just resting until the Mu'adhin is done with the Adhan, then we will stand and offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 138)

A: whoever enters the Masjid intending to sit there should first offer two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) whether he is going to sit on something higher than the ground or whether he will sit on the ground, for a long or short period, as mentioned in the question, according to the statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(When anyone among you enters the mosque, he should not sit till he has observed two rak'ahs.\) .

Q 7: is it obligatory to offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) while the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon)? Is it permissible to delay the `Isha' (Night) Prayer until after midnight, for example until two o'clock in the morning?

A: Firstly, it is permissible for those who enter the Masjid to offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid before sitting down, that is, as soon as they enter the Masjid. This is permissible while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah. With respect to this, it was related on the authority of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) that he reported: «A man entered the Masjid while the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was delivering the Friday Khutbah. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said to him, "Have you prayed?" The man replied in the negative. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said, "Offer two Rak`ahs.»

Secondly, the time of `Isha' Prayer lasts until midnight, and this is the preferred time.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 139)

There is a time of necessity - from midnight until the crack of dawn - during which it is not permissible to delay the `Isha' Prayer just as it is not permissible to delay the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer until the sun turns yellow. However, Salah can be offered during the time of necessity if there is a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse that forces a person to do this, but they have to make Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for delaying it if there is no Shar`y excuse.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20123

Q 1: When a person leaves the Masjid (mosque) to perform Wudu' (ablution) during the Khutbah (sermon) of Jumu`ah (Friday) and comes back, should he perform the supererogatory Salah (prayer) again?

A: Whoever leaves the Masjid to perform Wudu' because he invalidated his Wudu' then comes back, it is a Sunnah for him to offer two Rak`ahs before he sits as Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) because he is included in the general saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): ﴿If anyone of you enters a Mosque, he should not sit until he has offered a two-Rak`ahs prayer.﴾

When he intends to offer the supererogatory Rak`ahs of Wudu' as well as Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid, it will be sufficient because it is a Sunnah for those who perform Wudu' to offer two Rak`ahs as supererogatory Salah for it. Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to Bilal at Fajr (Dawn) Prayer: ﴿O Bilal, Tell me of the best deed you did after embracing Islam, for I heard your footsteps in front of me in Paradise.﴾

(Part No. 6; Page No. 140)

Bilal replied: I did not do anything worth mentioning except that whenever I performed Wudu' during the day or night, I prayed after that ablution as much as was written for me.﴾ Abu `Abdullah said: (Duff Na`layk i.e. the sound of your footsteps). Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, vol. 2, p.48. It is permissible for one to perform any supererogatory Salah other than the times which are prohibited. The Prophet said: ﴿The \(optional\) Salah by night and day should consist of pairs of Rak`ahs.﴾ Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhi, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah).

Q 5: Can tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) and Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) be combined and performed as one Salah with one intention or should Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid be performed first and then the Sunnah Ratibah?

A: One of the rules of Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence) states that: if two acts of 'Ibadah (worship) of the same type coincide, their acts are merged and one performance shall suffice for both, if the purpose is one. This rule applies to the case of one who enters the Masjid at the time of Sunnah Ratibah for example, so they offer a two-Rak'ah prayer intending with performing it both: Sunnah Ratibah and Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid, they will earn the virtue of both. The same will be the case for one who swears multiple oaths

Q 2: Does Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah) replace Salah (Prayer) in Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit Prayer to salute the mosque) offered for Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah)?

A: Yes, Tawaf is the way to offer Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid for Al-Masjid Al-Haram by the non-residents of Makkah. However, it is permissible for anyone who could not offer Tawaf, to offer a two-Rak`ah Salah (Prayer consisting of two units) before they sit. This is based on the general applicability of the ruling in the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(When anyone among you enters the Masjid \(mosque\), he should not sit until he has offered two Rak`ahs.\) Residents of Makkah offer Tahiyyat-ul-Masjid for Al-Masjid Al-Haram by praying a two-Rak`ah Salah as they do upon entering any other Masjid.

Second question of Fatwa no. 16816

Q 2: Our regular Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) always enters the Masjid (mosque) from a door which is next to the Mihrab (a praying place to the front of the mosque usually used by the one who leads congregational Prayer). He does not pray Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque). It is worth noting that the concerned Imam does so in all obligatory Salahs (Prayers) though the Masjid is usually not crowded. What is the ruling on such doing?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 142)

A: It is permissible for the Imam, or anyone else, to enter the Masjid from any of its doors. In addition, if Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) is being pronounced as the Imam is entering the Masjid; he will not be required to pray Tahiyat-ul-Masjid. A proof for this is a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(when Iqamah is done, no Salah 'Prayer' is to be offered 'in the Masjid' other than the obligatory prayer. \)

Q 1: If a person enters the Masjid (mosque) and finds that he has missed the obligatory Salah (Prayer) in congregation, should he offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) first or the obligatory Salah only?

A: If a Muslim enters the Masjid and finds that he has missed the congregational Salah, they do not have to offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid; he has only to offer the obligatory Salah he missed, unless this Salah has a Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis), such as the Fajr (Dawn) or the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayers. If I have to perform Salah outside the Masjid, is it obligatory on me to perform Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-prayer to greet the mosque) or not?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, the area outside the Masjid, such as the surrounding street or square, does not carry the same ruling as the Masjid. Therefore, you are not required to offer a two-Rak'ahs prayer (two-unit-Prayer) intending it as Tahiyat-ul-Masjid, although you can still perform the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) or any other voluntary Salah.

It is reported from Abu Qatadah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said, 'Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) stated: \(When anyone among you enters the mosque, he should not sit till he has observed two rak'ahs.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Q 2: A man sits in the Masjid (mosque) to recite Qur'an after offering Fajr (Dawn) Prayer until sunrise, then he prays two Rak'ahs (unit of Prayer). However, some people denied his deed and said: It is not permissible because it is the tradition of the worshippers of the Sun. Please, advise! May Allah reward you!

A: Whoever sits in the Masjid to recite Qur'an and the formulas of Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) after offering Fajr Prayer until sunrise is clear and the time when Salah is forbidden is over and prays two Rak'ahs or what he could, he indeed does a good and great deed. His act agrees with the Sunnah and is rewarded, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). In support of this, it is reported on the authority of Anas Ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah said: \(Whoever prays the morning prayer in congregation then sits remembering Allah until the sun rises, then prays two units of prayer has the reward like that of Hajj and 'Umrah.\)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 147)

The Messenger of Allah (May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) said: \(‘Completely, completely, completely’\) Recorded by Al-Tirmidhy who said: It is Hadith Hasan Gharib (a good Hadith that is strange to come from this chain of narration) from Sahl Ibn Mu'adh from his father (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) said: \(“If anyone sits in his place of prayer when he finishes the dawn prayer till he prays the two Rak'ahs of the forenoon, saying nothing but what is good, his sins will be forgiven even if they are more than the foam of the sea”.\) Recorded by Al-Imam Ahmad and Abu Dawud. According to another narration: \(His would be Paradise\) The same narration is recorded by Al-Bayhaqy but he added in the end of the report: \(“Hellfire will never touch his skin.”\) The report has many supporting traditions that back its authority and is also strengthened with the report of Jabir Ibn Samurah (may Allah be pleased with him) that \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to sit crossed legged after the Fajr \(dawn\) Prayer in the same place in which he had prayed till the sunrise is complete.\) Recorded by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Collection of Hadith, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, and Al-Nasa'y. The denial expressed by some people against his man is baseless denial and only ignorant people may deny this act.

Q 1: It is narrated in a Hadith from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: ﴿Whoever prays the congregational Salah 'Prayer' of Fajr 'Dawn', then sits 'in the Masjid [mosque]' doing Dhikr 'Remembrance of Allah' until sunrise, then prays two Rak`ahs 'units of prayer', receives a complete reward of Hajj and `Umrah 'lesser pilgrimage'﴾. My question here is whether these two Rak`ahs are considered a part of Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) which is to be performed in eight Rak`ahs, or are they another independent Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayer?

A: The two Rak`ahs which are mentioned in this Hadith are considered a part of Salat-ul-Duha though they have special merit due to being linked to sitting in the Masjid until sunrise. on the other hand, the best time for offering Salat-ul-Duha is when it becomes very hot in the forenoon.

Fatwa no. 15688

Q: I usually offer Fajr (Dawn) Prayer in the Masjid (mosque) and after that I go home and engage myself in reciting the Qur'an until the shade of sun is as the length of two spears. Then I perform ten Rak'ahs with the intention of Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise). This is my habit everyday, Praise be to Allah. But one of my colleagues, may Allah reward him, brought my attention to the following: The meaning of the Hadith which reads: \(He used to sit in his praying place until the sun had risen\) Therefore, I ask Your Eminence: Shall I have the reward in this condition or should I sit in the Masjid? Could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 149)

A: Your recitation of the Qur'an and offering Salat-ul-Dhuha after the time of prohibition are good but what was reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) is that he used to sit in the Masjid after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Imam Muslim related in his Sahih on the authority of Jabir ibn Hamzah (may Allah be pleased with him) that: \(Whenever the Prophet of Allah \(peace be upon him\) observed the Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer, he used to set at the place of worship till the sun had risen enough.\) This action is considered as extension to Salah because of what was authentically reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger (peace be upon him) said: [\(The angels ask for blessings on each one of you as long as he is in the place where he has prayed and has not discharged anything. The second question of Fatwa no. 20123

Q 2: If a person stays in the Masjid (mosque) to remember Allah after performing Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, then enters the state of minor impurity and goes to perform ablution, does his leaving the Masjid deprive him of the reward of doing Hajj and `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) if he returns to the Masjid then offers Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) as mentioned in the Hadith?

A: If the person who sits in the Masjid after offering Fajr Prayer to make remembrance of Allah till sunrise enters the state of minor ritual impurity, then leaves the Masjid to perform ablution, returns soon to the Masjid without staying long outside the Masjid, then offers two Rak`ahs after sunrise, his leaving the Masjid does not deprive him of the great reward of offering this act of worship, that is, making perfect Hajj and `Umrah and entering Paradise, Allah Willing. The Hadith that indicates this is reported by Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: Whoever offers Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer in congregation then sits for the remembrance of Allah till sunrise, then offers two Rak`ahs \(units of Prayer\), will have the reward of making perfect Hajj and `Umrah

Q 2: Is it permissible for me to offer Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) even if I traveled to one of the Arab countries and stayed there for a while?

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) to offer salat-ul-Duha, whether you are a traveler or not, at least two Rak'ahs. It is to be offered from after the sun rises, until it reaches the middle of the sky.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 18449

Q 4: is it permissible for a traveler not to perform Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) like other Nawafil (supererogatory prayers), or should it be performed while on a journey? Should one recite the Qur'an in Salat-ul-Duha audibly or inaudibly? How many Rak`ahs should be offered, and what is the best time for performing it?

A: Salat-ul-Duha is a recommended not obligatory Salah, and it is not a Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis). It is recommended in many authentic Hadiths reported from the Prophet

(Part No. 6; Page No. 152)

(peace be upon him), but it was not established that he (peace be upon him) offered it on a continuous basis. It was authentically reported that Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) offered four Rak`ahs in the Duha prayer and might add to them whatever Allah willed. Narrated by Muslim on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her). The word "offered" does not indicate that the Prophet continuously performed Salat-ul-Duha based on what she (may Allah be pleased with her) said when she was asked if the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to observe Duha \(Salat-ul-Duha\) prayer. She said, "No, only when he came back from travel. Related by Muslim. The linguistic meaning of the word "offered" does not indicate constancy. However, this does not contradict her (may Allah be pleased with her) saying: I have never seen the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) offering the supererogatory Duha prayer, but I offer it. Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. In fact, she (may Allah be pleased with her) negated seeing Allah's Messenger offering Duha, and performed Duha on the basis of what she knew of the reward of Duha and the act of the Prophet (peace be upon him). As a result, the wordings narrated on her authority are consistent. As for the number of Rak`ahs of Duha Prayer, it is from two to eight Rak`ahs. Also, it is not preferable to recite the Qur'an audibly while offering Duha. Concerning the time for offering Duha, there is a Hadith narrated by Zayd ibn Arqam (may Allah be pleased with him) that

Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: The Salah \(prayer\) of those who are penitent is offered when the weaned camels feel the heat of the sun. Related by Muslim. The Hadith means the time when the hoofs of young camels are harmed by the scorching heat caused by the intense rays of the sun on the sand. It is reported in the Two Sahihs (Al-Bukhari and Muslim's Books of Authentic Hadith) that the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) recommended Abu Hurayrah \(may Allah be pleased with him\) to observe the two Rak`ahs of Duha. As for the virtue of Duha Prayer, it is narrated in Sahih Muslim that the Prophet (peace be upon him) advised Abu Ad-Darda' (may Allah be pleased with him) to offer it, as well as Muslim's narration on the authority of Abu Dharr (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: Each morning, there is a charity due from every bone in the body of every one of you. Each utterance of Allah's glorification \(i.e. Subhana Allah\) is an act of charity, every utterance of praise \(i.e. Al-hamdu-lillah\) is an act of charity, every utterance of affirmation of His Oneness \(i.e. La Ilaha Illa Allah\) is an act of charity, every utterance of affirmation of His Greatness (i.e. Allahu Akbar) is an act of charity, and enjoining right and forbidding evil is an act of charity. It suffices for all of this to offer two Rak`ahs of Duha.﴾

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 14497

Q 5: Is there a two-Rak'ahs Salah (two-unit-Prayer) called the Salah of Al-Awwabin (Prayer of the Oft-Repentant) that is performed after the supererogatory Salah for the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer? Surahs Al-Fatihah and Al-Zalzalah are recited in each Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) 15 times and those who perform it regularly are recorded among Al-Awwabin (the oft-repentant). May Allah grant you a long life!

A: salah of Al-Awwabin is Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise), which is performed (at the time of the day) when the sun's heat becomes intense. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "The Salah of Al-Awwabin is when the feet of young camels are scalded \(by the heat of sand\)." It signifies the time when the sand heated by the sun becomes unbearably hot for the feet of young camels. As for offering Salah after the supererogatory Salah for the Maghrib Prayer in which Surahs Al-Fatihah and Al-Zalzalah are recited 15 times, we know of no basis for this.

Q: We heard that after the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, there is a two-Rak`ah (units of Prayer) Salah offered called "Salah of the penitent". Is it a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet)? How is it offered?

A: the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) offered after the Maghrib Prayer is two Rak`ahs, and then a person may offer any number of Rak`ahs they like. As for the two-Rak`ah Salah called "Salah of the penitent", it is groundless.

it rather refers to Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise) which is offered when it becomes too hot, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), «The Salah of the penitent is offered when your Fisal \(weaned camels\) feel the heat of the sun.» Related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith.

Salat-ul-Istikharah

Q: Our Prophet (peace be upon him) taught us Salat-ul-Istikharah (Prayer for guidance); I hope that Your Eminence would point out to us the conditions concerning anyone who performs Istikharah in behalf of another person, if this is permissible.

Q 1: If one performs Salat-ul-Istikharah (prayer for guidance) before proceeding with an important matter such as marriage, applying for a job, etc. then begins to comply with the direction of such Salah (Prayer), can one be afflicted by evil or any calamity after that? If so, what must be done in this case?

A: Performing Salat-ul-Istikharah is enjoined for matters wherein a person is unclear. The aim of Salat-ul-Istikharah is to leave one's affairs to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and ask Him to choose what is best for one's faith and worldly matters. However, if a person performs Salat-ul-istikharah after which there is a negative result; it must be understood that this is for achieving a wisdom that Allah wills and that in the negative result there is real goodness.

Fatwa no. 16729

Q: First, is it permissible to intend to pray Salat-ul-Istikharah (prayer for guidance) after starting to pray the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) or Nafila (supererogatory) Salah such as Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque)? Or Should my intention be specifically for offering Salat-ul-Istikharah only?

Second, is it permissible to raise the hands while performing Du`a' (supplication)?

Third, is it permissible for me to offer Salat-ul-Istikharah for more than one matter?

Fourth, is it permissible for me to perform Du`a'-ul-Istikharah (supplication for guidance) regarding the time of offering `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), such as saying: "O' Allah, if You know that there is goodness in my going to perform `Umrah on that night, and then state a certain time"; or is Istikharah itself not related to acts of obedience and their time of performance?

Fifth, is it true concerning what people say that if a person offers Du`a'-ul-Istikharah, they will see in a dream or feel inner relief or abhorrence towards the matter for which they made Istikharah; then act according to what they feel assured about. What is the benefit in knowing that all goodness is in acting according to what results from Istikharah?

I ask Allah with His Most-High Names and Most Beautiful Attributes to bless you and admit you to Jannah (Paradise) with the Prophets, the Siddiqûn (followers of the Prophets who were first and foremost to believe in them, like Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him), the martyrs, and the righteous. And how excellent these companions were!

A: First, Salat-ul-Istikharah (prayer for guidance) should be independent, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone of you intends to do something, they should offer a two-Rak'ah prayer other than the compulsory prayers...\)

Second, It is permissible for you while offering Du`a'-ul-Istikharah to raise the hands, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do so on passionately offering Du`a' (supplication).

Third, It is permissible for one to offer a single Istikharah for more than one matter.

Fourth, as far as `Umrah is concerned, you should perform Istikharah concerning the time of performing it, not whether to perform it or not.

Fifth, There is no validity to what is said that Istikharah is related to having a particular vision; rather, one should act upon the matter which one's heart is receptive to, and vice versa. This is the correct manner to either go ahead with a certain matter or not.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Salat-ul-Tasabih

The second question of Fatwa no. 16250

Q 2: There has been heated debate about salat-ul-Tasabih (supererogatory Prayer in which Allah is glorified 75 times in each unit of Prayer). I hope you will shed some light on this.

A: Salat-ul-Tasabih is not Mashru' (Islamically prescribed), as the Hadith that it is reported regarding it is not authentically narrated from the Prophet (peace be upon him). It also differs from the prescribed Salahs in regard to its form, words and actions, which is evidence that it is not prescribed. Certainly, the Salahs authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) are perfectly sufficient to dispense with this strange Salah, which is incompatible with what is known of the Purified Shar' (Law).

Sujud-ul-Tilawah

Q 2: Is it necessary to say Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) for Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation)? Or can it be performed without Takbir?

A: When one of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration) is recited, whether when offering Salah (Prayer) or outside it, it is Mustahab (desirable) for both the reciter and the listener to perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah. When offering it in Salah, the Takbir should be said when going to prostrate and when rising up from it, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to say Takbir whenever he went down or came up \(during Salah\) (Related by Ahmad and Al-Tirmidhy) If someone recites one of Ayat-ul-Sujud outside the Salah, it is Mustahab for them to say the Takbir when going to prostrate, but they are not permitted to say the Takbir when rising nor should they say the Taslim, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not do so.

Q 2: When I listen to the Qur'an and hear one of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration), I do not prostrate, because I may not be in a state of Taharah (ritual purification). What is the ruling on this?

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) for both the reciter and the listener of one of Ayat-ul-Sujud to perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation). However, the listener should not prostrate until the reciter prostrates. There is nothing wrong if someone performs Sujud-ul-Tilawah when they are not in a state of Taharah, according to the more correct of the two opinions held by the scholars, because it has not been reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stipulated Taharah as a condition for Sujud-ul-Tilawah.

Q 4: Should one perform Wudu' (ablution) in order to offer Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation)? Does a woman have to cover her hair to offer Sujud-ul-Tilawah? Q: How should I perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) if I am offering a Salah (Prayer) and come to the end of reciting Surah Al-'Alaq or Al-Najm? Do I have to prostrate then stand up to perform the Ruku' (bowing) or perform the Ruku' and delay Sujud-ul-Tilawah until the end of the Salah? How do I perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah if I am reciting either of these two Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) in the second Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer?

A: If you recite one of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration), it is prescribed that you should prostrate directly after it, then say the Takbir ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), stand up, say the Takbir, and then perform the Ruku'. This is because Sujud-ul-Tilawah should be performed directly after reciting the Ayah requiring Sujud (prostration) and should not be postponed until after saying the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer).

Q 2: Before starting a Salah (Prayer), an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) told the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) that he would not perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) on reciting the Ayah requiring Sujud (prostration). He then said the Takbir ("Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and started praying, reciting Surah Al-Fatihah, then Surah Al-'Alaq - without prostrating at its end - and then said Basmalah (saying, "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]") and recited Surah Al-Ikhlās, all in the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer). He then continued the Salah. Was what he did correct or was he obligated to have performed Sujud-ul-Tilawah? And also, was he obligated to have recited the Surah (Qur'anic chapter) that succeeds Surah Al-'Alaq? What would have been correct? Please, provide us with your legal opinion, and may Allah reward you greatly.

A: Sujud-ul-Tilawah is not obligatory, so there is nothing wrong if an Imam or someone offering Salah individually does not perform it. There is also nothing wrong if one recites a Surah in the second Rak'ah that does not sequentially follow the Surah they have recited in the first Rak'ah.

The thirteenth question of Fatwa no. 18762

Q 13: If one is reciting the Qur'an and comes across one of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration) and so they prostrate and say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), some people say that they should not say the Taslim. They say that they should just pick up the Mus-haf (Qur'an-book) and continue reciting. Which is better, to say the Taslim or not?

A: There is no evidence as far as we know on the legitimacy of saying the Taslim after performing Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation). Some scholars say this through their own Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings) and this is their opinion; on which basis it is not a disapproved act on part of those who say the Taslim after it.

However, it is better not to say it, because there is no evidence for this.

Q: An Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) recited one of Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration), said Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"), performed Sujud (prostration), and then stood up to continue the recitation without saying Takbir (upon rising from the prostration position). Should he have performed Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) or not? Some people said that it was obligatory on the Ma'mums (those being led by an Imam in Prayer) to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw, even if they did it after the Salah (Prayer). I hope you will guide us to the truth. May Allah reward you with the best and bless you!

A: It is prescribed to say Takbir to start sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) and when rising from it (the prostration position) during Salah, based on the Hadith of Ibn 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them), who said, "The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to recite the Qur'an to us. When he came to an Ayat-ul-Sujud, he would say Takbir and perform Sujud and we would perform Sujud with him." (Related by Abu Dawud) This is based also upon the general meaning of the Hadith: "The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to say Takbir with every bending and rising move." As for the Takbir when performing Sujud-ul-Tilawah outside the Salah, it should be said when going into the Sujud, but not on rising. If the Imam did not say Takbir when rising from the Sujud, he is not obligated to perform Sujud-ul-Sahw.

Q 1: When a Muslim is performing Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) outside Salah (Prayer), should they raise their hands up to their shoulders as they do when performing Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer)? Please advise us and may Allah reward you well!

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) to say Takbir to start sujud Al-Tilawah outside salah, according to what is reported to be the practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him), but without raising the hands, as that was not reported.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19772

Q 2: In a Halaqah (learning circle) formed to recite the Qur'an, the people did not perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) until after sunrise.

A: according to the correct scholarly opinion, Sujud-ul-Tilawah is Mustahab (desirable) anytime a person recites the Qur'an and comes across an Ayah requiring prostration after its recitation. If there is a group listening to a reciter, they should not perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah unless the reciter performs it.

Q 1: what should be done if a person who is reciting the Qur'an comes across any of the Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration) at a time when it is not permissible to perform supererogatory Salah, such as sunrise or sunset?

A: It is permissible for someone who is reciting the Qur'an to perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) even during times when it is not permissible to perform supererogatory Salah, as Sujud-ul-Tilawah does not follow the same rulings as Salah (Prayer).

Q 1: I always recite the Qur'an while sitting at my desk and when I reach an Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that requires Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of recitation), I prostrate on the desk; is this correct or should I go down to the ground?

A: Sujud (prostration) is performed by putting the forehead on the ground or on anything that is placed over it, such as a carpet or the like, whether for sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) or other. It will not suffice to perform Sujud by gesturing, unless the person is unable to prostrate on the ground.

Q: I am a student of knowledge and I work in Khartoum Hospital in Sudan. My question is about Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration) that I come across while reciting the Book of Allah (may He be Exalted and Glorified) during persistent hours of hard work, can I perform the Sujud (prostration) on the table or what should I do? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If a person is reciting the Qur'an and they come across an Ayah requiring prostration after its recitation, it is prescribed that they should perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) on the ground, if they are able to do this. If it is not possible, for example because riding in a car, a gesture can be made with the head according to the person's ability. However, Sujud-ul-Tilawah is an act of Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) and not Wajib (obligatory), so there is no sin if it is not performed.

Q 2: What is the ruling on hearing one of the Ayat-ul-Sujud (Qur'anic verses of Prostration) when the Qur'an is being recited while I am in a car or at work? Should I prostrate or is there a specific Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) that I could recite instead?

A: It is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) that, when one of the Ayat-ul-Sujud from the Qur'an is recited, both the reciter and the listener should perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) if the listener is near the reciter and intentionally listening to the recitation.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 168)

In this case they should perform the Sujud (prostration) after the reciter. This is based on the report narrated by Al-Bukhari in his "Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith) on the authority of Nafi' on the authority of Ibn 'Umar, who said, "The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) would recite one of the Ayat-ul-Sujud while we were with him, then he would perform Sujud \(prostration\) and we would perform Sujud with him, and we used to crowd \(the place\) so much so that some of us found no place for their forehead to prostrate on." As to the situation when you hear a the recitation on the radio while you are in the car, at work, or other than that, or far from the reciter, it is not prescribed for you to perform the Sujud-ul-Tilawah.

Sujud-ul-Shukr

Fatwa no. 14216

Q: How should sujud-ul-shukr (Prostration of Thankfulness to Allah) be performed? When is it Mustahab (desirable) to be performed? In addition, what is the Du`a' (Supplication) to be said in it? Please provide us with a detailed and complete clarification.

A: Sujud-ul-Shukr is enjoined to be performed by a person whenever they are blessed with a grace that they waited and longed for, or when they get rid of a distress or a misfortune that afflicted them or was about to do so. In such cases, it is Sunnah (a commendable act) that the concerned person makes one Sujud (prostration) in which they are to glorify Allah and thank Him. Finally, Wudu' (ablution) is not a condition for the validity of Sujud-ul-Shukr.

Times of prohibition

Q 9: What are the times in which it is prohibited to perform supererogatory Salah (prayer)?

A: The times in which it is prohibited to perform supererogatory Salah are: After the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer till sunrise, from the time the sun reaches its meridian till its end, and from `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer till sunset. However, it is permissible to offer a Salah with a valid reason at these times according to the soundest opinion of scholars, such as Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse), the two Rak`ahs after Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah), and Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque).

Q: does the time when it is not permissible to offer voluntary Salah in case of the Fajr (dawn) Prayer start from the break of dawn until after Fajr Prayer is over, except for the two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of the Fajr Prayer? Please clarify these two issues and may Allah reward you with the best and make you benefit Islam and Muslims!

A: The time for the voluntary Salah ends at the break of the second (true) dawn, except for the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) for the Fajr Prayer, and the prohibition lasts until the sun has risen a spear's length [above the horizon. ed.]. The first question of Fatwa no. 19518

Q 1: The author Muhammad Tariq Muhammad Salih, in his book: "Amal Al-Muslim fi Al-Yawm wa Al-Laylah (A Muslim's Deeds in the Day and Night)", stated that it is from the Sunnah (what is reported from the Prophet) to perform two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) after the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, as it has been authentically reported in the Hadith Sahih (Hadith that has been transmitted by people known for their uprightness and exactitude; free from eccentricity and blemish) that the Messenger (peace be upon him) used to do this. The author mentioned the following Hadith:

1. On the authority of 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her), who narrated, ("The Prophet (peace be upon him) never came to me in the day after the 'Asr Prayer, without praying two Rak'ahs.") In another narration, ("The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) never abandoned observing the two Rak'ahs after the 'Asr Prayer in my house.") (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)
2. On the authority of 'Aishah, who also narrated, ("Two Salahs which the Messenger of Allah never abandoned performing them in my house, be it secretly or openly: the two Rak'ahs before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and the two Rak'ahs after the 'Asr Prayer.") (Related by Muslim)
3. On her authority also, she said, ("The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) never left the two Rak'ahs after 'Asr.") (Related by Muslim)

Are the above Hadith Sahih? Is it from the Sunnah to perform two Rak'ahs after the 'Asr Prayer?

A: It is not permissible to perform Nafilah (supererogatory) Salah after the 'Asr prayer, because this is the time when voluntary Salah is forbidden and what the Prophet (peace be upon him) did in the Hadith mentioned above was to make up for the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) for the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer that he had missed. He (peace be upon him) did this regularly, because it was his habit (peace be upon him) that if he did some religious act he would continue doing it regularly, and this was particular for him (peace be upon him) alone. However, it is permissible to perform Salah after 'Asr if it is for a particular reason, such as Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque), Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse), the two Rak'ahs after Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka'bah) following the 'Asr and Fajr Prayers, and the Funeral Prayer, due to the Hadith mentioned in this regard.

However, it is not permissible to offer it after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer because it is one of the times in which performing supererogatory Salah is prohibited, except in special situations such as the two Rak`ahs after Tawaf (circumambulation around Ka`bah), Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse) and Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque).

Congregational Salah

(Part No. 6; Page No. 178)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 179)

Fatwa no. 20519

Q: We are a group of government employees and we perform some of the Salahs (Prayers) in a special Musalla (a place for Prayer) in which congregational Salah is offered. However, we do not say the Adhan (call to Prayer) for the congregational Salah, because we cannot hear it, so we only say the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer). I hope that Your Eminence will explain the following issues:

First: Is it permissible for us not to say the Adhan and just say the Iqamah?

Second: If the instrument used to announce the Adhan in the Masjid (mosque) is broken or there is a power cut, what should we do in these circumstances, because we, or at least some of us, depend on hearing the Adhan from the Masjid? Is it permissible for women to give the Adhan and Iqamah?

Third: If a person or a group of people enter the Masjid to perform Salah and find that the congregational Salah has finished, should they say the Adhan and Iqamah or should they just say the Iqamah, as people do today?

Fourth: If a person misses some Salahs due to sleep, what should they do in regard to the Adhan and Iqamah?

Fifth: is it permissible for a woman to observe Sawm (Fasting) after delivery if her postpartum bleeding stops, even though she has not completed the 40 days, and can she also perform Salah?

A: First: It is obligatory to perform Salah in the nearest Masjid to your workplace, as long as you are able to do so and you can hear the Adhan, because congregational Salah in the Masjid is obligatory for men and it is not permissible to stop offering it there. As for women, it is not prescribed for them at all to give the Adhan or Iqamah.

Second: Nowadays, there are accurate instruments to tell the time. If you cannot hear the Adhan for some reason, it is your obligation in this circumstance to depend upon a clock and go to the Masjid at the due time of the Salah.

Third: Giving the Adhan is one of the collective obligations. If the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) has said the Adhan in the Masjid and the Salah has ended and another group comes to perform the Salah, it is prescribed for them to just say the Iqamah; they do not have to say the Adhan.

Fourth: If a person lives in a city, it is sufficient for them to say the Iqamah for every Salah they miss. However, if they live in the desert or a place where no one gives the Adhan, they should give the Adhan once and say the Iqamah for every Salah.

Fifth: If a woman becomes ritually pure before the 40 days of her postpartum period has ended, she should perform Ghusl (ritual bath following major ritual impurity), perform Salah and Sawm, and it is permissible for her husband to have sexual intercourse with her, because she is considered to be ritually pure after the postpartum bleeding stops.

Q 4: What is the ruling on a man who does not offer prayer in congregation? We advised him many times but he makes his excuse the impurity of his clothes because he works as a butcher and adds that he offers Salah individually. He has been doing this for a long time. Is this permissible?

A: A man has to perform the five obligatory Prayers in congregation with the Muslims in the Masjid and it is not permissible for him to miss congregational Salah unless there is a legal excuse such as disease, fear or the like. The mentioned person has to assign clean clothes other than the work uniform in order to offer Salah, such a great act of worship, according to the Saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): ﴿"Whoever heard the call \(adhan\) and he did not come to it \(the prayer\), then there is no prayer for him except with an excuse".﴾ It was said to Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them), 'What is a legal excuse?' Q: I live in a small street where there is no Masjid (mosque). Rather, some of the inhabitants of this place just offer Salah (Prayer) in a courtyard that is allocated for such a purpose. A benevolent man offered to build a Masjid and advised the people of our street to co-operate and define a suitable location for the Masjid to be built on. However, they refused to do so, then the concerned benevolent man agreed with one of the inhabitants of our street to build the Masjid by the border of the street. The Masjid was then built, though the people who initially refused to define a suggested location for the new Masjid still pray in the courtyard mentioned above which is located next to the Masjid. A few days later, the concerned Masjid started to become abandoned as people who prayed in it left the street. To get to the point, nowadays I pray in a Masjid that is one kilometer away, but I do not pray with the people in the courtyard.

Should I pray with these people in the courtyard or I should pray in the Masjid that is one kilometer away? What is your advice to the people who still pray in the courtyard?

A: You have to pray with the congregation whether in the concerned Masjid or in the courtyard. It is impermissible for you to perform the obligatory Salah alone for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “Anyone who hears the Call \(to Salah\) and does not respond, there is no \(acceptable\) Salah for him except if he has a valid excuse.” On the other hand, you have to report the matter to the Prince of your town so that he obligates people who pray in the courtyard to pray in its neighboring Masjid. This is binding because the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) commanded that Masjids (mosques) be built, used for offering Salah in, cleaned, and perfumed. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) praises those who do this saying: [“In houses \(mosques\) which Allāh has ordered to be raised \(to be cleaned, and to be honoured\), in them His Name is remembered \[i.e. Adhan, Iqamah, Salāt \(prayers\), invocations, recitation of the Qur’ān etc.\]. Therein glorify Him \(Allah\) in the mornings and in the afternoons or the evenings,﴾ \(Men whom neither trade nor sale \(business\) diverts from the Remembrance of Allāh \(with heart and tongue\), nor from performing As-Salāt \(Iqāmat-as-Salāt\)﴾ He \(Glorified and Exalted be He\) also says: \(The Mosques of Allāh shall be maintained only by those who believe in Allāh and the Last Day, perform As-Salāt \(Iqāmat-as-Salāt\), and give Zakāt and fear none but Allāh.﴾](#) May Allah guide us all.

Q: I would like to ask Your Eminence about the meaning of the Hadith related by Abu Dawud and others on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudry, that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, «Congregational Salah \(Prayer\) is equivalent to twenty-five Salahs offered alone. If a person offers Salah in a desert, and performs its Ruku` \(bowing\) and Sujud \(prostration\) perfectly, it becomes equivalent to fifty Salahs \(in respect of reward\).» Abu Dawud said that `Abdul-Wahid ibn Ziyad said about this Hadith, «Salah alone in the desert is rewarded twice as much as Salah in congregation.» This Hadith was ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Shaykh Al-Albany in the Sahih Book of Abu Dawud. Al-Shawkany mentioned in "Al-Nayl" the wisdom behind dedicating this reward to Salah in the desert. Some people take this Hadith as a pretext to leave the congregational Salah and offer it alone in the desert. A teacher who works in Al-Hanakiyyah, which is 107 km away from Madinah, passes by some Masjids (mosques) on his way back from the school to Madinah, which might be at the time of the Zhuhr (Noon) or `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, but he leaves the Masjids and offers Salah in the desert to get this reward. Please advise concerning this, may Allah reward you in this world and in the Hereafter; He is the One Able to do this.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 185)

A: The mentioned Hadith is about those who are in the desert and cannot reach a Masjid. However, if a person is close to a Masjid and heard the Adhan (call to Prayer), he should offer Salah in the Masjid with the congregation, and it is impermissible for him to offer Salah alone, according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), «Whoever hears the Adhan and does not come to Salah, his Salah is not valid, unless he has an excuse.» The Prophet (peace be upon him) told the blind man who asked him to give him permission to offer Salah at home, so that he could avoid the hardships he finds on his way to the Masjid, «Do you hear Adhan?» The man said, "Yes." He (peace be upon him) said, "Then answer it, for I cannot find a concession for you."

The first question of Fatwa no. 20429

Q 1: I am a man so full of love for my camels that I cannot pull myself away from them, due to their loveable character and nature. This causes me to miss attending the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer in the Masjid (mosque) in congregation, because I go with them to the desert. Sometimes, I also miss the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer if I stay late with them, but when the time for the Adhan (Call to Prayer) is due, I call it loudly and then the Iqamah (Call to start the Prayer) and perform Salah (Prayer) with my brothers and four children, and we perform it at the due time, without delay. Is there anything I have to do to expiate for not attending the Maghrib Prayer in congregation and sometimes the 'Isha' Prayer for the above reason, even though I perform them with my brothers and children in the desert? If I am sinful for this, I will sell my camels and anticipate the recompense from Allah, although I love them dearly.

A: It is obligatory on your part and those with you to perform Salah in the Masjids (Mosques) of the town nearest to you, if you are somewhere where you can hear the Adhan without a microphone, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Anyone who hears the Call \(the Adhan\) and does not respond, there is no Salah for him, unless he has a lawful excuse." It was asked of Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him both), "What is a lawful excuse?" He said, "Fear or illness." Furthermore, when a blind man came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying, "O Messenger of Allah! I have no one to guide me to the Masjid," and asked for a Rukhsah (concession) to perform Salah in his house, he (peace be upon him) said, "Do you hear the Call to Salah?" He said, "Yes." He (peace be upon him) said, "Then respond \(to it\)." However, if you are far away and you cannot hear the Adhan, there is no harm in you performing the congregational Salah where you are.

Q: Nowadays there are many rest areas where people frequent. Because of this, some Masjids (mosques) are built close to them to help people in the rest areas to offer congregational Salah (Prayer).

Some people say that it is permissible for them to offer Salah in the rest areas rather than in the Masjid, although the Masjid is so close and they can hear the Adhan (call to Prayer). Their excuse say that Salah must be offered in congregation but not necessarily in the Masjid and that the person is rewarded for Salah in congregation even if not in the Masjid. what is the ruling on a person who observes Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan and does not offer Salah in the Masjid on the pretext that they offer congregational Salah in rest areas? Is the person who does not offer congregational Salah in the Masjid considered immoral and disobedient to Allah (Exalted be He)? What is the advice which Your Eminence gives to those people? We would like this Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) to be in a written form to be distributed to the people who frequent those rest areas. Is it permissible for a traveler to neglect the congregational Salah if they are not residents in this country?

A: All Muslim men have to offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in the Masjid because it is for this reason that the Masjids are built and because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who hears the Adhan and does not respond \(i.e. does not come to the Masjid for Prayer\), there is no \(reward for the\) Salah for him except with an excuse.\) Also, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said he would burn the people who did not offer Salah in the Masjid without even asking whether they had offered congregational Salah at their homes or not. He (peace be upon him) also did not give permission for the blind person, who did not find anyone to take him to the Masjid, to offer Salah at home. In fact, he ordered him to answer the call of the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) and to offer congregational Salah in the Masjid. Besides, offering Salah in congregation in the Masjid has been the tradition of Muslims in the past and in the present.

Q: A group of teaching Qur'an for women provides transportation for the sisters in charge of teaching the Qur'an and sometimes for the students in the school. We have a problem for which we want to know the ruling of Shari`ah (Islamic law). The bus driver brings the sisters from their houses to school at the time of the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. consequently, the driver misses the `Asr Prayer in congregation in the Masjid (mosque). It should be noted that we cannot postpone bringing them to school after the `Asr Prayer because this will make them miss the lessons of the Qur'an. Moreover, they cannot come to school before the `Asr Prayer as this would require them to leave their houses earlier. It is worth mentioning that some of them are students and some others are employees in the morning and return home late at noon. Others are housewives and have specific responsibilities and it is hard for them to leave to school earlier than their duty requires. Also, the driver cannot stop along the road to offer the `Asr Prayer in congregation then continues to school, because this will delay them and make them miss the lessons of the Qur'an. The entire group of teaching the Qur'an will suffer and so will the students as a result of the delay of the teachers who will give the Qur'an lessons. We would like to explain to Your Eminence that the houses of those sisters are far from school and it requires much time to get them all to school. The school time starts almost forty-five minutes after the Adhan (call to Prayer) of the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. What is the ruling on the driver missing the `Asr Prayer in congregation in the Masjid? Are we committing a sin? It should be noted that we are responsible for setting the course of the buses. Please advise, may Allah reward you!

A: You have to let the driver offer the congregational Salah in the Masjid even if you will have to start late because congregational Salah in the Masjid is obligatory for men and the reason you have mentioned is not a good enough excuse for the driver to abandon congregational Salah. May Allah grant you success and help us to do all good.

Q: Is it permissible to offer fajr (Dawn) Prayer in congregation after sunrise?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 190)

A: A person who misses Salah has to offer it in congregation, even after the elapse of its due time as much as they can. This is based on the Hadith that is authentically reported from `Imran ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: \(We traveled the whole night along with the Prophet \(peace be upon him\), and when it was almost dawn, we got down to rest, and we were overpowered \(by sleep\) till the sun's heat woke us up. All of us then got up in amazement hurrying to his water of ablution. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) ordered Bilal to call to prayer and prayed the two Sunnah rak'ahs before dawn. Bilal then declared Iqamah \(the second call to prayer\) and we performed the \(dawn\) prayer.\)

The first question of Fatwa no. 18743

Q 1: Muslims in Pakistan postpone the five obligatory prayers until the end of the permissible time. They also make the Adhan (call to Prayer) late. Is it permissible for me to offer Salah in its due time before hearing the Adhan, as offering Salah in its due time is better, as is the case in The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia?

A: You should urge them to offer Salah in its due time to get the reward and to be following the Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). If they insist on postponing Salah, you should offer Salah with them and do not offer Salah alone; because offering Salah in congregation is obligatory, as long as they do not postpone Salah until its time elapses.

Q 1: While we were on journey the time of Salah (Prayer) became due, so we stopped to perform the Salah. One member of our group told us to perform Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth) and then perform Salah individually, even though we were a large group. My question is: Is it permissible for people who perform Tayammum to choose one of them to be the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or not?

A: It is obligatory upon men, whether at home or on a journey, to perform Salah in congregation. This is so whether they perform Tayammum or Wudu' (ablution). It is not permissible for them to perform Salah individually due to Tayammum. What that man told you is not correct.

Q 4: There is a man who does not attend congregational Salah (Prayer) because the Prophet (peace be upon him) told one of his Sahabah (Companions), \(Be used to staying at home.\) What is the opinion of scholars on this?

A: It is impermissible to abandon the congregational Salah in the Masjid (mosque) unless there is a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse, whether sickness or fear. His order (peace be upon him) to his Sahabah to stay at home refers to keeping away from Fitnah (temptation) and evil, not abandoning the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and the congregational Salah.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 21368

Q 5: What is the ruling on those who abandon Salah (prayer) in congregation and do not offer Salah in the Masjid (mosque) except for Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer? Some of them do not offer Salah in congregation except on the Day of `Eid and do not offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer or offer Salah in congregation? Would you kindly advise us regarding this serious matter which many Muslims neglect, especially the youth? May Allah guide them and us to what pleases Him! May Allah protect us from His Wrath and severe punishment!

A: Offering Salah in congregation is obligatory upon every Muslim for the five daily Prayers and Jumu`ah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «Whoever hears the call \(to Salah\) and does not come to it, there is no \(reward for\) his Salah except with an excuse.» Also, he (peace be upon him) said to the blind man who asked permission to offer Salah in his home because of the hardship he suffered in coming to the Masjid (mosque): «Do you hear the call \(to Salah\)? He replied: Yes. He \(peace be upon him\) said: then respond \(to the call\).» The Prophet (peace be upon him) considered burning the houses of those who did not attend Salah (in congregation).

Q 4: the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of our Masjid (mosque) does not perform the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and he does not want anyone to perform it in the Masjid, because he lives in front of it. The matter has reached the extent that he even disturbs those few believers who do perform Salah (Prayer) in this Masjid without being embarrassed doing so. Sometimes, they now do not call the Adhan (Call for Prayer). In relation to the Salah, this Imam tells us to, "Pray as you have seen me (the Imam) praying." He places his hands by his sides, but some people place their right hand on the left and place them both on the chest. He does not raise his hands after rising from Ruku' (bowing), but some people do. He raises his hands to make Du'a' (supplication) after each of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, but some people do not do so. He tells them that they should perform the Salah as he does. I am sorry to have to say this, but we are suffering and the people of the village are ignorant. The Imam's brother teaches the Qur'an in the same village, where they have been living for around 17 years. Both of them have memorized the Qur'an, but the problem is that during all this time, he does not act in accordance with it or understand it. An example of this is that when someone passes away, they recite the Qur'an and eat and drink coffee for 3 days and on the 40th day after their death.

In addition to this, the Imam makes Hirz (protective amulets) and practices Ruqyah (reciting Qur'an and saying supplications over the sick seeking healing). What is your response to this Imam?

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) upon men to perform the obligatory Salahs in congregation in the Masjid at their due time. It is also obligatory for the Imam to always be punctual and arrive on time to lead the people in Salah, as he is a guardian of the believers and is responsible for those under his guardianship. The Imam, and those led by him in Salah, should strictly abide by the Sunnah as to the way of performing Salah, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Pray as you have seen me praying." Therefore, Salah should be performed according to the Hadith Sahih (Hadith that have been transmitted by people known for their uprightness and exactitude; free from eccentricity and blemish) that relate the manner in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) prayed.

Q 2: There is a Masjid (mosque) in the building where we live. Is it permissible for a student to offer Salah (Prayer) in their room? School here needs a lot of study and most of the students stay awake all night and do not offer the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Also, they find no time to offer Salah because of their studies when they wake up in the morning. What should they do? Is it permissible for them to make up for the missed Salah at another time? what is the ruling on a person who wants to offer the Fajr Prayer but their studies prevent them from this?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 195)

A: It is obligatory to observe offering Salah on time in congregation, if this is possible. It is not permissible to sleep and delay offering the Fajr Prayer until finishing studies during the daytime. Whoever sleeps unintentionally at the time of Salah should hasten to offer it as soon as they wake up. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: Whoever misses a Salah because they sleep or forget it should offer it when they remember it, there is no Kaffarah \(expiation\) for it except this.

A: The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Do not make your houses graves," by way of urging to perform Nafilah (supererogatory) Salahs at home. It is obligatory to perform the Faridahs in the Masjid in congregation, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Anyone who hears the call \(the Adhan\) and does not respond, there is no Salah for him, unless he has a lawful excuse." Besides other Hadith to the same effect.

Q 1: Is it Sunnah (a commendable act), if I miss the congregational Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque), to perform it with my wife at home? If so, am I entitled to the reward of congregational Salah?

You may do so for any Nafilah (supererogatory) Salah as well. A proof for this is that Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) said: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) visited us after sunrise.

Q: We seek your Eminence Fatwa (legal opinion) on the ruling of having several Musallas (praying rooms) in many separate departments that are close to one another, and located in the same building and surrounded by one fence. It should be noted that there is a large Masjid (mosque) for all departments which does not afford sufficient space for everyone only in Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, but during others prayers there is a sufficient place to all the employees of these departments. What is the ruling on having many Musallas in these departments in other than the time of Zhuhr? As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: The people who work in these departments have to offer all obligatory Prayers in the large Masjid. If it does not have enough space to accommodate all the people in Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, you should expand it even by building a temporary sunshade under which people may pray until it is expanded properly later on.

A: It is obligatory upon a Muslim to perform Salah at its due time with the congregation in the Masjid (mosque). There is no harm in delaying congregational Salah as long as it does not extend beyond the time of the concerned Salah due to a Sahr`i benefit, such as offering Zhuhr after the extreme heat subsides, waiting for congregational Salah, and the like. however, offering Salah alone and abandoning the congregational Salah on the pretext that people are used to this or that the employer refuses is impermissible.

Q: I work as a foreign language teacher at a private institute. Classes are from 6 to 8 PM and 8 to 10 PM. This means that the congregational Salah (Prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) are performed in the Masjid during the time of the classes. Nevertheless, we offer Maghrib Prayer at 7 o'clock and `Isha' Prayer at 9 o'clock i.e. about half an hour after the concerned congregational Salahs (Prayers) finish in the Masjid. Unfortunately, such phenomenon spreads widely in private institutes for people in charge of them do not care about offering Salah on time. They claim that it is permissible to offer congregational Salah inside the concerned institutes. It is considerable to mention that the institute where I work is just next to a Masjid, so nothing necessitates abandoning Salah in the Masjid. Could you please tell us whether it is permissible for us to offer Salah inside the institute or should we complain against the people in charge of it, so the times of the classes are modified? Please, advise the heads of such institutes! May Allah reward you the best!

A: According to both verbal and practical Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet, peace be upon him), it is Wajib (obligatory) on male Muslims to perform the congregational Salah in the Masjid. On the other hand, the Prophet (peace be upon him) intended to burn those who abandoned the congregational Salah, in their homes. The prophet's caliphs, Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet), and their followers (may Allah be pleased with them all) thus used to perform the congregational Salah in the Masjid. In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said in a Hadith Sahih (authentic Hadith): Whoever hears Adhan (call to Prayer) and does not come to it (congregational Salah in the Masjid), his Salah is not accepted unless he has a (valid) excuse. It is authentically reported that a blind man said to the Prophet (peace be upon him): "O Messenger of Allah, (I am blind and) I do not find a person to accompany me to the Masjid. Is there any Rukhsah (concession) for me to pray at home?" The Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Do you hear Adhan?" He said: "Yes". The Prophet said: "Then respond". According to another narration, the Prophet said: I do not find any Rukhsah for you. Consequently, it is Wajib on (male) teachers, employees, and students in question to perform congregational Salah in the neighboring Masjid. This is to follow the Sunnah, block the means to useless escape of Salah in the Masjid, and be far away from resembling the hypocrites. It is worth mentioning that the claim that performing Salah inside such institutes achieves their interest and guarantees a better attendance of their students and staff members is not a Shar`y (Islamic legal) excuse.

Fatwa no. 16947

Q: Some governmental administrations have Masjids (mosques) in which congregational Salahs (Prayers) especially Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer are performed. Nevertheless, sometimes carpets are spread in some departments of such administrations and a number of people offer Salah (Prayer) there. It is worth mentioning that the neighboring Masjids have enough capacity for all worshippers. Is it thus permissible to abandon performing Salah in the main Masjids and offer it instead in temporary places of Salah where people pray in small groups? What is the ruling if the main Masjid (mosque) does not have enough room for all worshippers? Please, advise! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: It is not permissible to perform the obligatory Salah in such administrations' departments or passages. Rather, congregational Salah has to be performed in the concerned administrations' Masjids.

Third question of Fatwa no. 19587

Q 3: The Masjid (mosque) beside the governmental administration where I work suffers neglect on the part of the concerned authority. Only new soldiers offer Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid. Unfortunately, the concerned soldiers may not know the meaning of Salah. They come to pray without making Wudu' (ablution), make many movements that render their Salah Batil (null and void), and disturb other worshippers. We have advised them uselessly more than once. My colleagues thus abandoned performing Salah in the concerned Masjid as bad smells and noise that disrupt calmness of worshippers emit from it. Consequently, we established a temporary place for Salah inside our administration in which all employees started to offer their Salah. It is worth mentioning that when I perform my Salah in this Masjid, none of my colleagues offer Salah. They only offer Salah in the concerned temporary place when I pray with them after reminding them of the importance of performing Salah on time.

Am I sinful for abandoning performing Salah in the Masjid as it is reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: «No valid Salah is performed by a \(male\) person living near a Masjid except that which he offers in the Masjid.» Note that only Salah of Zhuhr (Noon) comes while we are at work. Please, advise! May Allah reward you the best!

(Part No. 6; Page No. 202)

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) to ask the authority in charge of the concerned Masjid to repair and look after it, and instruct worshippers to perform Salah in the Mashru' (Islamically acceptable) way. Such authority has to prevent negligence of rulings of Salah in the concerned Masjid for Salah is the second pillar of Islam and its main integral. It is thus impermissible to show mildness regarding the performance of Salah.

Q 4: My house is around one kilometer away from the Masjid (mosque), and I hear the Adhan (call to Prayer) only through the microphone. Do I have to offer Salah (Prayer) there or may I offer Salah at home? Please advise concerning this matter, may Allah protect you.

A: whoever hears the Adhan should answer the call, unless he has a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse. This is indicated in what was related by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him), that a blind man came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said, ﴿O Messenger of Allah! (I am blind and) I do not have someone to lead me to the Masjid. Is there any concession for me to offer Salah at home? The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Do you hear the Adhan?" He said, "Yes." The Prophet said, "Then answer it.﴾ Related by Muslim in the Book of Masjids (1/458); Imam Ahmad (volume 3, p. 423); Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'iy and Ibn Majah with a slight variation.

The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said, ﴿Whoever hears the Adhan and does not come to Salah, then his Salah is not valid, unless he has an excuse.﴾ Related by Ibn Majah and Al-Daraqutny with a Sahih (authentic) Isnad (chain of narration). It was also related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation) with a slight variation. When Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him) was asked about the excuses, he said, "Either fear or sickness."

Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer claiming that the congregational Salah (Prayer) is performed in the Masjid (mosque) early and that it is preferred that Zhuhr Prayer is delayed. Such people thus pray Zhuhr Prayer alone at a later time, is their Salah valid? Similarly, some people perform `Isha' (Night) Prayer alone at a later time claiming that it is preferred to pray `Isha' Prayer during the last part of night; is such Salah valid? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: It is impermissible for male Muslims to abandon performing congregational Salah and pray alone. Fatwa no. 19017

Q: Though we allocated the biggest place in the school where we work for offering Salah (Prayer), this place does not have enough capacity for all students. Is it thus permissible that we divide students into two large groups so that some of them pray in another place such as the second floor? If so, do such students have to pray behind a different Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) or are they to join the main congregation bearing in mind that microphones are available? May Allah grant you success! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Students have to perform Salah in one congregation even when they are on different floors so long as they can hear the Imam via the microphone. In other words, it is not permissible that the students in question are divided into more than one congregation as they do not need to do so.

Q: I would like to tell Your Eminence that, in the Subscribers Services Department of the Saudi Telecom building in Abha, there is a public Musalla (a place for Prayer) on the middle floor that has Mus-hafs (copies of the Qur'an), a microphone and praying mats. However, Salah (Prayer) is still offered in congregation in different sections of the same building, under the pretext of pressure of work. We would like Your Eminence - and may Allah bless you - to give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) concerning the permissibility of performing more than one congregational Salah in the same building. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You must all perform the congregational Salah in the public Musalla located in the building. It is not permissible for you to separate into different congregations without a necessity. This should only be done if you have a lawful excuse not to go to the Masjid, because our Din (religion) encourages unity and forbids disunion.

Q 5: When we train in the desert, we offer Salah (Prayer) in several congregations where we can see one another; what is the ruling on this?

A: If it is possible to offer Salah in the training base in one congregation, it would be better and is more rewarded. When it is not possible or it is difficult, there is no harm in doing so.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17597

Q 3: A company owner hires non-Muslims and Muslims, some of whom claim to be Muslims, but they do not attend the congregational Salah (Prayer) for a long time. We advised them many times, but they did not listen to our advice. They admit that the only congregational Salah they offer is the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer. I hate such people, but my elder brother says that they are qualified workers.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 207)

What should we do? Please advise. May Allah reward you.

A: A person who hires muslim workers should urge them to offer Salah, encourage them to do this, and give them the chance to offer it.

It is impermissible for the employer to let them work for him while they insist on abandoning the congregational Salah, as keeping silent on the issue indicates acceptance of their behavior, and thus, he is considered their partner in sin and their helper in falsehood and Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect). The first question of Fatwa no. 17844

Q 1: My father cannot perform Salah (prayer) well, therefore, I stand by his side to lead him in Salah. He does exactly as I do, i.e. when I say Takbir, he says it too. I recite Surah Al-Fatihah word by word and he repeats after me until the end of Salah, because he has not memorized any Surah from the Qur'an. When I finish Salah, I make a new intention and repeat my Salah inaudibly. I should mention here that I do not make the intention to lead my father or to offer Salah with him, but just to teach him. Is this permissible?

A: Teach your father Surah Al-Fatihah outside Salah and also the Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) of Ruku` (bowing), Sujud (prostration), sitting between the two prostrations, the first and the last Tashahud then tell him to offer Salah in congregation in the Masjid (mosque) and he will learn how to offer Salah In sha'a-Allah. Tell him that it is obligatory to offer Salah in congregation at the Masjid because the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Whoever hears the call \(Adhan\) and he does not come to it \(the prayer\), then there is no prayer for him except with an excuse.\) Related by Ibn Majah and Al-Daraqutni. Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim graded it as Sahih (authentic) according to the conditions of Imam Muslim. Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) was asked about the excuse mentioned in this Hadith. He said: Fear or sickness. It is related in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that: \(A blind man came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said: O Messenger of Allah! I have no one to guide me to the Masjid \(mosque\). He, therefore, asked Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) permission to offer prayer in his home. He \(the Prophet\) inquired: Do you hear the call to prayer? He said: Yes. He \(the Prophet\) said: Respond to it.\) There are many Hadith regarding the obligation of men offering Salah in congregation in the Masjid.

Q 7: What is the ruling on a person who started offering one of the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers alone and then the congregational Salah (Prayer) begins? Is it permissible for them to offer Salah again in congregation to get the reward of congregational Salah?

Q: I visited the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan this year for the first time in my life. Praise be to Allah (Exalted be He) who granted me success and helped me to work with some Salafees (the followers of the way of the righteous predecessor). I noticed here, in Jordan, some things regarding how the Salafees in particular offer Prayer, which I did not see in Egypt. Among these matters which occupied my mind and prompted me to write to Your Honor is the opinion of the knowledgeable Sheikh, Nasir Al-Din Al-Albany, may Allah protect him and benefit the Muslim Ummah through him, that it is not permissible to conduct a second congregational Salah after offering that particular congregational Salah in the Masjid (mosque). In all the Masjids in Egypt, we usually perform a second and third congregational prayer and no one objects, even in the Masjid of the university. I hope that Your Honor will direct me to the correct opinion in this regard.

A: Offering a second congregational Salah of one of the five obligatory daily Salahs has three cases:

The first case is offering a second congregational Salah before finishing the first one, which is not permissible as this contradicts the Sunnah as well as the commandment that one should offer Salah with the first congregation.

The second case is coming to the Masjid after missing the congregational Salah which was offered, then a person joins one who missed the first congregation to offer Salah in a second congregation. Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri (may Allah be pleased with him) said: that Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) saw

(Part No. 6; Page No. 211)

a man offering Salah alone so he \(peace be upon him\) asked: Is there any man who will give him charity by offering Salah with him. Related by Abu Dawud. Al-Tirmidhi related a Hadith with a similar meaning and said: This Hadith is Hasan (good Hadith). The narration of Al-Tirmidhi adds that a man stood and offered Salah with him (the man).

The third case is not praying the first congregational Salah with the Imam in order to lead another congregation of those who did not attend the first congregational Salah. Doing so is an innovation in Islam, which was unknown in the early times and among its righteous predecessors. This act is Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and not permitted or approved, as it involves a great deprivation concerning the one who does not offer Salah in congregation. In fact, a Muslim is required to offer Salah at its due time with the congregation in the Masjid. If he misses the congregation and there are others like him, one of them is to lead the Salah as in the second case. And Allah knows best.

Q: I work for a company that allocates one full hour - from 12:00 pm to 01:00 pm - for performing Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and having lunch. As the defined time for Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) is 12:10 pm, some officials perform Salah (Prayer) before going to the restaurant to have lunch but many of them have lunch before they pray. Those who have their lunch first, miss the first congregational Salah and hold second and third congregations.

My question is, what is the ruling on the first congregation? Is it the Wajibah (obligatory) one or it is permissible to abandon it as long as a second congregation is held? Similarly, what is the ruling on the second congregation? Do people who join it get the reward of the congregational Salah? It may be worth mentioning that some officers justify their abandonment of the first congregation by quoting the Hadith which states that no Salah is to be performed when food is served, by mentioning that they pray with the second congregation, and by saying that the concerned restaurant gets crowded after the first congregation.

A: People who perform Salah in the Masjid mentioned above have to agree on one certain timing for performing Zhuhr Prayer. This timing should suit everyone and achieve their general comfort and ease. Doing so will enable everyone to attain merits of the congregational Salah, solve the current problem, and end the dispute. It is worth mentioning that the more people who join the congregation, the more blessed and pure the latter becomes. Proof for this is a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: A man's

(Part No. 6; Page No. 213)

Q 1: Is it permissible for one who offered congregational Salah to join another congregation? In other words, establishing another congregation led by another worshipper and in the same Masjid?

A: Whoever comes to a Masjid and finds that people have finished their Salah with their regular Imam or another Imam, can perform it in congregation with those who were also late, or along with one who performed Salah in the first congregation. Thus, this Salah will be a Nafilah (supererogatory) for the person who already joined the Imam in the first congregation, and the obligatory Salah for the one who missed it. This is in accordance with what was reported by Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhi and others that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said concerning the man who missed offering Salah in congregation: ﴿Is there any man who can do good to this \(man\) and perform Salah along with him!﴾

Q 1: What is the Islamic ruling concerning two congregational Salah (Prayers) being offered simultaneously in the Masjid (Mosque)?

A: It is not permissible to form multiple congregations for the same Salah in the same Masjid, except for those who miss the congregational Salah with the Imam. In this case they are excused and may form another congregation. The basic rule in this regard which is adopted by Muslims in all countries is that Muslims should offer five obligatory daily Salah in congregation in one Masjid led by one Imam. Whoever misses the congregational Salah may establish a congregation led by one of them as their Imam. As for the Salah they offered earlier, it is valid and need not be repeated; however, they must repent from this act.

A: It is not permissible to establish a second congregational Salah before the first one has been concluded. Once the first one is over, there is no harm for latecomers who missed the first congregational Salah to establish a second congregational Salah in the Masjid, and that is according to the most preponderant opinion of scholars. However, it is impermissible to take this as a habit, as some worshippers do by delaying Salah from its due time out of heedlessness and laziness, constantly offering second congregations unnecessarily. If it should become known about certain people that they constantly delay the Salah, they should be referred to the official authority and punished as a means of blocking any way leading to dissension.

Should he have interrupted Salah or completed it? And if he had interrupted his Salah, would he have been rewarded for it or not?

A: If the Iqamah for the obligatory Salah is announced while one is offering the last Ruku` or Sujud (prostration), one should complete it and then join the congregational Salah, and there is no need to interrupt it, as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿and render not vain your deeds.﴾ However, if Iqamah is announced while one is at the beginning of the Sunnah (supererogatory) Prayer or in the second Rak`ah before offering Ruku`, then one should stop, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When the prayer commences, then there is no prayer \(valid\), except the obligatory prayer.﴾ Related by Muslim. (Part No. 6; Page No. 217) should the person end the Salah with or without giving Taslim?

A: There are many details related to this issue. If the Iqamah for the obligatory Salah is pronounced while the worshipper is still in the first Rak`ah of Sunnah (supererogatory) or in the middle of it, it should be ended without offering Taslim according to the most preponderant opinion of scholars. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «When the prayer commences, then there is no prayer \(valid\) except the obligatory prayer.» Compiled by Muslim in his Sahih. However, if the Iqamah is called while the worshipper is performing Ruku` (bowing) of the last Rak`ah or after that, then it is preferable to complete the Salah. A: Whoever joins the congregation while the Imam is performing Ruku` and bows with him, then they have caught that Rak`ah. Reciting Al-Fatihah is waived for them because the time for its recitation while standing has passed. This is supported with the Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Bakra Al-Thaqafi \(may Allah be pleased with him\) that he reached the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the Masjid while he was bowing in prayer and he too bowed before joining the row. Q: if one joins Salah (Prayer) while the imam is performing Ruku' (Bowing), is this regarded as Rak'ah (unit of prayer) for him? If so, what is the ruling on Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and recitation of Al-Fatihah (opening Surah) which are two pillars of Salah? Will they be waived for him?

A: Whoever joins (the Salah during) Ruku` (bowing) should say Takbirat-ul-Ihram while still standing then bow with the Imam. It is Mustahab (desirable) for him in this case to say Takbir for Ruku', and if he bows before the Imam rises, then he has caught the Rak`ah and the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah is waived for him. When Abu Bakarah entered the Masjid and found the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the bowing position, he bowed with him before reaching the row and he did not order him to make up for it. The Rak`ah (unit of prayer) will count for him, and the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah is waived for him. Will Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) be waived as Takbirat-ul-Ruku` will suffice? Or should one pronounce Takbirat-ul-Ruku` then bow?

A: It is obligatory upon whoever enters the Masjid (Mosque) while the Imam is performing Ruku` (bowing) to pronounce Takbirat-ul-Ihram while in the standing position. This Takbirah is one of the pillars of Salah, then he should pronounce Takbirat-ul-Ruku' which is an act of Sunnah in this position; however, there is no harm if one omits it.

Q 2: Attached to this letter is a copy of a Juristic treatise wherein the writer declares it permissible to perform Ruku` (bowing) before reaching the row. Moreover, he claims that this is in accordance with the Sunnah and cites some Athar (narrations from the Companions). He explained the prohibition indicated in the Hadith of Abu Bakrah (may Allah be pleased with him): «May Allah increase your love for the good. But do not repeat it again \(bowing in that manner.\)» as walking quickly to reach the row. I hope that Your Honor (may Allah save you) will look into this treatise and explain the preponderant opinion regarding the prohibition indicated in the Hadith.

A: Performing Ruku` (bowing) before reaching the row then walking in that position to join it contradicts the Sunnah and is forbidden, as reported in the Sahih (authentic) Hadith which is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, the Book of Adhan (call to Prayer), the Chapter entitled "Bowling before reaching the row". «It is authentically related on the authority of Abu Bakrah \(may Allah be pleased with him\) that he joined the Prophet while in the bowing position, so he bowed before reaching the row, and after the Salah was over the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said, May Allah increase your love for the good, but do not repeat it again \(bowing in that way.\)» This Hadith bears the proof that it is prohibited for one to do this, as expressed by the statement, "but do not repeat it again " Al-Hafizh ibn Hajar (may Allah have mercy on him) discussed this in Fath-ul-Bari Sharh Sahih Al-Bukhari: This means that you should not repeat what you did by walking quickly then performing Ruku` before reaching the row, and then walking in that position until joining the row" End Quote.

As for the Athar (narrations from the Companions) cited by the compiler of this treatise, some of them are Da`if (weak) and others are Shadh (narrated by a trustworthy narrator, not in line with the narration of other trustworthy narrators in terms of wording, chain of narrators, or both) as they contradict the Hadith of Abu Bakrah which is related in Sahih Al-Bukhari; not to mention that they come in contradiction with other Athar. The relied upon evidence here is what is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Moreover, the compiler of this treatise is not known to be of the knowledgeable scholars, and you should give more care with regards to reading the books of the trustworthy scholars.

Q 1: I heard some sheikhs giving the Fatwa that reciting Surah Al-Fatihah is necessary for the Rak`ah (unit of prayer) to count, while other sheikhs said that it is counted if one joins the Imam while performing Ruku' (bowing). What is the most preponderant opinion in this regard, supported by evidences and scholars' opinions? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: catching the Rak'ah is counted when joining Ruku' with the Imam, based upon the Hadith of Abu Bakrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) told him when he bowed before reaching the row: «May Allah increase your love for the good. But do not repeat it again \(bowing in that manner.\)» And the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order him to make up for the Rak`ah in which he did not recite Surah Al-Fatihah, and upon the generality of the Prophet's statement: «Whoever attends one rak`ah \(in congregation\) is considered to have attended the entire prayer \(in congregation\).» Compiled by Muslim in his Sahih. Therefore, whoever joins the Imam while offering Ruku`, then he has caught the Rak`ah. But if there was enough time for the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) to recite Surah Al-Fatihah, then he is obliged to do so, for the generality of the Prophet's statement: «The prayer of whomever does not recite Surat Al-Fatihah is invalid» He (peace be upon him) further said: «Do you recite behind your Imam?» We said, "Yes, we do." He said, "Do not do that except in Surah Al-Fatihah; for there is no Salah for the one who does not recite it.» Compiled by Imam Ahmad and others with a Sahih (authentic) Sanad (chain of narrators). The prophet (peace be upon him) was referring to the Jahri Salah (Prayer recited audibly).

As for the Sirri Salah (Prayer with inaudible recitation), it is permissible for one to recite along with Surah Al-Fatihah whatever Surahs one has memorized in the first and second Rak`ahs.

But after doing so, the Imam stood erect before I pronounced takbir for Ruku'. Did I complete the Rak`ah (unit of prayer) or should I have repeated it after the Imam pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

A: If you did not offer Ruku` before the Imam stood, then you did not catch the Rak`ah; because the Rak`ah is not only counted by pronouncing Takbirat-ul-Ihram, but also by bowing before the Imam stands from Ruku`.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18912

Q 3: If i caught up with the imam in the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), should i join the congregational Salah or stay until he pronounces Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and look for another congregation? If I join the congregational Salah, what is the ruling in this regard?

A: It is preferable to join the first congregation even if the Imam is sitting for the last Tashahud, unless you strongly think that a second congregation will be established after the first one is concluded, then there is no harm in waiting for it. Furthermore, if you joined the first congregation after the Imam raised his head from the last Ruku` and you heard that another congregation will be established after the current one, it is permissible for you to intend this Salah as Nafilah (supererogatory) Salah after which you join the second congregation.

However, if you caught up with a Rak`ah (or more) in the first congregation, it is impermissible on your part to divert your intention so as to offer Salah with the second congregation, because the first congregational Salah is preferable.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17900

Q 3: What is the degree of authenticity concerning such sayings: If a person enters the Masjid (Mosque), and found the congregation performing the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second / last unit of Prayer), he should join them and should not wait until a second congregation is established, for the sake of attaining the reward of offering Salah with a large number of people?

A: Whoever enters the Masjid to find the congregation offering Salah, he should join them in any part of Salah, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(When the Iqamah \(call to start the Prayer\) has been pronounced for the Prayer, go walking to it in tranquility and dignity and do not make haste, and pray what you are in time for, and complete what you have missed.\) It is also narrated from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: \(If any of you entered the Masjid to offer Salah,

Q 6: If I enter the Masjid (Mosque) and find the congregation offering the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second / last unit of Prayer), should I join them and after the Imam offers Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) complete Salah (Prayer), or should I wait until he offers Taslim then offer Salah alone? What is the best way?

A: Whoever enters the Masjid (Mosque) while the Imam is offering the last Tashahhud, he should join him until the Salah is concluded. This is in accordance with the Hadith reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said, ("Whoever enters the Masjid while the congregation Salah is being offered, he should follow the Imam in what he does"). Related by Al-Tirmidhy. It is also reported in the authentically agreed upon Hadith that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(When you come to prayer, go with tranquility, and pray what you are in time for, and complete \(what you have missed\)\). Therefore, if a person enters the Masjid while the Imam is offering Tashahhud, then he should do the same and after the Imam ends Salah, he should stand and offer the missed Rak`ahs (units of Prayer).

Q 3: If a person joins Salah (prayer) after the Imam has finished bowing or at the prostration of the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) or in the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), should he wait for others to come and pray with them or join the Imam even if the congregational prayer is missed?

A: A latecomer realizes the reward of congregational Salah (prayer) when he catches up with one Rak'ah (unit of prayer) with the Imam. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «Whoever catches one rak'ah \(in congregation\) will be considered to have caught the whole prayer.» Related by Muslim in his Sahih. A full rak'ah (unit of prayer) is realized when a person catches up with Ruku' (bowing). However, when a Muslim arrives after the last bowing, it is better to join Salah with the Imam. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «When you come to prayer, go with tranquility and pray what you catch up with, and complete what you miss.» This Hadith is applied to joining Salah before and after the final Ruku'.

Q: If i join the congregational Salah (Prayer) at the final Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), should i say the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) with the imam (the one who leads the congregational Prayer), since I have not caught up with even one Rak`ah (unit of Prayer), then say Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and start the Salah, or should I stand up and complete the missed Rak`ahs? If I should stand up to complete what I have missed, should I say Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") or not?

A: If you join the Imam during any part of the Salah, even at the final Tashahhud, and before the Imam says the Taslim, you should not say the Taslim with the Imam. Rather, you should stand up saying Takbir to continue what you have missed. This is because of the general meaning of the following Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Pray what you catch, and complete what you have missed.\) (Related by the Six Hadith Compilers except Al-Tirmidhy). Should I recite the Fatihah only or recite a Surah along with the remaining Rak'ahs?

A: If you caught up with the Imam in a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) such 'Isha' Prayer, you have to offer one Rak'ah in which you recite the Faithah and a Surah then sit to recite Tashahhud, then stand up

I then became confused whether I should recite Tashahhud after one or two Rak'ahs. What should I have done?

A: if a person arrives at the final Rak'ah of the Maghrib Prayer, he should join the Imam in it, and when the Imam pronounces Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), he should stand to offer another Rak'ah; sit to recite the first Tashahhud; stand to offer the third Rak'ah; sit to recite the final Tashahhud and then pronounce Taslim.

The first question of Fatwa no. 14880

Q 1: A latecomer, who missed two Rak`ahs and wanted to join the congregational Salah (Prayer), hurried to catch up with the Imam and stood in the last row. Is this the best way to join the Salah?

A: If a person who misses part of the Salah enters the Masjid (mosque) and wants to catch up with the Imam, he should walk in tranquility and dignity until he reaches the row. He should then join the row and say Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer). Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, I heard the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying, «When the Iqamah \(call to start the Prayer\) has been pronounced for prayer, do not go running to it, but go walking in tranquility and pray what you catch up with, and complete what you have missed.»

Furthermore, Abu Bakrah once joined the Prophet (peace be upon him) while in the bowing position, so he bowed before reaching the row to catch Ruku'. After the Salah was over, he mentioned this act to the Prophet (peace be upon him) who said, «May Allah increase your love for good but do not repeat it again \(bowing in that way.\)» (Related by Al-Bukhari)

Q 3: A man joined the congregational Salah (Prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) during the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer); how should he complete his Salah after the Imam offers Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)? Should he recite audibly or inaudibly?

A: The worshipper who joins the congregational Salah of Maghrib during the last Rak'ah, should stand, after the Imam offers Taslim, and perform one Rak'ah in which he should recite audibly, then sit for Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), which is considered the first Tashahhud for him because the one in which he joins the Imam is performed by way of following the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). The concerned person should then offer the third Rak'ah in which he should recite Al-Fatihah inaudibly. The foregoing is based on the more correct of the two opinions maintained by the scholars, which holds that the parts of Salah that a latecomer catches up with the Imam are considered the beginning of his Salah, whereas the parts which he completes after the Taslim of the Imam are the last of his Salah. Afterwards, the person in question should sit for the last Tashahhud and then offer Taslim.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16817

Q 2: It is common in our country that a person who misses two Rak`ahs of `Isha' (Night) Prayer should, after the Imam's Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), make up for them openly; namely, he recites Al-Fatihah and the Surah after it loudly. Is this act valid?

A: The most sound view is that what a latecomer to Salah catches up with the Imam is considered the first part of his Salah and what he makes up for after the Imam's Taslim is the last part. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "...pray what you catch up with \(Imam\) and complete what you miss." Another narration reads, "...pray what you catch up with (Imam) and complete what you miss." For making up for the missed parts implies the completion of these parts. Allah (Glorified be He) says, "So when you have accomplished your Manâsik" It means that Muslims are to complete the rituals. In other words, the verbs yaqdi, i.e. to make up for, and yutim, i.e. to complete or accomplish, convey the same meaning. Consequently, a person, who misses the first two Rak`ahs of `Isha' Prayer, does not have to recite the Surahs loudly when he makes up for the missed Rak`ahs. As mentioned before, these Rak`ahs are considered the last part of Salah and what he caught up with the Imam is the first part.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 231)

Fatwa no. 18664

Q: Two men joined the congregational Salah (Prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) during the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), then they performed with the congregation the third Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) and recited the last Tashahhud. After the congregational Salah had ended, both of them offered the two missed Rak'ahs (units of Prayer), but one made a Tashahhud in between and the other did not. They disagreed after the Salah as each one claimed that he was right. Could you please clarify the matter? Moreover, if one of them was wrong; does this mean that his Salah was invalid and that he has to make up for it?

A: Anyone who joins the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in the last two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) should regard them the first of his Salah.

After the Imam offers Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), he should stand to make up for the missed Rak'ahs and regard them as the second half of his Salah. Afterwards, he should sit for the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer) then offer Taslim. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “When the Iqamah \(call to start the Prayer\) has been pronounced, go walking in tranquility, and pray what you are in time for, and complete what you have missed.” The last Tashahhud performed by the Imam is thus considered the first Tashahhud for the latecomers in question. On the other hand, whoever joins congregational Salah of Maghrib during the last Rak'ah, should pray one Rak'ah after the Taslim of the Imam, then should sit for the first Tashahhud. Afterwards, he should pray the third Rak'ah, then sit for the last Tashahhud and make Taslim. However, the person mentioned in the question who did not sit for Tashahhud in the first of the two missed Rak'ahs is not required to make up for it, because he was ignorant of the relevant Shar'y (Islamic legal) ruling.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 21672

Q 5: Should the person who catches up with the Imam in the last Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer offer the two missed Rak'ahs together or separate between them by sitting and reciting Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer)? Should the person who catches up with the Imam in the last Rak'ah of a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) such as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, or 'Isha' (Night) Prayer offer the missed Rak'ah first then sit for reciting Tashahhud before offering the other two Rak'ahs or he should offer the two Rak'ahs first then sit for reciting Tashahhud before offering the one remaining Rak'ah?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 233)

We would like also to get your advice because this issue causes great controversy among people.

A: Anyone who catches up with the Imam in the last Rak'ah of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer has to sit to recite the first Tashahhud after making up for the second missed Rak'ah, then sit to recite the last Tashahhud after making up for the third Rak'ah.

Anyone who catches up with the Imam in the last Rak'ah of a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) has to sit to recite the first Tashahhud after making up for the second Rak'ah, then sit for the last Tashahhud after making up for the last two Rak'ahs.

Q 1: I went to the Masjid (mosque) to offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer but when I entered, I found that the congregational prayer had ended. What is preferable; to offer the supererogatory prayer first then the obligatory Prayer, or to offer the obligatory Prayer first then make up for the supererogatory prayer? Please, advise me in this regard. May Allah reward you!

A: If you enter the Masjid and find that Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer was offered, you should offer the four Rak'ah supererogatory prayer that is offered before Zhuhr Prayer, concluding every two Rak'ahs with Taslim (salutation of peace ending the prayer). This is reported in the Hadith narrated by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) in this regard and recorded in Sahih Al-Bukhari. Then, if you find someone who has also missed the prayer, you should offer the prayer with him as a congregation, otherwise offer it individually. As for Iqamah (call to start prayer), it is recommended to pronounce it when you wish to perform Salah individually, or with another person. After offering the obligatory prayer you are required to offer the two supererogatory Rak'ahs that are performed after Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. If you offer four Rak'ahs as a supererogatory prayer after Zhuhr, it is better. Moreover, if you enter the Masjid while worshippers are praying in congregation, you must join them and offer the supererogatory prayer that is performed before and after Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer after concluding the prayer.

Q 10: A man comes late to Salah (Prayer) and finds no one to stand with him in the second row, should he draw someone back from the first row or offer Salah individually? is it permissible to offer Salah in front of the imam when the Masjid (mosque) as well as its courtyard are full?

A: Firstly: if a person who offers Salah finds the row complete, he should wait for another person to stand beside him in the new row, and he has no right to draw someone back. If he can join the row or perform Salah to the right side of the Imam, he may do so.

Secondly: It is a Sunnah that a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) stand behind or to the right or left of the Imam when needed. If they offer Salah in front of him, their Salah will be invalid. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The Imam is appointed only to be followed.\) It is reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he used to lead people in Salah and people offered Salah behind him. Q 1: Is it permissible for ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) to utter Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) loudly after the Imam? If not, please cite the evidence in support of this issue along with its source.

A: It is impermissible for the Ma'mums to raise their voices when reciting Takbir (Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]) when moving from one Rukn (Pillar) to another during Salah. Similarly, they should not do so when uttering Taslim together. Instead, they should recite Takbir and Taslim inaudibly following in the Salaf's (righteous predecessors) footsteps. Evidently, Takbir during Salah is a type of `Ibadah (worship) and `Ibadah is definitely Tawqifiy (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion). Thus, adding anything to it is an innovation. The Prophet (peace be upon him) warned against it stating, \(Whoever introduces something into this affair of ours that is not of it, it is to be rejected.\) with that man out of charity after he has offered the Fajr Prayer?

A: It is permissible for a person who has offered the Fajr Prayer in congregation and then sees a man who missed the congregation to offer Salah with him so that the latter may earn the reward of congregational Salah, and it is considered a Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) for the former, even if it is offered at a time when it is not permissible to offer supererogatory Salah. This is because it is a Salah offered for a reason. The more correct of the two opinions of scholars is that it is permissible during the times when supererogatory Salah is prohibited, based on the general meaning of the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him), “If you both already offered Salah at your places and then you came to a Masjid \(mosque\) where congregational Salah is held, pray with them too, for it will be a Nafilah for you.” (Related by Imam Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan [Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah]) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also told a man who entered the Masjid after the end of Salah, “Is there any man who may do charity to this \(man\) and offer Salah with him?” (Related by Abu Dawud)

Q: If I am standing in the first row in a large Masjid (mosque) in which there are about twenty rows of people offering Salah (Prayer) and it happens that I remember not being in a state of Wudu' (ablution), which definitely invalidates my Salah, what should I do in this case? Should I stop offering Salah and pass between all these rows, bearing in mind that the Masjid has no doors except in the northern side at the end of it?

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned and it is difficult for you to leave your place before the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) says the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), there is no harm if you remain in your place without following the Imam until the latter says the Taslim. When he finishes, you can then go for 'Wudu' and repeat your Salah.

Q 1: An Imam led people in Salah and after the end of Salah another group came to offer Salah. There was someone from the first group who was still offering Supererogatory Salah. When he finished Salah, he crossed through the second congregation; is this correct?

A: if people need to leave the Masjid (mosque) while other people are offering Salah, there is no harm in exiting from the middle of the row which blocks the way if there is no other path. If a person finds a path to the right or the left, he should exit from there in order not to disturb those who are offering Salah.

Q: I am a teacher in one of the institutes for teaching the memorization of the Noble Qur'an and a teacher at Al-Uthmaniyah Masjid, in Uhud District, Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah. There are two sessions for Qur'an memorization in this Masjid; one inside the Masjid and the other on the roof. My question is:

Is it permissible for the students attending the session on the roof to perform Salah on the roof following the Imam who leads the congregation inside the masjid? Note that the students are completely separated from the Imam and the congregation and cannot see the Imam or the congregation. Moreover, there is enough room for them inside the Masjid where they can perform Salah. I asked the Imam to advise the teacher to allow the students to perform Salah inside the Masjid. However, he argued that the students are still children and they disturb people inside the Masjid while running up and down stairs. However, it is evident that some of them are pubescent.

As such, should we advise him to discipline the students and have them perform Salah inside the Masjid, or should he keep the younger ones on the roof and send those that have reached puberty to join Salah in the Masjid? Should he have them pray inside the Masjid to be a good example encouraging them to perform Salah in the Masjid? Please, enlighten us. May Allah reward you!

A: Whoever attends the Masjid must join the congregational Salah behind the Imam filling the rows in succession and leaving no space. The reason you mentioned in the question is not a legal excuse for performing Salah on the Masjid roof. Rather, they should be disciplined and educated about the etiquette of being in the Masjid. Monitoring them until they do it well is strongly required.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18426

Q 2: I own a farm which is three kilometers away from town. Sometimes, I have to stay on the farm until after the Adhan (call to Prayer) and, thus, offer Salah (Prayer) at the farm. At other times when I am on my way home, I find the Masjid (mosque) of the town still announcing the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer). Will the Salah I offered on the farm be valid in this case or should I enter the Masjid and repeat the Salah in congregation since I caught up to it on my way? It is worth mentioning that the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) sometimes comes late to the Masjid and the Iqamah is announced by another person after waiting for the Imam's arrival.

A: If you have already offered Salah on your farm or on your way home and then you arrived at your town and found the people still offering Salah, you should not repeat the Salah unless you enter the Masjid while the Salah is being established. In this case, you should join the congregation and it will be a Nafilah (supererogatory) for you. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered a person who offered Salah on his way and then entered the Masjid while the Salah was being established, to join the congregation and that it would be a Nafilah for him.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 19446

Q 9: if the imam begins to recite the Qur'an before i finish saying Du`a'-ul-istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer), should I say it secretly or just stay quiet and listen to his recitation? What is the ruling if I am reciting an Ayah and the Imam bows down, should I bow down with him even if I did not complete the Ayah or should I finish it first?

A: When the Imam starts reciting, the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) must listen and should not say Du`a'-ul-Istiftah. When the Imam bows down, the Ma'mum must follow him even if he has not completed Al-Fatihah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The Imam is appointed so that he should be followed, so do not be at variance with him. Recite Takbir when he recites it; bow down when he bows down...\) The authenticity of this Hadith is unanimously agreed upon.

Q 1: My wife and I were traveling by way of Tariq Al-Sahil Al-Layth. When it was time for Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, I stopped my car by the side of the road, made the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), and started to pray behind my car. As I was reciting Al-Fatihah, a car load of people - I do not know how many passengers there were - stopped behind me. Though I heard such passengers making Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) to pray as Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) behind me, Satan whispered to me that dangers are widespread nowadays so I interrupted the Salah (Prayer), got quickly into my car and drove away, and left these people standing. I did so because I feared that such people might inflict any harm on my wife and myself. Could you please tell me what is the ruling on the foregoing?

A: You are mistaken for interrupting the Salah because of the Waswasah (insinuating or obsessive thoughts instigated by Satan) you had. This caused you to think bad of people who thought good of you and aligned themselves behind you to be led by you in Salah. You should have thought well of your Muslim brothers and completed the Salah you started. Such people acted correctly when they joined the Salah with you taking you as their Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), so that you all could receive the reward for congregational Salah. Now, you have to make Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for this and make up for the concerned Salah, if you have not already done so.

Q 1: A person entered the Masjid (mosque) to offer Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and found a congregation offering Salah (Prayer). After finishing Salah, he found that they were offering `Isha' Prayer combined with Maghrib Prayer in advance. Is his Salah valid taking into account that he offered four Rak`ahs? Or should he sit for the last Tashahud after the Imam stands for the fourth Rak`ah and wait for him to end Salah?

A: It is obligatory upon a person who offers Maghrib Prayer behind an Imam who is offering `Isha' Prayer to wait for him in the third Rak`ah until he offers the fourth Rak`ah and ends Salah. He may also intend to separate from him in the third Rak`ah by sitting, making Tashahud and ending Salah. If he completes four Rak`ahs with the Imam forgetfully and did not change his intention to `Isha' Prayer, his Salah will be valid but he should offer Sujud Al-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness) if he knew this before or after Salam (Final salutation of ending Salah) before the passage of a long time.

Q 2: What is the ruling on a person who entered the Masjid to offer Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and found a congregation offering Salah? He joined them and afterwards, he realized that he caught up with the Imam in the second Rak`ah of `Isha' (Night) Prayer. By doing this, he offered one Rak`ah then sat for the first Tashahud then offered two Rak`ahs with the Imam; is his Salah of Maghrib valid? Is it permissible for him to offer `Isha' Prayer individually because the people at the Masjid (mosque) had already offered `Isha' Prayer combined with Maghrib?

A: When a latecomer offers Maghrib Prayer behind an Imam who is offering `Isha' Prayer, his Salah is valid and it is permissible for him to offer `Isha' afterwards because this excuse is made for him as well as the people of the Masjid.

Q 3: When a person enters a Masjid and finds a congregation offering Salat-ul-Tarawih (Voluntary night Salah performed in Ramadan) and he had not performed `Isha' (Night) Prayer, can he join them with the intention of offering `Isha' and then complete the remaining two Rak`ahs?

A: It is permissible to offer `Isha' Prayer behind an Imam who is offering Salat-ul-Tarawih. When the Imam ends his Salah, the latecomer has to complete `Isha' Prayer. It was reported on the authority of Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) that he used to offer `Isha' Prayer with the Prophet (peace be upon him) then go back to his people to lead them in that Salah, as it is supererogatory for him and obligatory for them. The Prophet (peace be upon him) approved of his action. The Prophet (peace be upon him) offered other types of Salah in which he led a group of people in two Rak`ahs and led another group in another two Rak`ahs which was supererogatory for him and obligatory for them.

Q: The Imam (leader of congregational Prayer) made Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation) but the people offering Salah behind him did not pay attention to that. Then some of them made Ruku' (bowing) without following the Imam in Sujud-ul-Tilawah and did not know until the Imam rose from the prostration pose, thus they added a Ruku' to Salah. What is the ruling on that?

A: If the reality is as mentioned, the wrongly-made Ruku' of some people offering Salah behind the Imam, when the Imam made Sujud-ul-Tilawah, is insignificant; they have to follow their Imam. So, if they can follow him in Sujud-ul-Tilawah, they should do so. Otherwise, they should follow him in standing then Ruku', and their Salah is valid.

Q 1: When the Imam says "Allahu Akbar" (Allah is the Greatest) some people say "'Azza wa Jall" (may He be exalted) then say takbir (saying, "Allahu Akbar" [Allah is the Greatest])" for commencing Salah (Prayer). Is this permissible?

A: The Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) should say Takbir after the Imam when he says Takbir. This was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them). It is not permitted for a person who is offering Salah behind an Imam to say that before saying Takbir since the Companions and Salaf (righteous predecessors) of the Muslim Ummah did not do so.

Q 2: What is the ruling on delaying offering 'Isha' (Night) Prayer for a group who are constantly together? Is it preferable to delay it or not?

A: Muslims should offer prayer in congregation in Masjids (mosques). If the Imam delays Salah for a legal benefit provided that the time of the Salah does not expire, the follower of the Imam is to wait for the Imam to offer Salah with him.

Women's Salah

Q 1: Please clarify how a Muslim woman should perform Salah? Is there any difference in the manner of offering Salah between men and women?

A: There is no difference in the manner of offering Salah between men and women. However, a woman should cover all her body except for her face, unless in the presence of non-Mahram (not a spouse or an unmarriageable relative). The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿"Pray as you have seen me praying."﴾ This includes men and women. Q: What is the ruling on a woman offering Salah (Prayer) without fully covering her body?

A: All a woman's body is 'Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public), except for her face during Salah, if she is not seen by non-Mahrams (not a spouse or unmarriageable relatives). Otherwise she has to cover her face as well. This is according to the authentically reported Hadith from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 249)

﴿A woman is 'Awrah (i.e. that which should be covered)...﴾ (Related by Al-Tirmidhy) It is also authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: ﴿Allah does not accept the Salah of a menstruant (i.e., an adult woman) unless (she covers her head) with a head-cover.﴾ (Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, and Ibn Majah) Consequently, a woman's Salah without covering herself in the mentioned manner is not valid.

The third question of Fatwa no. 19413

Q 3: If part of a woman's clothing falls onto the spot where she prostrates, should she remove it or prostrate over it? It is worth mentioning that a woman wears a loose garment during Salah (Prayer) that covers her whole body from head to feet. It is, thus, very likely for part of the clothing to fall when she goes down for prostration. Is there anything wrong with this, especially that she prefers to prostrate over it if she is offering Salah on coarse floor, for example?

A: if part of a woman's clothing falls onto the spot where she prostrates and she prostrates over it, there is nothing wrong with this on the condition that nothing of her body is revealed.

Q 3: My mother sometimes offers Salah (Prayer) in my room, but part of her foot might be revealed, and sometimes also part of her hair is showing. What is the ruling on her Salah? Is it valid? May Allah reward you with Jannah (Paradise).

A: One of the conditions of the validity of Salah is covering the 'Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public). All of the woman's body is 'Awrah during Salah, except her face if there are no non-Mahrams (not a spouse or an unmarriageable relative) present. If a woman offers Salah while part of her hair or her foot is revealed, her Salah is not valid, as its conditions are not met.

A: What you do in your Salah in the presence of non-Mahrams,

(Part No. 6; Page No. 251)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 252)

Is it permissible for us to offer Salah (Prayer) being led by one of us in the Jahri Salah (prayer recited aloud) and say "Ameen" after her? It should be taken into consideration that we are not heard by men. Please, give us the answer substantiated by Qur'anic Ayahs, Hadiths and the sayings of Muslim scholars as much as possible.

A: It is permissible for women to offer Salah (Prayer) in congregation while the female Imam stands amidst them. Moreover, there is no harm if she recites the Qur'an in Jahri Salah loudly as long as she is not heard by men. The Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered Um Waraqah to lead her household. Fatwa no. 20450

Q: We would like to know your opinion on the issue of offering congregational Salah (Prayer) at a school for girls. Salah in this school presents a problem because of the small area of the school, for it is a small rented house in which there are no empty rooms suitable for offering Salah. We have dedicated a very small room that does not suffice the 300 students. It is worth mentioning that this room is next to the bathrooms and sometimes cockroaches and other insects creep into it. That is why congregational Salah is offered in the small school yard on mats. However, this open yard is exposed to scorching weather during the summer and extremely cold weather during the winter, which may also be accompanied by rainfall and this definitely impedes the performance of Salah. Moreover, there are not enough bathrooms that suffice the Wudu' (ablution) of this large number of students; there are only five toilets and four basins. Consequently, the bathroom is crowded at the time of Wudu' and the students face much difficulty when taking off their shoes and socks; this leads to the spread of a very bad smell during Wudu' and Salah. Since there are strict rules concerning this matter, some students may offer Salah without performing Wudu' or without completing their Wudu', although the instructors are keen on observing the students. Moreover, some students are neglectful when offering Salah, either in their clothing or by speaking during Salah. As a result, the instructors may utter general remarks to direct the attention of the neglectful students. However, this causes the other students to lose their Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) in Salah because of trying to listen to the instructions given and understand them. We believe that such instructions cannot be delayed until after finishing Salah, because of their importance. Also, we cannot address each student individually because of their large numbers.

Accordingly, we believe that the school is not suitable to offer congregational Salah therein. We fear that we might be sinful because of the way and circumstances in which Salah is offered at school.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 255)

Your Eminence, is it permissible for the students to offer Salah in their houses, for this will bring good and blessings to us all? Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is permissible for a student who is unable to offer Salah at school to offer it at her home when she leaves the school on the condition of not delaying the Salah past its due time. This is because offering congregational Salah is not obligatory for women. However, you should look for a building that is spacious enough to accommodate all the students and enable them to offer Salah at its due time without difficulty. It would be better if they offer Salah in several places at school or in one place but in shifts. As for the instructions given to students during Salah, this does not affect the Salah of the students but the voice must not be loud so that it would not distract the students offering Salah.

Q: What is the ruling on the woman who cannot offer Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer in the Masjid (mosque)? Should she offer it at home as two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) or four Rak'ahs?

A: It is better for a woman to offer Salah in her house. This is according to the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him): “...yet their houses are better for them.” because a woman is a source of Fitnah (temptation) and her going out exposes her to Fitnah, but if she goes to the Masjid to offer Congregational Salah behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), her Salah will be valid and it will suffice instead of offering Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 256)

If a woman offers Zhuhr at home, she has to offer a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) and not Jumu'ah Prayer. Otherwise, it will not be sufficient for her instead of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer.

Q 1: is it permissible for a woman to stand beside her husband during Salah (Prayer) and not behind him?

A: It is not permissible for a woman to stand beside her husband during Salah; rather, she should stand behind him. This is supported by the following Hadith, which was related by Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith on the authority of Anas who reported: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) led him and his mother or his aunt in Salah and he made him stand on his right side and made the woman stand behind them.\) If it is permissible for women to stand beside men during Salah, the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) would have made the woman stand behind him and made Anas stand beside her, but he did not and this indicated the reprehensibility of this.

Q: The Muslim community in New Zealand, in its capital Wellington, is about to begin a project for the construction of the Masjid of Wellington, the capital city of New Zealand. The Masjid will accommodate up to 955 people. Among the questions raised during the last discussion to sign the first stage of the project is: Is it possible to have men perform Salah on the entire ground floor of the Masjid, and reserve the second floor for women to perform Salah? Some said that Salah on the second floor is dangerous for the kids and that this act goes against the Sunnah. They are of the view that women should stand behind the children on the same floor where men are present. They had a problem with performing Salah while women are above them standing over their heads in the same Masjid. It should be noted that we are able to build the Masjid as one floor allocating the back area for women.

Please give us your recommendations based on the Sunnah, so that we may act accordingly.

A: The manner which complies with the Sunnah is that the Masjid be established on the ground level where everyone, males and females, can perform Salah, such that the women pray behind the men. It is better and more convenient for all.

Q: We have a Masjid Jami' (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) in our district in which Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers are offered. Some women attend Jumu`ah Prayer with us as well as Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan). We have established a special place for them inside the Masjid (Mosque) which is separated with a wooden barrier, so as to prevent free intermixing (of men and women) and to block all avenues of evil. Furthermore, the Masjid has attached microphones which allow them to listen clearly to the Khutbah (sermon) of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer).

However, the Khatib (preacher) of the Masjid said that it is impermissible to establish such a barrier inside the Masjid which would prevent women from seeing the Imam; otherwise, it should be transparent for the previous purpose (seeing the Imam). Please advise in this regard.

A: There is no harm in using a barrier to separate men from women in the Masjid, as the necessity may demand so. Moreover, it is not a must that women should see the Imam or those being led by the Imam in Prayer as long as they are inside the Masjid and can clearly listen to the Imam's voice. But the barrier should have holes through which they can see those praying to imitate them while offering Salah (Prayer) in case the microphone was down.

Q 2: All praise be to Allah Alone; many Masjids (mosques) have spread recently especially by highways and public places. These Masjids are built in a way that separates women's Musallas (praying places) from the main parts of the concerned Masjids. Some of these women's Musallas are even built in the courtyard of the Masjids to the extent that female worshipers cannot see the end of the men's rows. Moreover, women may not hear the Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") said by the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) unless speakers are used. Is it thus, permissible for women to pray in such Musallas? Is it better for them to pray in such rooms with the congregation or to pray alone? May Allah reward you with the best for the help you provide us with.

A: If the Musalla allocated for women is located inside the rail of the Masjid, it will be permissible for female worshipers to follow the Imam in Salah just by hearing his voice, whether the women hear the Imam directly or through speakers, and whether they can see the Imam or not.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 18157

Q: A benevolent person built a Masjid (mosque) under my supervision. The Masjid was built as follows:

- 1- The front part of the Masjid is roofed and it is fifteen meters in length and twenty meters across.
- 2- The courtyard of the Masjid is just behind its front part and it is twenty meters in length and ten meters across.
- 3- The women's Musalla (praying place) is just behind the courtyard of the Masjid and it is thirteen meters in length and five meters across. In addition, there is a women's toilet which is located to the corner of the Masjid and adjacent to the women's Musalla. The Musalla has a special entryway. All the foregoing is surrounded by the external fence of the Masjid.

It may be worth mentioning that the men's toilet is detached and located outside the Masjid. My question is whether it is permissible for women to pray in their Musalla referred to above, even though there is a separative area between it and the front part of the Masjid where the men pray? It may also be worth mentioning that this separative area is the courtyard of the Masjid which is located inside the latter's rail and which is used sometimes as a place for performing Salah during the summer or on Fridays because of the large number of worshipers. Please provide us with your beneficial answer as the Masjid in question is now in the finishing phase.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 261)

A: It is permissible for women to pray in the Musalla allocated for them even if a large area separates them and the men's rows provided that their Musalla is situated inside the Masjid and that the women can hear the Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]"). It is worth mentioning that performing Salah in the concerned room is more protective for women and blocks the means to free intermixing (of men and women).

Q 7: if the Mu'adhin (caller to prayer) pronounces Adhan (call to prayer) in the Masjid (mosque), can we, as women, offer Salah (prayer) at home immediately after he finishes the Adhan or should we wait until he performs iqamah (call to start prayer)?

A: It is permissible for women at home to offer Salah immediately after the Adhan is finished as long as the time of Salah has become due. They should not wait until the Iqamah is pronounced in the Masjid.

Q 4: We are a group of women, and by Allah's Grace, I have memorized some Surahs of the Qur'an. Is it permissible for me to lead a group of women in Salah, as I have read that this is impermissible?

A: It is permissible for a woman to lead other women in Congregational Prayer. However, this should be done without pronouncing the Adhan (call for Prayer) or Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) as this is reserved for men. A female Imam should stand in the middle of the first row.

Q: I am a university girl student. The time of Salah (Prayer) comes while I am at the university. If I am the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), girls that offer Salah with me might be wearing revealing or tight clothes, and they stand in unorganized rows where they leave spaces between their feet.

First, based on this, is it better to lead them in Salah or offer Salah alone?

Second, the Adhan (call to Prayer) is not announced in the place where we offer Salah in the faculty, nor are the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers or the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer offered there. It is not affiliated to the Musalla (praying place) of men. Can we call it a Masjid (mosque)?

Third, can we offer two congregations at the same time?

A: It is permissible for women to offer congregational Salah and one of them may stand in the middle of the first row to lead them in Salah.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 263)

They should organize the rows exactly like men. They have to arrange themselves in compact rows and fill in the gaps exactly like the rows of men. They do not have to announce the Adhan or the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer). It is permissible to establish a second congregation if the place is narrow or some of the people miss the congregational Salah. It is known that a woman should cover all her body in Salah, except her face if there are no Ajanib (men lawful for the woman to marry) present. If there are Ajanib, she should cover her face.

You should advise them concerning their negligence and violations of the Islamic dress code, and you will be greatly rewarded for this, as says the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him), “One who guides to something good has a reward similar to that of its doer.” Enjoining good and forbidding evil is a duty, for Allah (Exalted be He) says, “The believers, men and women, are Auliya' \(helpers, supporters, friends, protectors\) of one another; they enjoin \(on the people\) Al-Ma'rûf \(i.e. Islâmic Monotheism and all that Islâm orders one to do\), and forbid \(people\) from Al-Munkar \(i.e. polytheism and disbelief of all kinds, and all that Islâm has forbidden\)” May Allah guide you, grant you more knowledge and make you beneficial to Muslims.

Q 6: Does the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), \(The best rows for men are the first rows, and the worst ones are the last ones, and the best rows for women are the last ones and the worst ones for them are the first ones.) mean that women should start their rows from the end of the Masjid (mosque) and when the first row becomes complete the following one starts in front of it and they continue in this way?

A: The meaning of the Hadith is that if women are offering Salah (Prayer) in lines behind men, the best line is the last one for it is more veiled from men. However, if women are already veiled, such as being in a separate place, the first row for them is, like men, the best one owing to the absence of the prohibiting cause.

Fatwa no. 19836

Q: I work as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) at the `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Masjid in Al-Khafjy city, in the Eastern Region. The Masjid has been expanded due to the increasing number of worshippers and to serve the needs of the area. However, there is an abundance of problems and objections to some issues. We, therefore, ask your opinion on the problematic issue pertaining to constructing a Musalla for women. This Musalla is detached from the internal building of the Masjid, yet lies within the Masjid wall. Some said that the Musalla building must be connected to the internal building of the Masjid.

If we do so, we will incur a higher cost. Another problem is that during Ramadan some people want to include the women's Musalla where they perform Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) inside the internal building of the Masjid. Some insist that it should be performed in the separate Musalla assigned for women, mentioned above. Kindly, find attached a copy of a handwritten sketch which illustrates the internal building of the Masjid and the site of the actual women's Musalla on the first page and the suggested replacement on the second page. We hope that you will enlighten us, may Allah reward you! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, all his family and Companions!

A: There is nothing wrong if the women's Musalla is built within the boundaries of the Masjid. In this case it is not necessary for women to see the Imam or a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer). Hearing the Imam's voice over the microphones is enough for them to follow the Imam.

Q: In recent years, benevolent people have begun building Musallas (places for Prayer) annexed to the Masjids (Mosques) and surrounded by one fence. Sometimes they are three or four meters away from the Masjids. People offer all the Salahs in these Musallas except for Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer as the number of people who attend the Jumu`ah Prayer is greater. In these Musallas, women offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan), Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, and `Isha' (Night) Prayer and attend lectures. They listen to the sheikhs over the loudspeakers. is it permissible for women to offer congregational Salah in these Musallas, even though the imam is in the Masjid and the women can only hear him over loudspeakers, but cannot see him or any of those praying behind him? We would appreciate your answer, may Allah guide you!

A: The Salah of women behind the Imam is valid, if the Musalla is inside the Masjid and they can hear his voice when he pronounces Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) even if they cannot see him or the followers. However, if the Musalla is not inside or is separated from the Masjid by a passageway or the like, it is not permissible for them to follow the Imam.

Q: I live in a villa adjacent to the Masjid (mosque) from its southern direction.

i prepared the attached courtyard of the villa to offer the obligatory Salah as well as Salat-ul-Tarawih (Voluntary night Salah performed in Ramadan) there. i and the women who visit me follow the imam of the Masjid where we hear his voice through the loudspeakers. We also installed a special loudspeaker for the house attached by a wire. Sometimes, I offer Salah individually inside the villa led by the Imam whose voice I hear over the loudspeakers.

My question is: Is offering Salah individually after the Imam permissible whether inside the villa or in the courtyard attached to the Masjid? Some people have caused me to doubt this; could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you!

A: Your Salah behind the Imam in the manner which you described is invalid, unless you are able to see the Imam or at least the followers. Your Musalla (praying place) is away from the Masjid, so it is not permissible to follow him except if the conditions we mentioned exist.

Q: Is it permissible for women, in the congregational and Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, to follow the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) by hearing his voice from microphones without either seeing him or the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer)? If so, does it apply to the two following situations?

The first situation is where the women perform Salah in the smaller Masjid which has recently been attached to the larger one. The two Masjids are separated by a house, and the larger one is allocated for men.

The second situation is where the women perform Salah in a hall in the back area of the Masjid. This hall is separated from the men's hall by rooms and other halls of the Masjid.

A: Regarding the first situation, it is impermissible, due to the house which separates the women from the Masjid, for them to follow the Imam who leads people in the said Masjid.

As for the second situation, it is permissible for women to follow the Imam if they are able to hear his voice. The things separating them from the Imam have no effect because they are part of the Masjid.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17332

Q 3: Who is the most entitled to be an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer)?

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The one who is most versed in Allah's Book should act as an Imam for the people, but if they are equally versed in reciting it, then the one who is the most knowledgeable in Sunnah...\) .

The first question in Fatwa no. 21367

Q 1: What is your opinion regarding a group of inhabitants of the desert who gather to offer the Tarawih prayers (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) behind an illiterate Imam, whereas there are people among them who hold educational certificates but they do not allow them to lead them in Salah (prayer)? They are neighbors and their number ranges from five to ten people. Also, they perform Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain) in the desert behind this illiterate Imam. What is the ruling on this? May Allah reward you with the best!

(Part No. 6; Page No. 272)

A: According to the Sunnah, a well versed person in the Qur'an and one who knows the Fiqh of Salah (Prayer) is to be the Imam in Salah whether he can read and write or not. If there is no reciter or knowledgeable person, the best of the people present, in his Iman (Faith), is to lead the Salah. If all the attendants are at the same level of illiteracy, it is permissible for any of them to lead them in Salah. Fatwa no. 17348

Q: The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said in a long Hadith: “The most versed in reciting the Book of Allah should lead the people in Salah.” What is the ruling then if a regular imam leads the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer and congregational Salah (Prayer) in the presence of someone who is more versed in the Holy Qur'an than him? Is such a person, who is more versed in the Qur'an, to be asked to act as an Imam; and this should be the followed rule: whenever we find one more versed in reciting the Book of Allah he should be made the Imam? What is the criterion regulating this issue?

A: If the Imam is appointed by an official authority or he is chosen by the majority people of the Masjid to act as such and he is able to lead the Salah according to the Shar'y (Islamic legal) way, it is impermissible that another should contend for the Imamate (leading people in Salah) with him, even if they are more knowledgeable than the appointed Imam. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said at the end of the Hadith quoted above: “A man should not lead another in Salah while in his (the latter's) place of authority.”

(Part No. 6; Page No. 273)

As the regular Imam is the one who has authority, he should lead the Salah to fulfill his official duty, even in the presence of one more versed in reciting the Qur'an, to block the means to anarchy and disagreement. Only if this Imam permits another qualified person to act as an Imam, will it be permissible for the person concerned to do so. Finally, you have to be keen to understand the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) with neither excessiveness nor negligence and consult reliable scholars before proceeding with anything of which you do not have enough knowledge.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18772

Q2: In our country there are some employees especially appointed to make the call to Prayer; they sometimes lead people in Salah (Prayer) when the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is not in the Masjid but they do not learn the Holy Qur'an by heart well. Most ordinary people who pray behind them know the Qur'an by heart. When any of those ordinary people proceed to lead people in Salah, they go against them and say they are the ones appointed for leading people in Salah in the Masjid and it is the government that had appointed them to lead people in Salah. What is the ruling on an Imam who leads people in Salah while they do not want him to?

A: If the mentioned people do not make Lahn (incorrect recitation due to mispronunciation of letters or grammatical mistakes) when reciting the Qur'an in a way that changes the meaning and are appointed by the Muslim rulers, and if when other people proceed to lead people in Salah this will cause division among the people offering Salah, there is nothing wrong in offering Salah behind them, even if other people are better in the recitation of the Qur'an than them. This is so in order to prevent division and achieve unity.

Q 2: Is it permissible to lead people in Salah (Prayer) without mastering Tajwid (the art of properly reciting the Qur'an), although I have memorized the whole Qur'an?

A: If there is another person who has better knowledge of the rules of Shari'ah (Islamic law) and is more well-versed in the Qur'an, he is more entitled to the Imamah (leadership of congregational Salah) than you. If there is no other person, you may lead them in Salah; but you have to exert your efforts in learning the rules of Salah as well as religion in general through the available means in order to benefit yourself, your family and your neighbors. (Part No. 6; Page No. 275)

A: the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), (The one who is most versed in Allah's Book should lead the people in Salah) refers to the person who recites the Qur'an best, pronounces Tartil (slow recitation of the Qur'an) best, and also to the one who memorizes the Qur'an best. The person who recites the Qur'an best, pronounces Tartil best and memorizes the Qur'an best is the one who deserves to be an Imam (the one who leads people in congregational Prayer), especially if he is knowledgeable about Salah.

Q 1: I am an eighteen-year-old young man. Sometimes, people choose me to lead them in congregational Salah (Prayer), as I have a good voice in recitation. I heard that one of the minor signs of the Last Hour is choosing a man as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) for his melodious voice in recitation, even if he is the least of them in knowledge of Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence). I have studied some of the rulings of Tajwid (art of properly reciting the Qur'an), and I am more knowledgeable about the Qur'an than anyone else in the Masjid (mosque). When this situation occurred to me more than once, I intended to come late after the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), so that someone else would lead the people in Salah. Thus, I miss the Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah and some Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of the congregational Salah. Am I considered a sinner? Please advise.

A: If you are the most well-versed in Qur'an, it is an honorable act to lead the people in congregational Salah; it corresponds to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet); and you will be rewarded for it. So, you should not refrain from it and deprive yourself from the reward, and you should not come late for the reason you mentioned.

Q: There is a young man who is Multazim (practicing Muslim) - we suppose him to be so and Allah will hold him to account. he says that the Salah (Prayer) of an Imam (leader of congregational Prayer) who receives a salary from the government is considered to be invalid and it is not correct to perform Salah behind him. This young man says that he performs Salah at home, acting upon what Imam Ahmad (may Allah be merciful to him) and Al-Shafi'y said about Salah in congregation being Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). I hope that you will help to clear up this doubt through a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar). And may Allah reward you!

A: There is nothing wrong in an Imam receiving a salary from Bayt-ul-Mal (the Muslim treasury), because this is one of the Shar'y (Islamically lawful) spending channels serving the Muslims' interests. The person who declares it to be Makruh (reprehensible) to perform Salah behind him does not have a legitimate Islamic evidence for this claim. It is not permissible to abandon congregational Salah under the pretext that some scholars regard congregational Salah as Sunnah; because this is a less correct view and the authentic evidence indicates otherwise. One such evidence is the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): "Anyone who hears the Call \(the Adhan\) and does not respond, there is no Salah for him, unless he has a lawful excuse." (Related by Ibn Majah and Al-Daraqutny with an authentic Isnad [chain of narrators]) Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) was asked, "What is a lawful excuse?" He said, "Fear or illness." Muslim also related in his "Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith)" on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him): "A blind man came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said, 'O Messenger of Allah! I have no one to guide me to the Masjid,' and he asked the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) to give him a Rukhsah \(concession\) allowing him to pray in his home and he allowed him that, then when he turned away he \(peace be upon him\) called him back and said, 'Can you hear the Call to Salah?' He said, 'Yes.' He \(peace be upon him\) said, 'Then respond \(to it\).'" There are many other Hadith to the same effect.

Q 4: An Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque) leads people in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, the Two `Eid Prayers and other Salahs (prayers). the Masjid he is in charge of lies in the desert, and people do not gather in this Masjid except to offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. Is there any sin on this Imam if he does not offer the obligatory Salah (Prayer) with them on the other days? It is worth mentioning that the Imam offers the obligatory prayers in a Masjid near his house, and there are about ten people who are neighbors of that Masjid but they do not offer Salah; how should they be treated?

A: The regular Imam should lead the people during all the Salahs in the Masjid that he is in charge of, regardless of the number of the people offering Salah behind him, even if it is very small. Moreover, he is sinful if he does not attend the obligatory Salah in his Masjid. The Imam should command people to offer Salah in the Masjid and warn them against abandoning this. Those people might have wrongly understood that he abandons offering Salah in the Masjid so they imitated him.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18818

Q 2: People say that when the regular Imam falls sick or travels abroad, it is not permissible for anyone to lead people in Salah without his permission, even if there is a scholar or someone who can lead people in Salah correctly. Once, the regular Imam did not arrive to perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and someone, who graduated from a religious school, wanted to lead people in Salah, but some people prevented him from doing so and said: It is not permissible for anyone to lead people in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer until the regular Imam gives him permission. When the regular Imam was asked about this, he kept silent and did not answer. So people offered Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer individually. The number of those who offered Salah was numerous; is this permissible?

A: it is not permissible to lead people in Salah in a Masjid that has a regular imam except with his permission or in a case of necessity. If he is late, there is no harm to advance someone who is entitled to Imamah to lead people in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 279)

When the Prophet (peace be upon him) was late, Abu Bakr led the people in Salah. Also, [When the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was late in Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer in the Battle of Tabuk, `Abdul-Rahman ibn `Awf \(may Allah be pleased with him\) led people in Salah. When the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) arrived, he found that `Abdul-Rahman had led them in the first Rak`ah. He \(`Abdul-Rahman\) wanted to step back but the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) pointed to him to complete his Salah. The first question of Fatwa no. 17572

Q 1: What are the matters which the Imam takes responsibility for on behalf of the ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Salah)?

A: Scholars mentioned that an Imam takes the responsibility of the following on behalf of the Ma'mums:

1. The recitation: for Allah says, ﴿So, when the Qur'ân is recited, listen to it, and be silent that you may receive mercy. [i.e. during the compulsory congregational prayers when the Imâm (of a mosque) is leading the prayer (except Sûrat Al-Fâtihah), and also when he is delivering the Friday-prayer Khutbah]. (Tafsir At-Tabari).﴾ Imam Ahmad (may

Allah have mercy on him) said, "Scholars unanimously agreed that this Ayah was revealed concerning recitation in Salah." The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said, ﴿Whoever is praying behind an Imam, the recitation of the Imam is enough for him.﴾ (Related by Imam Ahmad in the book called, "Al-Masa'il" which contains reports that were narrated by his son `Abdullah). It is Wajib (obligatory) upon the Ma'mum to recite Surah Al-Fatihah in Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation) and when the Imam pauses in Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud). According to the Hadith Sahih and in order to reconcile the scholars' differences over this issue, if the Imam does not pause, the Ma'mum must recite Surah Al-Fatihah and then listen to him.

2. Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness): According to the majority of scholars, when the Ma'mum is offering Salah behind the Imam from the beginning. When being led by the Prophet (peace be upon him), sometimes the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) used to be distracted, but they did not perform Sujud-ul-Sahw which they would have had to offer had they been praying individually. It was not transmitted that anyone of them offered Sujud-ul-Sahw after the Prophet (peace be upon him) pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). If this were permissible, they would have done so and it would have been transmitted.

3. Sujud-ul-Tilawah (Prostration of Recitation): If the Imam does not perform Sujud-ul-Tilawah when reciting an Ayah, the Ma'mum should not do so. This is because if the Ma'mum performs Sujud-ul-Tilawah, he would be contradicting the Imam and therefore, his Salah becomes invalid.

4. Sutrah (barrier placed in front of a person praying): The Sutrah which is placed in front of the Imam is the Sutrah for those who are praying behind him. The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to lead the Sahabah in Salah while placing a Sutrah in front of him, but he did not order them to place a Sutrah in front of them. This is recorded in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Al-Bukhari (may Allah have mercy on him) has a chapter in his "Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith)" dedicated to "Sutrat-ul-Imam Sutrah li man khalfahu (the Sutrah of the Imam is enough for those who are behind him)."

5. Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer):

When the Imam says Du`a' Al-Qunut, the Ma'mum should say, "Amen" only.

6. The first part of the Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second unit of Prayer): This is in case the Imam precedes the Ma'mum with a Rak`ah (unit of prayer) in a four-Rak`ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units).

7. Saying, "Sami`a Allahu liman hamidah [Allah listens to him who praises Him]": For the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, [﴿When he \(the Imam\) says, "Sami`a Allahu liman hamidah", you should say, "Allahumma Rabbana wa laka Al-Hamd \[Our Lord! All praise is due to You Alone\]", so that Allah listens to you.﴾](#) (Related by Muslim on the authority of Abu Musa Al-Ash`ari (may Allah be pleased with him). In addition, there are other Hadith to the same effect.

Q: Is it permissible for a lisper who pronounces the Arabic letter "س" (Sin) as "ث" (Tha) to lead the people in congregational Salah (Prayer), especially when he reads "النفس" (Al-Nafs) as "النفث" (Al-Nafth)?

A: It is not permissible for someone who has a lisp and does not recite Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) properly to lead others in congregational Salah, unless they also have a lisp. This is because he cannot recite Al-Fatihah correctly, which is one of the pillars of Salah. However, if he can recite Al-Fatihah properly, there is no objection to appointing him as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer).

However, it is better to appoint someone else who can recite the Qur'an properly.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18912

Q 2: I was once late for the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, and I arrived after the 'Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), even though I am the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of the Masjid (mosque). I found that the Imam who led the people cannot recite Al-Fatihah, and the Qur'an in general, properly, so I did not offer Salah (Prayer) behind him. Another time, I offered Salah behind an Imam who cannot recite the Qur'an properly, so I was going to interrupt the Salah and continue it on my own. What is the ruling on both cases? Please advise.

A: If the Imam whom you offered Salah behind committed Lahn (incorrect recitation due to mispronunciation of letters or grammatical mistakes) when reciting Al-Fatihah in a way that distorts the meaning, such as changing the diacritical marks of the words, by pronouncing, for example, the letter "ك" (Kaf) in the word (إِيَّاكَ) with the sound Kasrah (vowel point that sounds like "i") or the letter "ت" (Ta) in (أَنْعَمْتَ عَلَيْهِمْ) with the sound Dammah (vowel point that sounds like "u") or Kasrah, it is impermissible for him to be an Imam, unless the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) pronounce the same way as him, and only those like him may offer Salah behind him. Even if the Lahn he committed does not change the meaning, he should not be made the Imam if there is someone who can recite better than him, but the Salah offered led by him counts as sufficient in this case.

The third question of Fatwa no. 21368

Q 3: Some Imams (the leaders of people in congregational Prayer) and also the people who offer Salah (Prayer) behind them cannot recite Al-Fatihah properly. They might read "Iyyak Na`bud" instead of "Iyyaka Na`budu", "Ahdina Al-Sirat Al-Mustaqim" instead of "Ihdina Al-Sirat Al-Mustaqim", "An`amtu `Alayhim" instead of "An`amta `Alayhim", and such examples that change the meaning. We would like to inquire about the ruling on the Salah of those Imams and the people behind them, especially if there is another Imam who can recite Al-Fatihah properly.

A: It is impermissible for a person who recites Al-fatihah improperly in a way that distorts the meaning to be an Imam, as reciting Al-Fatihah properly is one of the pillars of Salah.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20181

Q 2: A Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) prayed behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who made a slight Lahn (incorrect recitation due to mispronunciation of letters or grammatical mistakes) that did not change the meaning of the ayah while he was reciting al-Fatihah. Nevertheless, when the Ma'mum heard the Lahn committed by the Imam he interrupted his Salah (Prayer) and went to pray in another Masjid (mosque).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 284)

What is the ruling on the foregoing?

A: If the reality is as mentioned in the question, that the committed Lahn does not change the meaning, this does not invalidate the Salah and it is impermissible for the Ma'mum to interrupt his Salah because of it. What this brother did is impermissible.

The second question of Fatwa no. 21569

Q 2: is it permissible for the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) to entrust a young boy to lead the people in Salah (Prayer), even if this young boy memorizes part of the Qur'an?

A: If anything prevents the regular Imam from going to his Masjid (mosque) and leading the Salah, he is required to deputize a person who is qualified for being an Imam in terms of recitation of the Qur'an and knowledge of Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence), even if this person is younger or older than the regular Imam. This is because the criterion in this case is correct recitation and knowledge of the rulings of Tajwid (art of Qur'anic recitation) and Salah.

Q 7: What is the ruling on letting an 11 year-old-child be the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) if they have memorized more Surahs (chapters of the Qur'an) than the others?

A: There is nothing wrong in discerning children being the imam if among those who are present with them they are the ones who can best recite the Qur'an or memorize more of the Qur'an, according to the report related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith) on the authority of 'Amr ibn Salamah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "When the time for Salah becomes due, one of you should pronounce the Adhan \(call for Prayer\), and the one who has \(memorizes\) more of the Qur'an should lead you in Salah." ('Amr ibn Salamah said), "So they looked and did not find anyone who memorizes more of the Qur'an than I. Q: What is the ruling on offering Salah behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who makes amulets and another one who supplicates to the pious believing that they can bring benefit and ward off harm?

A: It is permissible to perform Salah behind the Imam who makes amulets containing Ayahs of the Qur'an, supplications, Allah's Names and Attributes, etc.

However, it is impermissible, according to the preponderant view, to write such amulets containing such things because of the general Hadith that prohibit wearing them. They are prohibited as a precautionary measure to block the means leading to Shirk (associating others in worship with Allah) and because they may be desecrated when wearing them on entering the bathroom. Consequently, when a better Imam who does not write these amulets is available, you are recommended to offer Salah behind him. If this Imam writes the amulets containing things other than the Qur'an and Allah's Names and Attributes, it is impermissible to offer Salah behind him. Wearing these amulets containing unlawful things involves minor, or perhaps major Shirk (associating others in worship with Allah) depending on the writer's intention based on the general Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated, «\(Unlawful\) Ruqyahs, charms and love-potions are \(acts of\) Shirk.» (Related by Imam Ahmad in Al-Musnad and by Abu Dawud in the Sunan.) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also stated, «If someone ties an amulet, Allah will not accomplish his affairs for him and if someone ties a cowrie shell, Allah will not protect him.» Another narration reads, «Whoever wears an amulet commits an act of Shirk.» This Imam should be advised about the ruling on his act which goes against monotheism. Perhaps he may repent to Allah (Glorified be He).

As for the Imam who calls on the pious instead of Allah, thinking that they mediate between people and Allah bringing benefits and removing harm, it is impermissible to offer Salah behind him and any Salah performed behind him is null and void. This is even more so when such a person supplicates, slaughters animals or makes vows for the sake of the pious.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 287)

Beseeching anyone other than Allah thinking that they can bring benefit or ward off harm is a form of major Shirk. This form of seeking help is an act of worship that is not permissible to offer to anyone other than Allah. Such Imam, while in this state, should not lead people in Salah.

Fatwa no. 19009

Q: Dear Shaykh, we are writing to request a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) about a matter that many Muslims suffer over the city of Jilak in France. On the 27th of Ramadan, in 1994, the Muslim committee decided to close the Masjid (mosque) due to a misunderstanding between us and them. The matter remained the same until 'Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice), when the Masjid was opened again and we performed Salat-ul-'Eid (the Festival Prayer) there. After around three months, the group that had separated from the Masjid decided to hire a hall to perform the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers. Few days after that, the regular Imam came to the main Masjid and contacted us, asking to return to the Masjid. He promised that he would be with us and the other group equally. Despite all these attempts, we have not returned to the Masjid. It is worth mentioning that the Masjid is never a quarter full; only 40 people at most perform Salah there and the area of the Masjid is enough for 100 people or more. A little while afterwards, we brought an Imam to lead us in the daily obligatory Salah and also the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer in the place we hired.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 288)

However, after a while, we discovered that the Imam we brought writes what he calls: "Cure for people" (i.e. amulets), and takes fees for this.

The question is: Is it permissible to perform Salah behind a person who writes amulets and preservers? Is it permissible to perform congregational Salah in the place that we hired, despite there being Al-Masjid Al-Jami' (the large mosque where Jumu'ah [Friday] Prayers are held) that is not full on Friday. Many people are still asking us to return to Al-Masjid Al-Jami'. As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: You should gather together in the Masjid to perform the Five Daily Prayers and also the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, as much as you can, because the Religion of Islam encourages union and performance of Salah in congregation.

As for the Imam who writes amulets, if he is writing in them from the Qur'an and permissible Du'a' (supplication), performing Salah behind him is valid, but he should be advised to stop writing these amulets, because the sound opinion is that this is not permissible. If he writes in these amulets any words relating to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) or meaningless words (gibberish), it is not permissible to perform Salah behind him and it is not permissible to leave him as the Imam for the Masjid; you should remove him.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 16460

Q: I live in a social care center and I suffer paralysis that forces me to offer Salah (Prayer) on a wheelchair. There is a Masjid (mosque) in the center but those who lead the Salah are people who adopt Sufi beliefs, such as believing in the ability of the dead to harm and benefit, etc. We fear that their beliefs might be tantamount to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). However, there is no one to act as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Salah) except such people. Is it permissible to offer Salah behind them? If not, is it permissible for a disabled person who uses a wheelchair and wears a urine bag, because he cannot control his urination, to lead the Salah? The Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) would also be disabled people, a group of Indians who cannot recite the Qur'an well, and a group of Sufis. Please advise in detail.

A: If you are certain that those who lead the Salah adopt beliefs entailing Shirk, such as supplicating to people other than Allah or beseeching someone other than Allah, it is not permissible to offer Salah behind them. In this case, you are required to offer congregational Salah led by an Imam who should be the best amongst you in terms of reciting the Qur'an and completing the pillars of Salah as much as he can. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said to a sick person: ﴿Offer Salah while standing; if you cannot do this, offer it while sitting; if you cannot do this, offer it while lying on your side; and if you cannot even do that, then offer Salah while lying on your back.﴾ If the people who sometimes act as Imams adopt no beliefs entailing Shirk, but they only commit some Bid`ahs (innovations in religion), it is valid to offer Salah behind them until a more qualified Imam leads the Salah.

Q 2: My brother lives in a village that has only one Masjid (mosque). The point is that the people of this village along with their Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) indulge in acts of major Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship), such as offering sacrifices for people other than Allah, seeking help from people other than Allah, and making Du`a' (Supplication) to people other than Allah. Is it permissible to perform the congregational Salah (Prayer) with them and behind their Imam?

A: salah which is performed behind an Imam who makes Du`a' to other than Allah or seeks their help, or offers sacrifices to other than Allah is invalid. This is because such an Imam is considered a Mushrik (one who associates others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) whose Salah is invalid, and so is the Salah of his Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer).

A: Every Muslim is obliged to follow the Qur'an and Sunnah and to imitate the Messenger (peace be upon him), the scholars who follow his Sunnah, and those who apply the teachings of the Qur'an and Sunnah. You are prohibited to follow and imitate heretics who follow Sufi orders. Furthermore, it is impermissible to offer Salah behind them if they commit Shirk, in deeds and words, such as supplicating or slaughtering animals for the sake of anyone other than Allah.

Q 10: What is the ruling on offering Salah behind a Shi`ite who belongs to Rafidah (a Shi`ah group denying the caliphates of Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq and `Umar ibn Al-Khattab and making accusations against them and many other Companions of the Prophet)?

A: Salah which is offered behind a Mu'tadi` (one who introduces innovations in religion) of a Mukaffirah (major sin whose perpetration lead to disbelief) practice is invalid. An example for the foregoing is one who seeks help from someone other than Allah, makes Du`a' (Supplication) to someone other than Allah, offers sacrifices to someone other than Allah, believes that the Qur'an is incomplete, defames the Mother of the Believers `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her), reveres `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) or any other person of Ahl-ul-Bayt (members of the Prophet's extended Muslim family) excessively, makes Du`a' to them instead of Allah, or slanders the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet, may Allah be pleased with them all).

Q 1: We were once sitting in the Masjid (mosque) when a man came and asked us where to find a charlatan. We reproached him for asking about such superstitions. However, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of the Masjid told the man, "Do not pay attention to these people; they do not know anything. Go search for a charlatan, as Allah helps the one who depends on material causes." What do you think of the saying of this Imam?

A: a person who thinks acts of swindle, sorcery and divining are permissible is impermissible to be taken as an Imam, as he is considered an apostate from Islam, and the Salah (Prayer) of an apostate is not valid, according to Allah's saying, ﴿But if they had joined in worship others with Allāh, all that they used to do would have been of no benefit to them.﴾ Sorcery, swindle and divining is considered Shirk (associating others in worship with Allah), as they entail seeking the help of someone other than Allah, whether Jinn (creatures created from fire) or devils.

Q: Is it permissible for a Muslim woman to lead her husband and sons in Salah (Prayer), whether or not she is more knowledgeable religiously than them? Please explain this to me.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 293)

A: It is not permissible for a woman to lead men in Salah. This is asserted according to the Four Madh-habs (the Four Schools of Jurisprudence: Hanafy, Maliky, Shafi'y, and Hanbaly). It has never been known in the life of Muslims in their practicing of Islam that a woman led a man or men in Salah, acting upon the general meaning of the Hadith narrated by Abu Bakrah (may Allah be pleased with him), who reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, “Never will succeed such a people who place a woman in charge of their affairs.” (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Leadership in Salah is certainly one of the greatest charged responsibilities and forms of 'Ibadah (worship) that is based on Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion) and pursuance of the Prophet's example. If a woman leads a man in Salah, his Salah is not valid.

Q: Next to my house is a Masjid (mosque) whose imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) prays while sitting on a chair and using a table as he is unable to make Ruku` (bowing) or Sujud (prostration) on the floor because of a pain in his knees. It may be worth mentioning that some of the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) who pray behind the concerned Imam know some parts of the Qur'an by heart. Is it thus permissible for me to perform Salah (Prayer) behind him?

A: In case that such an Imam is permanently unable to stand for Salah and make Sujud on the floor, Salah which is performed behind him by Ma'mums who are physically fit is invalid. Moreover, it is impermissible for the concerned Imam to lead the Salah as he is unable to perform some of its Rukns (integrals). Consequently, the Imam in question has to be substituted by another one who is able to perform all the Rukns of Salah.

Q: I have been suffering from a problem for 4 years, since I was involved in a car accident that paralyzed my left arm and caused a weakness in my left side. I have a BA in the Arabic language, have memorized many parts of the Qur'an, and recite Al-Fatihah and as much as I can from the Qur'an. Will my leading of people in Salah (Prayer) be on the same level as that of a healthy man?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 295)

A: If your paralysis prevents you from performing the standing, the Ruku' (bowing), the Sujud (prostration) on the seven parts of body, the sitting, or any of the other pillars or conditions of the Salah, it will not be correct for anyone to perform Salah behind you, except for someone like you. It is obligatory on you not to offer to be an Imam (one who leads others in congregational Prayer), as you can not perform the pillars and conditions of Salah. If, however, your paralysis does not prevent you from what has been mentioned, a Salah performed behind you will be correct.

The Imam of the Masjid (mosque) suffered a certain disease and then his leg was amputated. Now, he comes to the Masjid by car and sits on a wheelchair which he moves by pushing its wheels. He leads the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) by gesture while sitting on the wheelchair. Is it permissible for him to lead people in Salah although there are others who recite the Qur'an better than this disabled Imam?

A: It is permissible to offer Salah behind an Imam who is sitting due to an illness that is expected to be cured. However, it is not permissible to offer Salah behind a lame person whose disability is incurable, for he is permanently unable to do one of the main pillars of Salah i.e. he cannot stand up.

The first question of Fatwa no. 17323

Q 1: The Masjid (mosque) where I offer Salah (Prayer) has a regular Imam who has become sick and cannot stand up. There is disagreement among people about how to offer Salah behind him. Some people believe that the regular Imam should lead the Salah sitting and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) should offer Salah sitting as well. They take as evidence the following Hadith: \(The Imam is appointed only to be followed...\) at the end of which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If he performs Salah sitting, you should all perform Salah sitting.\) Other people claim that this above-mentioned Hadith was abrogated when the Prophet (peace be upon him) led the people in Salah during his fatal illness while sitting.

What is the ruling on this?

A: If the regular Imam is afflicted with a curable disease that makes him unable to stand and he starts leading the people in Salah while sitting, the Ma'mums should offer Salah sitting as well. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The Imam is appointed only to be followed...\) until his saying: \(If he performs Salah sitting, you should all perform Salah sitting.\) As for the event of the Prophet (peace be upon him) leading the people in Salah while sitting during his fatal illness, this took place when Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) started leading the people in Salah while standing and then the Prophet (peace be upon him) came and - while seated - continued leading the Salah. This event proves that if the Imam has already started Salah while standing and then he falls ill and has to sit down during Salah, the Ma'mums should continue their Salah while standing. However, a group of religious scholars stated that since the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) offered Salah behind the Prophet (peace be upon him) during his fatal illness while standing, then it is permissible to offer Salah behind a seated Imam while standing. Other texts of Hadith prove that it is better to sit behind a seated Imam. Both opinions are respected and there is no harm in this In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 297)

Q 8: some Imams (those who lead people in Prayer) appoint a deputy to lead the people in salah (Prayer) when they travel, and the man who is appointed shaves his beard. Is it permissible for those who shave their beards to lead people in Salah?

A: It is not permissible for an Imam to appoint someone as a deputy for them who commits sins publicly, such as shaving the beard or smoking, because the Imam should be a good example and a custodian. It is, therefore, obligatory that outward signs of righteousness and uprightness appear on him.

And is it permissible to offer Salah behind an Imam whose garment reaches below his ankles?

A: An Imam who might commit some apparent sins should be advised to repent from them; otherwise he should be replaced with a more pious Imam, if possible. However, offering Salah behind the said Imam is valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

However, it is Wajib (obligatory) on him to offer a Kaffarah (expiation) which is to free a slave, or if he is unable to do so; to observe Sawm (Fast) for two successive months. As I am unmarried, is my position as an Iman lacking or not? Is it permissible for me to lead the people in Al-Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer?

A: It is permissible for an unmarried man to be an Imam and the Salah will not be deficient. It is also permissible for you to lead the people in Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer and deliver the Friday Khutbah (sermon), according to the Hadith on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him) who narrated that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, [“The most versed in reciting the Book of Allah should lead the people in Salah. If they are equally versed in recitation, then the one who is most knowledgeable about the Sunnah. If they are equally knowledgeable about the Sunnah, then the earliest to undertake Hijrah \(Migration from Makkah to Madinah\). The second question of Fatwa no. 20320

Q 2: What is the ruling on whoever discerned the ritual impurity of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) behind whom he offers Salah (Prayer)? What should he do?

A: If a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) knew before offering Salah (Prayer) that the Imam was ritually impure, it is not permissible for him to offer Salah behind him. The same applies if he knew of that matter while offering Salah and the Imam did not make someone else succeed him to lead people in the remainder of the Salah, as Taharah (ritual purification) is a prerequisite for the validity of Salah. Thus, he should repeat Salah if he offered it behind the said Imam. However, if the Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) did not know of that matter until Salah was concluded, his Salah is valid and there is no need for him to repeat it.

Q 6: A Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) joined 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer during the fourth Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) then another man came and started praying behind him. Is it thus permissible for the first praying person to change his intention from being a Ma'mum to being an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer)?

A: It is permissible for whoever misses congregational Salah (Prayer) and cannot find anybody else to start a new congregation with, to pray (as a Ma'mum) behind a person who is making up for the Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) that they missed after the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) of the Imam. Proof for the foregoing is that the Prophet (peace be upon him) was offering Salah during the night and Ibn 'Abbas came and prayed behind him. Moreover, offering Salah in congregation is more rewarded.

Q 2: if someone enters the Masjid (mosque) after the end of Salah (Prayer) and finds one of the Ma'mums (people being led by an imam in congregational Prayer) completing his Salah, should he offer Salah behind that person and make him the imam after he was a Ma'mum, by standing to his right and tapping on his shoulder to inform him that he has joined Salah with him? Please advise concerning the Ma'mum being an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and offering two congregations at the same time in the Masjid.

A: It is permissible for a person who enters the Masjid after the end of Salah to offer Salah behind one of the Ma'mums who have joined part of the Salah with the Imam. In this case, the one who was the Ma'mum is now the Imam, according to the most authentic of the opinions of scholars. However, it is impermissible to hold a second congregation before the first congregation is finished. If a person enters the Masjid and finds a congregation, he should join them.

Q 2: After performing the obligatory 'Isha Salah (Night Prayer), an Imam did us a favor and led our congregation in Salah and another group of people joined the Salah. When they knew that the person leading us in Salah had already performed the obligatory Prayer and was leading us just to do us good, they repeated their Salah. However, we did not repeat it. Is the Salah we performed with this Imam valid or not? What is the ruling on the people who repeated the Salah?

A: It is permissible for anyone who performed the obligatory prayer to lead a congregation who have not yet performed the obligatory prayer. In this case, the Salah will be Nafilah (supererogatory) for the Imam and obligatory for the congregation. It is reported by Muslim in his Sahih on the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah that Mu`adh used to offer Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) and then return to his people to lead their congregation in the same Salah. Furthermore, Abu Dawud and others narrated that when the Prophet (peace be upon him) saw a man who missed the congregational Prayer, he said, \(Is there any man who may do good with this \(man\) and pray along with him?\) Accordingly, it is permissible for a person who offers Nafilah to pray behind an Imam who offers the obligatory Salah and vice versa. Therefore, you are not required to repeat the Salah you performed behind this Imam. Likewise, the group that joined your congregation are not required to repeat it.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 303)

for me to join him in Salah, or not?

A: It is permissible according to the most correct opinions of the scholars for whoever enters the Masjid after the congregation is over and finds a man offering Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah to join him with the intention of offering the obligatory Salah. This is because Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) used to offer Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) then he used to go to lead his people in Salah which is the obligatory Salah for them, whereas it is Nafilah (supererogatory) on his part. The Prophet (peace be upon him) allowed him to do so.

Q 3: Is it permissible for a Muslim intending to perform an obligatory Salah to be led by someone who is performing a Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) or other Salah (Prayer)? Please answer this in detail. And what is the ruling on performing Salah behind minors or smokers?

A: The sound scholarly opinion is that there is nothing wrong in performing an obligatory Salah led by someone performing a supererogatory Salah. This is based on the story of Mu'adh (may Allah be pleased with him) who used to perform Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) and then go to lead his people in offering that Salah. There is also nothing wrong in performing Salah behind discerning children, according to the sound scholarly opinion. This is based on the story of 'Amr ibn Salamah who used to lead his people in Salah when he was a young boy. There is nothing wrong in performing Salah behind Muslims who smoke or perform other acts of disobedience, according to the sounder scholarly opinion. However, if it is possible to perform Salah behind other people who are upright, that would be better. Smokers and those who commit sins publicly should not be appointed as Imams, because they would be

Q: One day I was late for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. I went to Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) but I did not find any people to start a new congregational Salah (Prayer) with. I only found a man making up for Sunnah Qabliyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed before an obligatory Prayer) of Fajr Prayer so I prayed with him. The point is that such a man did not recite in Jahr (loud voice). Is this correct or does the concerned man have to recite in Jahr though he was praying a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet)? Besides, do I have to perform the same Salah again because such a man did not read in Jahr?

A: What you have done is permissible for it is generally allowed for whoever prays obligatory Salah to pray as a Ma'mum behind someone who is praying a Nafilah (supererogatory) one. Proof for the foregoing is that Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) would pray firstly as a Ma'mum behind the Prophet (peace be upon him) then he would pray the same obligatory Salah as an Imam for his people which would count for him as a Nafilah Prayer. On the other hand, the fact that the man you prayed behind did not recite in Jahr does not change the ruling mentioned above as reciting in Jahr is Sunnah (a commendable act) in Fajr and all Salahs (Prayers) which are performed at night.

Q 2: A man entered the Masjid (mosque) and started to perform Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 305)

Another man came and joined him performing an obligatory Salah (Prayer), making the first man an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the second a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer). After the Imam had finished the two Rak'ahs (units of Salah) of Tahiyat-ul-Masjid he offered the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), and the Ma'mum stood to complete his Salah (Prayer). The one who had been the Imam then went on to perform the obligatory Salah behind the second man who had been the Ma'mum; so the Imam and the Ma'mum changed places. Is this permissible?

A: It is valid for one performing an obligatory Salah to be led in praying by one performing a supererogatory Salah and vice versa. This is because Mu'adh (may Allah be pleased with him) used to perform Salah with the Prophet (peace be upon him) and then go back and lead his people in offering the same Salah, as reported in the Hadith agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. The Prophet (peace be upon him) also once saw a man praying alone, so he (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Is there no man who will act charitably towards this \(man\) and pray with him?﴾ (Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy and Ahmad)

Q 1: While we were offering Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in congregation in the Masjid (mosque), another congregation for the `Isha' (Night) Prayer was established. This distracted us and we could not focus on Tarawih until the `Isha' Prayer finished. What should be done in a similar case? Should those who had missed the `Isha' Prayer join the congregation of the Tarawih but with the intention of offering `Isha'? Should they wait until the Tarawih Prayer is finished and start offering the `Isha'? Is it correct to establish a congregation for the `Isha' Prayer while the Tarawih is already established?

A: If a person misses the `Isha' Prayer and there is another congregation offering the

Tarawih, this person has the choice of either offering the `Isha' prayer individually or with another group who has also missed the `Isha' Prayer, or to join the congregation of the Tarawih Prayer but with the intention of offering the `Isha'. In the latter case, the Ma'mum (the person being led by an Imam in Prayer) should stand up after the Imam says the Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and continue their Salah. This is because the soundest opinion of the scholars' two opinions assumes the validity of Salah of a person offering Faridah (obligatory) Prayer behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offering a Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayer.

Q 2: It is established that if a person who is on a journey offers Salah behind a resident Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), he has to complete his Salah with that Imam, so as to avoid differences in intentions. Yet, if a person is offering the obligatory Salah behind one who is offering a Nafilah (supererogatory) one, is this valid with the differences in intentions? Similarly, how could a person offering Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer perform Salah behind someone who is offering `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer although they have different intentions? Please advise.

A: it is permissible for a person offering the obligatory Salah to be led by a person offering a supererogatory Salah, and vice versa. This is not similar to the prohibition related to making different things than that of the Imam, for the many evidences permitting that, such as the story of Mu`adh who used to lead his people in the `Isha' (Night) Salah after having offered the same Salah with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him). Similarly, the Prophet led the other group of his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) in performing two Rak`ahs of Salat Al-Khawf (Prayer in Times of Fear) after he led the first group and pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer).

Q: I performed the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and then I stood performing the supererogatory Salah (Prayer) after it when someone came and joined me in the Salah. I would like to ask about how I can indicate to someone praying beside me that there is another congregation, so their Salah will not be nullified and to let them know that I am performing a supererogatory Salah.

A: It is permissible for that person who was offering an obligatory Salah to be led by you in praying while you were offering supererogatory Salah, according to the more correct of the two opinions maintained by the scholars. anyone who is joined by another while offering supererogatory Salah should not prevent them. The Salah of the person who joined you is valid. This is substantiated by the Hadith reporting that: \(Ibn 'Abbas \(may Allah be pleased with them both\) came to the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) while he was performing Salah alone at night and stood to his left. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) moved Ibn 'Abbas to his right and led him in Salah.\) It is also authentically reported that Mu'adh (may Allah be pleased with him) used to perform 'Isha' (Night) Prayer with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and then go and lead his people in offering this Salah. This Hadith is agreed upon by both Al-Bukhari and Muslim. Mu'adh's second Salah was a supererogatory Salah for him, but the Salah of those who followed him was an obligatory Salah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not disapprove of this, which indicates that it is permissible.

Q 1: Having arrived late to the Masjid (Mosque), I joined the Imam during the Sujud (Prostration) of the last Rak`ah (unit of prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. I stood on the left side of the row, while some who were offering Salah on my right missed one or two Rak`ah. When the Imam pronounced Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), I led them in Salah. Is this valid? Some of them sat and pronounced Taslim after the first Rak`ah and others sat for the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position after the second Rak`ah) then stood to complete the Salah? What should the Imam and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) do in such case?

A 1: When a worshipper who arrives late and misses some units of Salah becomes the Imam, he should make up for the units that he missed. Other latecomers who join him should also make up for the units that they missed behind him until he ends Salah with Taslim. Then, they must rise to make up for the remaining units that they missed after the Imam pronounces Taslim.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19687

Q 1: If someone is offering Salah behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and the Imam precedes him with the Sujud (prostration) or Ruku' (bowing), and it is not possible for the Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) to perform that Sujud except alone, is their Salah valid and accepted or void because they were unable to follow the Imam, even though it was not done deliberately?

A: First: It is obligatory upon the Imam to perform the Salah calmly and consider the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer), so they can perform the pillars of the Salah and its obligations, such as the standing,

Ruku' and Sujud.

Second: a Ma'mum should follow the Imam and not fall behind him or delay in performing the obligations with the Imam. If they catch up with the Imam when he is performing the Ruku' or Sujud, the obligation is to say: "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Adhim (Glory be to my Lord, the Most Great)" once during the Ruku' and: "Subhana Rabbiya Al-'Ala (Glory be to my Lord, the Most High)" once during the Sujud. The Ma'mum should then follow the Imam and their Salah will be valid.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16843

Q 2: Some Muslims do not offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, the Two `Eid Prayers, or the Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in this Masjid (mosque) and go to other Masjids to offer Salah (Prayer) there. This is because the two Imams of the Masjid are not well versed in Hadith and do not memorize the Qur'an. Both, the Arab Imam and the Turkish one, were taught the Arabic language in non-religious schools. Are those who have stopped offering Salah in this Masjid and offer it elsewhere sinners?

A: It is better for muslims to offer Salah behind an Imam who is qualified for this job, whether he is the Imam of a Masjid next to their houses or of any other Masjid as long as going to this other Masjid does not result in any harm, such as a feeling of discomfort on the part of the Imam of the nearby Masjid or his followers because of them leaving their Masjid to another.

Fatwa no. 18872

Q: What is meant by Niyet-ul-Mufaraka (intention of leaving the imam), i.e. stopping following the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and praying individually? What are its pertinent cases in which it is permissible? Please, present your direction and advice regarding this.

A: Niyet-ul-Mufaraka or praying individually refers to the case when the person praying starts Salah with the Imam, then intends leaving him to complete it alone. This is permissible if there is an excuse, such as the Imam's unusual prolonging of his Salah in a way that causes difficulty to the diseased or the elderly or for those who fear the loss of their money or anything that invalidates the Salah. This is due to what is narrated by Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(Mu`adh used to offer `Isha' \(Night\) Prayer with the Prophet and then go to lead his people in prayer. Once he led the people in prayer and recited Surat-al-Baqara. A man left \(the row of the praying people\) and offered \(light\) prayer \(separately\) and went away. When Mu'adh came to know about it, he said. "He \(that man\) is a hypocrite. When the man heard that, he said: I am not a hypocrite, so he came to the Prophet and told him of what happened, whereupon the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) called Mu'adh and said twice, "O Mu'adh! You are putting the people to trials? O Mu'adh! You are putting the people to trials? Recite Surah such-and-such. He said: "And surahs of Al-Burooj, Al-Lail \(By the night as it envelops\), Al-Tariq \(By the heaven, and At-Tariq \(the night-comer, i.e. the bright star\) and Al-Ghashiya \(Has there come to you the narration of the overwhelming \(i.e. the Day of Resurrection\)."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order that man to repeat his Salah or disapprove of what he did. This indicates the permissibility of the Ma'mum leaving the Imam for an excuse as mentioned. Yet, if the Ma'mum left the congregation with no excuse or need, this is not permissible and his Salah is Batil (null and void).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 313)

Second question of Fatwa no. 19080

Q 2: is a latecomer who makes up for the Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) that he missed regarded as someone who prays alone and thus he has to have a Sutra (barrier placed in front of a person praying) etc.? Or is he to complete his Salah (Prayer) on the grounds that he is in congregational Salah in which he follows the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and thus he does not have to use a Sutra, bearing in mind that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: [\(The Imam is appointed only to be followed; so when he recites Takbir \(saying: "Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]"\), you should also recite that.\)](#)

A: A person catches up with the congregational Salah when they pray one Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) or more with the Imam. On the other hand, such a person continues to be a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) even when they make up for the Rak`ahs that they missed for there is still a connection between them and their Imam. Consequently, the Sutra of the Imam is sufficient for the concerned latecomer.

Q 1: there is a regular Imam in our village who does not recite the Qur'an well. He turns confirmation into denial, changes the diacritics, and replaces some letters with others. In addition to this, he performs the Sirri Salah (Prayer with subvocal recitation) so quickly that the Ma'mums (people being led by the Imam in Prayer) may not be able to complete the recitation of Surah Al-Fatihah in the last two Rak'as. When I go to perform Salah (Prayer) in one of the neighboring Masjids (mosques), I notice that my father is not happy, but he does not know the mistakes that this Imam commits. This Masjid is next to our house and my father comes to my house to remind me of the Salah before he goes to the Masjid. I hope you will explain the ruling on performing Salah behind this Imam and whether I am sinful if I do not listen to my father and I go to perform Salah in another Masjid.

A: There is no harm in going to a Masjid where the Imam recites the Qur'an well and this will not be considered as a disobedience to your father, because you are seeking to perfect your Salah and do it properly, and you are not harming your father by doing this. You should advise your father and explain to him your reasons. You should also inform those responsible for the Imam, so they can advise and direct him.

Straightening the rows of Salah

Fatwa no. 16310

Q: It is narrated by Anas that (The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to face us before saying Takbir and say: Set your lines straight and be mild to one another!) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Both Al-Bukhari and Muslim also reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, (Straighten your rows, for straightening the row is a part of the perfection of the Prayer.) Furthermore, Al-Nu`man ibn Bashir narrated, (The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to straighten the rows as one would set an arrow upright until he thought that we got and understood his act. One day, he turned his face to us when he saw a man whose chest was protruding out from the row. Thereupon, he said: Straighten your rows or Allah would create dissension amongst you.) Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith (Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah). See, Fiqh Al-Sunnah, p. 215.

Please, explain these Hadiths so that we can explain them to the Ma'mums (the persons led by an Imam in Prayer). May Allah reward you!

A: As shown in the reports mentioned above, the Prophet (peace be upon him) emphasized the necessity of straightening the rows. the Imam has to face the Ma'mums and order them to straighten and consolidate the rows. Thus, the Ma'mums should form their rows and be close to each other, fill in the gaps and leave no room for the devil. They also have to complete the rows one after another respectively to establish the salah and perfect it. Furthermore, forming the rows during Salah in the manner mentioned above resembles the rows of the Pure Angels in Heaven.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 317)

As a matter of fact, the Prophet (peace be upon him) warned those who violate this direction of straightening rows that Allah may create dissension amongst them. May Allah relieve us and grant us safety and success to do what pleases Him.

Fatwa no. 18919

Q: Two people argued about how the rows of those offering Salah (Prayer) in congregation should be straightened. One of them said that the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) must place their toes on the line drawn in the Masjid (mosque) while standing up and align their knees with each other when sitting down for Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer), no matter how different the length of their limbs are. The other person said that the Ma'mums should level their heels and shoulders when standing up. As for sitting down, the shoulders should be aligned together no matter whether the knees are on the same level or not because the moving limbs are not the same in length. Because both opinions are personally inferred, we hope you would illustrate the Shar`y (Islamically acceptable) and correct way that should be followed when standing and sitting down during Salah so that this issue would be clarified to them. May Allah reward you with the best and guide you to what He likes and that which pleases Him.

A: It is sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) to straighten rows when offering salah and to arrange the rows beside each other. All the Ma'mums should observe this and the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) must urge the Ma'mums before starting Salah to straighten their rows and correct any misalignment in them, as the Messenger (peace be upon him) used to do. It was authentically reported from Simak ibn Harb that he heard Al-Nu`man ibn Bashir saying: \(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to straighten our rows as if he were straightening an arrow until he saw that we had learnt it from him. One day, he came out, stood up \(for Salah\) and was about to say "Allahu Akbar, i.e. Allah is the Greatest" \(to start Salah\) when he saw a man whose chest was bulging out from the row, so he said: Servants of Allah, straighten your rows or Allah would create dissension amongst you.\) (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith, volume 4, page 157 - Sharh Al-Nawawiy; and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation), volume 4, page 272). In another narration, it was reported: \(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to straighten the row \(in Salah\) and make it as straight as an arrow or a spear.\) Refer to Musnad Imam Ahmad, volume 4, page 277. The Hadith was also related by Al-Nasa'iy in his Sunan.

Also, on the authority of Anas who reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Straighten your rows as the straightening of rows is essential for a perfect and correct Salah.\) In another narration, he said: \(Establish rows in Salah, for the making of a row \(straight\) is one of the merits of Salah.\) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and the quoted wording was by Al-Bukhari (volume 1, page 177) and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (volume 2, page 314 and volume 3, page 122))

Moreover, Imam Muslim related in his Sahih, volume 4, page 156 - Sharh Al-Nawawiy - on the authority of Anas ibn Malik who reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 319)

«Straighten your rows, for the straightening of a row is a part of the perfection of Salah.» The same wording was related by Imam Ahmad in volume 3, page 254.

On the authority of Salim ibn Abu Al-Ja`d who reported that he heard Al-Nu`man ibn Bashir saying that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Either you straighten your rows or Allah will cause inversion among your faces.» (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and the quoted wording was by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, volume 1, page 176)

Furthermore, on the authority of Anas who reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Straighten your rows, for I see you from behind my back.» We used to stick our shoulders and feet to each other. (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and the quoted wording was by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, volume 1, page 177)

Muslims should fear Allah and apply this Sunnah as much as possible. However, they should be cautious lest this may result in harming other people offering Salah, especially if the row is already crowded. It is possible that being preoccupied with observing this Sunnah may affect the Khushu` (the heart being attuned to the act of worship) of the Ma'mums and harm them. The objective is to straighten the row as much as possible. The Hadiths mentioned above are enough to illustrate this meaning. All the Ma'mums should be keen on aligning their heels and shoulders but not the knees, as was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 17880

Q 7: According to the Hanbaly Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence), it is wajib (obligatory) upon those offering congregational Salah to straighten the rows by standing shoulder-to-shoulder and toe-to-toe. On the other hand, the Maliky Madh-hab maintains that this is only recommended, not obligatory.

A: The Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered people to stand shoulder-to-shoulder and toe-to-toe. Therefore, those who are offering Salah should stand closely leaving no gap between them. This may come true by standing closely to each other, shoulder-to-shoulder and heel-to-heel with no gap left in between, not by standing with legs wide apart even if toes are close to each other.

The second question of Fatwa no. 14880

Q 2: Although people differ in their heights, some people claim that the knees of the people offering Salah (Prayer) should be on the same level during Ruku' (bowing); others claim that their foreheads should be on the same level during Sujud (prostration); and others claim that their ankles should be on the same level.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 321)

What is the opinion that conforms to the rulings of Salah?

A: alignment in Salah is between the heels and the shoulders, according to what was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith, in the chapter entitled "Standing heel to heel and shoulder to shoulder in Salah", on the authority of Anas that he said, "Each of us would stand with his shoulder against his neighbour's shoulder and his foot against his foot." It was also related by Abu Dawud in the chapter entitled "Aligning the rows" that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, "Straighten the rows, keep your shoulders in line with one another, close the gaps, be pliable \(movable\) in the hands of your brethren." Ibn Hajar said in "Al-Fath" that Ibn Khuzaymah and Al-Hakim ranked it as Sahih. During sitting in Salah, alignment is not made by the knees, as people differ in their heights, but it should be with the shoulders and the heels as previously mentioned.

Q 2: When the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) orders those who offer Salah (Prayer) behind him to straighten the rows, should this be done by alignment of the toes or the heels?

Q 4: Is it necessary in Salah (Prayer) to align the knees of people in the sitting between the two Sujuds (prostrations)?

It is not required to align the knees, as people differ in their heights.

Q: I heard the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of our Masjid (mosque) saying that the Hadith which states,

(Part No. 6; Page No. 323)

﴿Allah confers blessing upon those who are on the right sides of the rows, and His angels (ask Him to do so).﴾ is Da'if (a Hadith that fails to reach the status of Hasan, due to a weakness in the chain of narration or one of the narrators) and cannot be used as evidence, and that is why rows in congregational Salah (Prayer) start from the middle.

A: This Hadith was related by Abu Dawud with a Hasan Isnad (good chain of narration) from the Hadith reported by 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her). Al-Hafizh ibn Hajar ranked the Isnad of the Hadith as Hasan in the version that states, "the right sides of the rows" in his book "Al-Fath" (2/213). The Hadith indicates the merit of standing to the right side of the rows in Salah, which was authentically reported in other than this Hadith. It was related by Abu Dawud and Al-Nasa'y with a Sahih (authentic) Isnad, on the authority of Al-Bara' ibn 'Azib (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said, ﴿When we offered Salah behind the Prophet (peace be upon him), we liked to be on his right side.﴾ The narration of Abu Dawud adds, ﴿...so that he (peace be upon him) would turn his face towards us.﴾ This is included in the preference of the right side in everything. It is reported in the Two Sahih Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim), on the authority of 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said, ﴿The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to like starting by the right side in wearing his shoes, combing his hair, purifying himself and in all his affairs.﴾

The first, second and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 19447

Q 1: is the command in the following Hadith: ("Let those (standing) near to me of you (in congregational prayer) be the mature and the wise.") for obligation or desirability?

A: As for the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): ("Let those (standing) near to me of you (in congregational prayer) be the mature and the wise."), it is for desirability and not for obligation.

Q 2: What is the proof on straightening the rows (during Salah) and is the Hadith stated for desirability or obligation. What about the following Sahih (authentic) Hadith: ("Either you straighten your rows or Allah will cause conflict between your hearts.") Is this threat in return for leaving a Sunnah or for leaving an obligatory act?

A: The proof on straightening the rows (during Salah) is mentioned in the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): ("Either you straighten your rows or Allah will cause conflict between your hearts.") The threat is in return for leaving an obligatory act because the desirable acts do not entail punishment for those who do not do them.

Q 4: can undiscerning children complete the rows, especially the first because Fuqaha' (Muslim jurists) (may Allah be Merciful with them) arranged the types of people mentioned in the following Hadith: ("Let those (standing) near to me of you (in congregational prayer) be the mature and the wise.") into four types as you know. Could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you!

Q: When some people enter the Masjid (mosque) now to perform Salah (Prayer) and they see a completed row, whether there is a gap between the people who are performing Salah or not and whether there is another row or not, they push a large number of people aside to make a place for themselves in the row, which as you can imagine distracts many people. What is the ruling on someone who does this? We hope that you will offer advice and guidance to them and the congregation so they will be careful about filling the gaps. May Allah reward you.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 326)

A: If there is a gap in a row, it is permissible to do what was mentioned, as the congregation had neglected the Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) of filling gaps and empty spaces in the rows. Q: Some elders offer Salah (Prayer) in one row at the back of our Masjid (mosque) though there are incomplete rows in the front of the Masjid. The point is that I get confused when I sometimes come late for the Salah (Prayer) as I do not know whether should I pass in front of the concerned elders. Could you please tell me whether the foregoing case is an exception to the prohibition of passing in front of a praying person? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah be merciful to you.

A: It is prescribed for the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) to tighten the rows and not to leave big spaces between them. However, if there is a big space between one row and the other; it will be permissible for a person to pass in front of such a row to fill in a free space in one of the incomplete rows. This is because the Sutra (barrier placed in front of a person praying) of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) acts as a Sutra for those offering Salah behind him.

Q: Some Imams (those who lead congregational Prayer), when giving the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), stand facing the Mihrab (a niche in the wall of a mosque indicating the direction for Prayer) and say, "Straighten up and be straight! Pray like one bidding farewell! Attend with your heart your Salah (prayer) and show submissive humility in it! Truly, a servant shall only have from their Salah what they are fully conscious of!" Actually, they say more than I mentioned; adding or excluding some words. Is it permissible for them to make this long exhortation when establishing the Salah? We hope that after reading the above, that you will advise us on this, mentioning the evidence, and may Allah assist you and grant you success!

A: First: it is Mashru' (Islamically acceptable) for an imam to say: "Straighten up and be straight," as it was authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, \("Straighten your rows, for straightening the row is part of perfecting the Salah"\) It was narrated in "Sunnan Abu Dawud" that, when establishing the Salah, the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) would turn to his right and say: \("Straighten up! Straighten your rows!"\) and then he would turn to his left and say, \("Straighten up! Straighten your rows!"\) Another narration reads, \("Complete the front row, then the one that comes next, and if there is any incompleteness, let it be in the last row."\) The Hadith narrated by Muslim reads, \("Straighten the row in Salah, for straightening the row is part of performing the Salah well."\) In the Hadith narrated by Abu Dawud, \("Straighten the rows, keep your shoulders in line with one another, close the gaps, be pliable \(movable\) in the hands of your brethren, do not leave any gaps for Satan. Anyone who joins a row, Allah will join him \(to His Mercy\); and anyone who severs a row, Allah will sever him \(from His Mercy\)."\)

Second: as for the exhortation that the Imam offers before Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "allahu akbar [allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) namely his saying:

(Part No. 6; Page No. 328)

"Pray like one bidding farewell! Attend with your heart your Salah (prayer) and show submissive humility in it!" and the like, this is not Mashru'; rather, it is Bid'ah (innovation in religion).

The second question of Fatwa no. 16744

Q 2: one of the Imams (those who lead the congregational Prayer) in a Masjid (mosque), when he is straightening the rows, usually says, "Allah does not look at a crooked row." Is this a Sahih (authentic) Hadith?

A: The expression: "Allah does not look at a crooked row," is commonly used when aligning the rows. However, there is no basis for such words being attributed to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and it is not lawful to say them to align the rows. It is enough to say what was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him), such as his saying, \("Straighten up and straighten your rows."\) and other such sayings of his.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: I want to provide our Masjid (mosque) with new carpets. I heard that it is not permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) amidst columns, so I intend to avoid fixing a row between columns.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 329)

What is the ruling on offering Salah between columns? Moreover, when we want to repair the Masjid, someone told us that one of the seekers of knowledge said that offering Salah inside the Mihrab (a praying place or a private room) is not permissible or is Makruh (reprehensible). Is this correct?

A: It is Makruh to offer Salah amidst columns that interrupt rows of praying people except for an urgent need such as if the people inside the Masjid are so many to the extent that they are compelled to offer Salah between columns.

In addition, it is Makruh for the Imam to offer Salah inside the Mihrab since most of those who offer Salah behind him do not see him and so cannot follow him in prayer. But, this does not mean that it is not permissible to construct Mihrabs or it is not permissible to repair the Masjid.

Q 6: What is the ruling on those who offer Salah (Prayer) between the columns of a Masjid (mosque) without a need whether ignorantly or knowingly?

A: offering Salah between the columns of a Masjid is Makruh (reprehensible) if they interrupt the rows without need. However, if there is a need such as if the Masjid is small, offering Salah will not be Makruh as well as if they do not interrupt the rows.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20167

Q 1: This year, 1418 A.H., I performed Hajj to the Sacred House as a guide. I exerted my best to make the pilgrims who traveled with me on the bus, perform perfect Hajj (pilgrimage) without sin, disobedience or dispute, giving them the noble image of the place and showing them the concern of those who provide assistance for the pilgrims. Unfortunately, there were some notes which I should refer to in order to feel tranquil and secure; which is mostly, mixture between men and women during Salah in the Sacred House. I searched for a place to offer Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer but I did not find any except with a woman beside me or in front of me which forced me to offer Salah in another Masjid in Makkah; could you kindly advise?

A: It is permissible during the days of intense crowdedness to offer Salah in Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) even if there are women standing beside men or in front of them in rows out of necessity. Men should lower their gaze and not come into contact with the bodies of women as much as they can.

Q 2: If there are two people performing Salah together; one is an Imam and the other is a Ma'mum (a person being led by an Imam), is it permissible for the Imam to advance and the Ma'mum to stay behind when a third person joins them?

A: According to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), the Imam should stand in front of the Ma'mums when the congregation consists of three persons or more. The Prophet (peace be upon him) made Jabir and Jabar stand behind him when he led them in Salah. He (peace be upon him) also made Anas and the orphan stand behind him when he led them in Salah. However, the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered that if the Ma'mum is one person, he should stand to the right of the Imam.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 332)

A: According to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), the Imam should stand in front of the Ma'mums (a person being led by an Imam in Prayer) but it is permissible for him to stand in the middle of the first row if the place is narrow according to what is reported to be done by Ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him).

The first question of Fatwa no. 15435

Q 1: If I enter the Masjid (mosque) and I find two people offering the Faridah (obligatory prayer) in congregation, will it be permissible for me to draw the Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) backward gently to pray next to me or it will be sufficient for me to just indicate to the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) that I joined the Salah? Besides, if there is no space for the Imam to step forward; will it be permissible for me to draw the Ma'mum backward to pray with me? Please provide me with your beneficial answer. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: if you find two people offering a congregational obligatory Salah and you like to join them, you along with the Ma'mum are to step backward and pray behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). However, it is also permissible that the Imam steps forward and you both keep your place behind him. Proof for the foregoing is the Hadith related by Muslim and Abu Dawud to the effect that the Prophet (peace be upon him) directed the two Sahabys (Companions of the Prophet) Jabir and Jabbar to pray behind him.

Q 2: is it permissible for young boys to offer Salah (Prayer) in the first row behind the Imam in congregational Salah? Kindly give us the legal opinion concerning this controversial issue. May Allah save you.

A: It is authentically reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that it is a priority that the people of knowledge and piety should stand in the first row while offering Salah behind the Imam, as they are more worthy than others of honoring. Furthermore, the Imam might need someone to replace him for any reason, and as such, a knowledgeable person should substitute him in this case. In addition to that, they are more eligible to correct any mistake the Imam might commit while reciting or forgetting certain Ayahs and the like, which others may not notice. There are many Hadiths that indicate that, as it has been authentically reported in Sahih Muslim and others on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him)

said: ﴿Let those (standing) near to me of you (in congregational prayer) be the mature and the wise, then those next to them, then those next to them.﴾ It is also authentically reported from the Hadith of Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: ﴿The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) loved that the Muhajirun (Emigrants from Makkah to Madinah) and the Ansar (Helpers, inhabitants of Madinah who supported the Prophet) should stand behind him in Salah so that they would learn from him.﴾ (Related by Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes] except for Abu Dawud through a good Sanad [chain of narrators])

Fatwa no. 16651

Q: Please, give us the legal opinion in respect to bringing children to Masjids (Mosques)? Indeed, this is a controversial issue widely disputed between the Imam and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer). Their opinions may be cited as follows:

Firstly: Some Imams are of the opinion that:

- 1- Salah is not obligatory upon children who are under the age of seven. Therefore, they should not be admitted to the Masjids before they are seven years old. When the children stand in the rows, they do not fill their positions and then gaps are left for devils to pass through.
- 2- As for the children who are over the age of seven and before adulthood, it is better for them to stand at the ends of the rows or in the last row, especially those who do not perform Wudu' or Salah properly and those who may disturb other people.

- 3- During the lifetime of the Prophet (peace be upon him), the elders used to stand in the first rows. Children would stand in the succeeding rows and finally women would stand in the back rows.

- 4- Allowing children to enter the Masjids would encourage them to stand in the first row directly behind the Imam. Thus, the first row becomes uneven. This does not go in conformity with the instructions of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him), "Let the wise and sagacious men be directly behind me \(in congregational prayer\)." Please, give a concise interpretation of this Hadith.

Secondly, some parents say:

- 1- We want to accustom our children who are under the age of seven to attend the Congregational Salah in Masjids. Some also say, "our parents used to bring us to the Masjid once we could distinguish the right hand from the left one."
- 2- We cannot leave our children in the back rows lest they should play or quarrel with one another.
- 3- If a child comes earlier than an elderly person and sits even directly behind the Imam, he is worthier of sitting in the place that he reached first. The Hadith, "Let the wise and sagacious men be directly behind me \(in congregational prayer\)" lends support to the children, not against them.
- 4- Most Masjids whose Imams are scholars or religious students allow children to enter the Masjids. This means that they have evidence for this behavior.

Please, provide us with a written answer, so that we can circulate it and end all disagreements. May Allah guide you to every good and truth and grant you success!

A: It is permissible for the fathers or the mothers to take their children with them to the Masjids, if they are afraid for them. This happened during the lifetime of the Prophet (peace be upon him). However, they should be taught not to play or disturb those who are offering Salah. On the other hand, children who are seven years old or more should be ordered to perform Wudu' and Salah (prayer) to become accustomed to offering Salah. Moreover, a child and his parent will both be rewarded for that. Furthermore, it is permissible for children to stand in the rows and it causes no misalignment as claimed by the questioner, because their Salah is valid. Children used to stand beside the elders behind the Prophet (peace be upon him).

The first question of Fatwa no. 20107

Q 1: As teachers in primary schools, we are obliged to stand in the rows of students during salah to straighten them. More than a few times, we direct the students while they are offering Salah.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 338)

For example, we may say, "look downwards to the place of your prostration", "do not look around", "do not move", etc.

A: There is nothing wrong with standing among the rows of students during Salah to control and prevent them from playing and distracting one another, as it serves the purpose of their offering Salah rightly. However, the teachers standing among the students should not interrupt the rows. In their direction of the students they should speak in a low voice so that they may not distract the others in their Salah. Moreover, the teachers monitoring the students should offer Salah in congregation at its due time.

Following the Imam in Salah

Q: I work as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque). However, owing to the large number of people offering Salah (prayer) in the Masjid, it cannot encompass all of them although it was recently reconstructed in 1416 A.H. at the expense of the country, may Allah protect and support it!

I want to know about some people who do not find a place inside the Masjid so they offer Salah in the neighboring street. Moreover, the rows inside the Masjid are not connected with those outside the Masjid. Thus, what is the right action with those people? Should we prevent them from offering Salah in the street? May Allah protect and support you!

A: if the Masjid does not encompass the praying people during Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer or other Salahs, it is permissible for these people to offer Salah outside the Masjid on the condition that they can see the Imam or some of those who offer Salah behind him and can hear the Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") so that they can follow the Imam.

Q 3: Our Masjid (mosque) has a main prayer hall and a subsidiary hall which is only opened when needed.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 340)

The point is that on one of the nights of Ramadan the electrical current cut during 'Isha' (Night) Prayer. Consequently, people who were praying in the subsidiary hall did not hear the Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). This apart from not seeing the other Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer), because of the relatively far distance between the two halls, so one of the Ma'mums stepped forward to act as an Imam for the rest of the Salah (Prayer). Nevertheless, one of the worshipers then said that the Ma'mums had to complete their Salah individually. Could you please tell us what is the correct action in such a case.

A: if the speaker accidentally stops working, the Ma'mums who are far from the imam are to complete their Salah individually, each completes it on their own. However, it is also permissible for one of them to step forward to act as an Imam for the rest of the Salah.

Q 3: One Friday, female worshipers and myself listened to the Khutbah (sermon) then prayed the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer) of Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer. Nevertheless, the speaker accidentally stopped working and we could not hear the rest of the Salah (Prayer) as the women's Musalla (praying place) is far from men's. What should we do in such cases? Do we have to complete the Salah individually or do we have to start the same Salah from the very beginning?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 341)

A: If the speakers stop working and the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) can no longer hear the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) after praying one Rak'ah of Jumu'ah Prayer, they are to complete their Salah individually for they are unable to follow the Imam as they neither see him nor see those who are behind him. However, if the Ma'mums can neither hear or see the Imam, or any of the Ma'mums behind him, before praying one full Rak'ah with Imam, they are to start performing Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, if its time is due.

Q 4: Is Congregational Salah (Prayer) valid, if there is a wall that separates the congregation of men from that of women?

A: It is Makruh (reprehensible) to offer Salah between barriers such as columns and walls unless it is necessary, e.g. the place is narrow; in this case it becomes permissible and no longer Makruh. Moreover, it is permissible for women to pray behind men, if they are in the same Masjid (Mosque) or the same house and are able to hear the Imam.

Q: Is it permissible for a person who lives in Nigeria to offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of Al-Haram in Makkah Al-Mukarramah i.e. the Sacred Mosque of Mecca following the Salah transmitted through television e.g. placing the TV set in front of him to the direction of the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah), for it is possible to hear and see the acts of the Imam? Indeed, the time of Tarawih in Makkah coincides with a time when it is permissible to offer supererogatory Salah in Nigeria. May Allah preserve you!

A: It is impermissible to offer Salah (Prayer) behind the Imam of Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque of Makkah) or of any other Masjid using television. according to the legal rulings, the congregational Salah should be led by an Imam while the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) stand behind him in connected rows. Q 6: Is it permissible to follow an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) during Salah (Prayer) transmitted by radio from Al-Haram Al-Makky i.e. the Sacred Mosque of Makkah? For example, following him in Tarawih Prayers (special supererogatory night Prayer performed during the month of Ramadan) or Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 343)

This may happen when I am in a non-Islamic country far from the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia where there are neither congregational prayer nor Jumu'ah prayers or in an Islamic country.

A: It is not valid for you to offer obligatory or supererogatory Salah following the Imam of Al-Haram while you are in India depending on live broadcasting. This is because the Imam is to lead only those who offer Salah behind him inside or outside the Masjid (mosque), if the rows keep connected and successive behind him. Breaking Salah

All Praise is due to Allah alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has studied the question which was referred to His Eminence, the General Mufti by His Eminence, the General Manager of the departments of Religious Affairs of the armed forces, No. 2/10/ 2499 on 14/7/1411 A.H. which was submitted to the Committee by the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars No. 3195 on 15/7/1411 A.H. His Eminence asked a question mentioned in the letter of the President of the Religious Affairs in the northern and eastern base of king 'Abdul-'Aziz which reads as follows:

We would like to inform you that we had several questions from the army men of the base concerning the taken measures during the red alert which happens from time to time while people are offering Salah, whether in congregations in the Masjid (mosque) or on a ship or individually like women or offering supererogatory Salah. How should we complete Salah? Should we break Salah? If a person breaks his Salah, should they repeat it or resume from the point at which they broke Salah or should they continue their Salah while hiding in a secure place or while going to the required place whether on a ship or office according to the type of their mission. If the matter requires only wearing a mask, can they wear it during Salah?

So we submit these questions hoping that you send them to the Shar'y (Islamic legal) concerned bodies to answer them. I hope that the answers will be inclusive and quick because of the importance of the matter. As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!).

After the Committee had studied the question, it answered as follows:

First, all the people who are not in war and not in danger have to complete Salah at hearing the sirens or alarms because of the lack of danger in most cases.

Second, those who are in locations of danger such as those on ships, airports, military bases and those who are facing the enemy have to take the necessary measures of precaution and confrontation at hearing sirens and alarms because of Allah's Saying: ﴿O you who believe! Take your precautions﴾ They have to repeat the entire Salah when the state of danger ends, if it is an obligatory Salah. As for the voluntary Salah, there is no need to repeat it.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 346)

Third, whoever needs to wear a mask during Salah, he may wear it during Salah and there is no narm in doing so.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 19773

All Praise be to Allah, Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' had read the letter received from his Eminence the General Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the Director of Religious Affairs Department at the Civil Defense that was sent to the Committee from the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars no. (3937) on 5/7/1418 A.H.

The inquirer had asked several questions, and after the committee had studied them, it answered as follows:

The first question: What is the ruling on hearing the alarm of the civil defense while offering Salah (Prayer)? In this case, how can one leave Salah if this is permissible? Should a person continue to offer the Salah or perform it again? After a person accomplishes their task, how should they act?

The answer: If the soldiers hear the sound of the alarm of the civil defense during the Salah,

if there is an absolute danger to people or money, they should not continue offering Salah, for they should break the Salah, ward off the danger, then after accomplishing that, they should perform their Salah again, for the first Salah was nullified by their breaking it. Whereas on hearing the alarm, provided that there is no danger, they should continue offering their Salah without breaking it, for Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(and render not vain your deeds.\) .

Also, I cannot perform the Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud (prostration) movements of the Salah (Prayer). Am I permitted to perform Salah by gesturing with my eyes, as in the case of a sick person? What should I do to perform Salah on time?

A: It is obligatory upon you to perform Salah as Allah commanded fully with its Ruku' and Sujud. It is not permissible for you to perform Salah by gesturing with your eyes or abandon any of the obligatory acts of Salah. if an accident related to your work happens during praying and cannot be averted except through ending your Salah, it will be permissible

Q 2: if the baby cries or is choking while i am performing Salah (Prayer) beside it, is it permissible for me to end my Salah and pick it up or hold it and continue my Salah?

A: There is nothing to prevent you from holding a child while performing Salah, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to hold his granddaughter Umamah, the daughter of his daughter Zaynab, while performing Salah. However, it is not permissible to end your Salah for this purpose, unless the condition of the child becomes dangerous and it needs to be rescued.

Performing Salah alone

Fatwa no. 20369

Q: A man was performing Salah (Prayer) in congregation, standing alone behind a row. Another man joined him in the row after he had performed the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer).

My question is: Should the man who performed Salah behind the row repeat the first Rak'ah or is his Salah valid?

A: Anyone who performs one Rak'ah or more with the Imam (the one who leads congregational prayer) while standing alone behind a row in congregational Salah and no man or discerning child aligns with him, his Salah is invalid. This is based on the general meaning of the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him), "There is no Salah for the one who prays alone behind the row." \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) saw a man performing Salah alone behind the row and ordered him to repeat the Salah.\) (Related by Imam Ahmad Al-Tirmidhy - who judged it to be Hadith Hasan [a Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish] - and Ibn Majah, through a trustworthy Sanad [chain of narrators]) However, if a man performs Salah standing alone behind a row and another man or even a discerning child joins him before the Imam performs the first Sujud (prostration) of the Rak'ah that he was joined in, his Salah will be valid, as he will not be alone in this situation.

Accordingly, the Salah of a man who performs a complete Rak'ah with the Imam standing alone behind a row before another person joins him is invalid, based on the two Hadith quoted above. Also, as the Rak'ah he performed while standing alone is invalid, it is not permissible to base the rest of Salah upon it and it will be obligatory on him to repeat the whole Salah from the beginning.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18447

Q 1: What is the ruling on performing Salah (prayer) alone behind a row when there is no gap in the row? Should one perform the Salah standing alone behind the row or pull someone back from the row in front?

A: If someone joins Salah and the row is full, they should try to find a place in the row. If it is not possible, they should stand to the right of the Imam. If this is also not possible, they should wait until someone comes to form a new row with them. It is not permissible to pray alone behind the row, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, ﴿There is no Salah for the one who prays alone behind the row.﴾ ﴿The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) saw a man performing Salah alone behind the row and ordered him to repeat the Salah.﴾

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 17299

Q 4: Upon entering the Masjid (mosque), I may find no space in the row; shall I begin a new row or what should I do?

A: If you enter the Masjid after the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) has been announced and find that rows are complete, you should wait until another latecomer comes to begin a new row together. You may also try to find a space in any row or stand directly beside the Imam to the right side. However, it is impermissible to offer Salah alone behind the row. The Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited us to do so.

Q: I am a young Muslim man who used to pray the congregational Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque) while in Egypt, all praise be to Allah. As my legs are damaged, I used to perform Salah in the first row while sitting on a chair, as the people in Egypt would help me to do so. I then moved to Abu Dhabi and, as I cannot perform Salah standing, I brought a chair to the Masjid, but this caused a problem. I was unable to find a place in the first or second row, because the Masjid was crowded or sometimes because I was late in arriving. So I put the chair in a fixed place in one of the sides of the Masjid and the other worshippers have gotten used to leaving that space and chair for me. However, I pray behind the rows, is my case included in the prohibition of praying alone behind the rows?

A: You must perform the Salah with the congregation as far as it lies in your power, by placing the chair on which you pray by the end of the last row you find. it is not permissible to perform Salah alone behind the rows, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, “There is no Salah for the one who prays alone behind the row.” (Related by Ibn Hibban)

Conveying what the Imam says

The sixth question of Fatwa no. 18148

Q 6: This is a controversial issue. When the Imam (one who leads congregational Prayer) pronounces Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer), the one who conveys his words raises his voice so that all the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) hear him during Ruku` (bowing), Sujud (prostration) and all the movements of Salah. Many people who belong to Ahl-ul-Sunnah group (those adhering to the Sunnah) in other cities disapprove of this and claim it is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). They quote what was mentioned in the book entitled "Fiqh Al-Sunnah", that it is Mustahab (desirable) in case of necessity. However, if the congregation hears the Imam, it is a reprehensible Bid`ah. They also quoted what was mentioned in the book entitled "Majmu` Al-Fatawa", that conveying what the Imam says took place only twice in the era of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him), and both were for a reason. We do not have this book here in Lagos, so the Imam of Ahl-ul-Sunnah in Lagos says that he does not agree to the claim that conveying what the Imam says is a Bid`ah based on the following reasons:

First, what is mentioned in "Fiqh Al-Sunnah" is that it is a reprehensible Bid`ah if the voice of the Imam reaches the congregation, as this ruling is agreed upon by the Imams (initiator of a School of Jurisprudence), not according to the saying of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him).

Second, it is mentioned in "Majmu` Al-Fatawa" that this took place only twice in the era of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him). Did he (peace be upon him) say then it is a Bid`ah? If he had said so, we would have accepted this. Otherwise, how can it be?

Third, if conveying what the Imam says is reprehensible, why is it done in Al-Haramayn Al-Sharifayn (the Two Sacred Mosques: the Sacred Mosque in Makkah and the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah), although everyone in the Haram hears the Imam? Here in Lagos we hear the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer everyday on the radio via "Nida' Al-Islam" radio station, and the `Isha' (Night) Prayer via "Al-Qur'an Al-Karim" radio station, and we hear the voices of both the Imam and the one who conveys what he says to the congregation.

Here in Nigeria most of the Masjids (mosques) convey what the Imam says to the congregation. Should we accept what they do or tell them it is a Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect)?

A: It is permissible to convey what the Imam says to the congregation in case of necessity, such as when the congregation is too large and they cannot hear the Takbir of the Imam, so that they perform Ruku`, Sujud and Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) according to him. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) led the people in Salah (Prayer) in his last illness, Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq (may Allah be pleased with him) conveyed what he said to the congregation, as his voice (peace be upon him) was too weak due to his illness and the people could not hear him.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

salah of the sick

Fatwa no. 15916

Q: I am suffering from severe rheumatism that I am unable to move my body or even my hands. Likewise, I cannot eat, drink, or do Ghusl (ritual bath), Wudu' (ablution), or Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth). It came to my knowledge that the obligation of Salah (Prayer) cannot be waived under any condition. Therefore, what should I do?

A: It is true that a Muslim is not exempted from the obligation of Salah as long as they are in a stable, sane state of mind. However, they may offer it according to their ability. Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾. As for your inability to perform Wudu' or Tayammum by yourself, you have two cases: (I) You may have someone to help you do Wudu' or Tayammum if you fear harm due to using water. The person helping you should strike both palms on the dust and wipe your face and hands therewith. Then you must offer Salah, because this is an obligation on you. (II) If you cannot find anyone to help you do Wudu' or Tayammum you may offer Salah according to your condition without Wudu' or Tayammum. In either case, you must not abandon Salah. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked about the Salah of the sick, he (peace be upon him) said, ﴿Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Authentic Book of Hadith])

(Part No. 6; Page No. 358)

It is also related by Al-Nasa'y through a trustworthy Isnad (chain of narrators) with the addition: ﴿...and if you cannot, then lying on your back.﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) says, ﴿And if you are ill, or on a journey﴾ Up to His saying, ﴿perform Tayammum with clean earth and rub therewith your faces and hands (Tayammum).﴾

The third question of Fatwa no. 16340

Q 3: Is it permissible for a sick person and the like to shorten a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) just as the case of a traveler? How should a sick person offer Salah?

A: Only a traveler is permitted to shorten Salah. It is not permissible for a patient to shorten Salah; rather, they should offer Salah in full in a manner that suits their condition. If they cannot stand during Salah, they can offer Salah sitting and make gestures with their head for Ruku' (bowing). If they cannot perform Sujud (prostration) on the ground, they should make gestures for Sujud, but they must be lower than those for their Ruku'. If they cannot offer Salah in a sitting posture, they can lie on their side and direct their face to the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah). If this is not possible, they can lie on their back, direct their feet to the Qiblah, and make gestures with their head for Ruku' and Sujud. Moreover, a sick person can combine the two Salahs; by combining, for example, the Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of one of them or the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of one of them, if they need to do so.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18804

Q 3: Is it permissible for a pregnant woman to observe Sawm (Fasting)? How can she do Ruku' (bowing) in Salah (Prayer) when her belly gets bigger?

A: A pregnant woman must observe Sawm, unless she fears harm for herself or her pregnancy. In this case, she is permitted not to observe Sawm and to make up for the missed days later on. But if non-observance of Sawm is due to fear for her pregnancy, then she has to make up for the missed days and also feed a needy person for every day not fasted. Sujud (prostration) to the ground is obligatory, but if she cannot perform it, it is sufficient for her to make a gesture with her head indicative of Sujud (prostration) while she is sitting.

Q 4: A man performed surgery on his knees, after which, it has become hard for him to stand or perform Sujud (prostration) during the congregational Salah unless he stands in the corner of the Masjid (Mosque) having no one on his left hand side. Moreover, if he offers Salah in the middle of the row, he tends to sit on a chair and uses a table on which he offers Sujud.

The question is: Is it permissible for him to pray alone when congregational Salah is held in case he has not his chair and table? Is offering the congregational Salah while sitting on this chair and using this table permissible?

A: anyone who is unable to stand while offering Salah should offer it sitting, either on the ground or on a chair if it is easier. Moreover, they may offer Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud by gesturing in the air, and let the Sujud be lower than the Ruku' if they cannot offer it on the ground. However, it is impermissible for a person to offer Sujud on a table and a cushion, for the Hadith related by Al-Bayhaqy and classed as Sahih (authentic) by Al-Hakim on the authority of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: “The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) visited an ill man, and he saw him offering Salah \(prayer\) on a cushion. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) then threw it away and said: ‘Pray on the ground if you can, otherwise, make a gesture, and let your Sujud \(prostration\) be lower than your Ruku' \(bowing\).’” (Related by Al-Bayhaqy and classed as Sahih by Abu Hatim)

Q: I am a 19 year old girl and suffer epileptic seizures sometimes while sitting down or standing up. When I sleep for eight hours a day, such seizures do not come for one week or one month. My questions are:

1- Am I permitted to perform Salah (Prayer) while sitting since falling down often causes wounds in my face and parts of my body?

2- Is it considered a necessity if I sleep late at night for eight hours and miss the time of the Salah? Am I excused in this case? It should be noted that I left my studies because I remain awake until I perform Fajr (Dawn) Prayer on its due time, then resume my sleep until Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. Moreover, the conditions of my family do not help me adjust my sleeping hours.

A: if you are not able to perform Salah while you are standing, you are allowed to perform it while you are sitting. In a Hadith narrated on the authority of 'Imran ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with them both) the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to him: "Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side." However, it is obligatory upon you to perform Salah at its due time. The third question of Fatwa no. 20109

Q 3: After my sickness, i cannot stand for a long time to offer Salah (Prayer); is it permissible for me to offer Salah in a sitting position? It is worth mentioning that I am 26 years old age and when I stand to offer the congregational Salah, I find people, who are over the age of sixty, offering Salah beside me. So how can I offer Salah in a sitting position and what will the standing people by my side say about me? What should I do in Salat-ul-Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) and Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night)? Can the sick offer Qiyam-ul-Layl and supererogatory Salah while they cannot offer it standing? Will you advise me? Please supplicate to Allah to cure me.

A: If you cannot offer the obligatory Salah while standing or this causes you pain in your body, there is no blame on you if you offer Salah in a sitting position because Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said to one of his Companions (who was sick): \(“Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.”\) (Related by Al-Bukhari)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 363)

As for the supererogatory Salah, the matter is flexible and there is no need to offer it standing even if a person is able to stand, but standing is better. The sick is like the healthy people, it is Mustahab (desirable) for them to perform the supererogatory Salah and the voluntary acts of worship which they are capable of.

Q 1: what is the ruling on laziness in offering the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and delaying it due to illness? Would this be considered a sin and an act of hypocrisy?

A: If it is easier for a sick person to delay Salah (Prayer) a little after the beginning of its prescribed time, there is no blame in this. In fact, they are permitted to combine the Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers and the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of one of them if it is difficult for them to offer each Salah alone at its prescribed time. This is one of the Favors granted by Allah to His Servants, making things easy for them; all praise is due to Him.

Q 2: is it permissible for a sick person to offer Salah in a sitting position due to pain in his leg? It is worth mentioning that he can offer Salah while standing but he would suffer great pain because of this.

A: A sick person is permitted to offer Salah in a sitting position if it is difficult for them to stand and if standing causes them pain. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting;

A: standing when able to do so is one of the pillars of salah without which Salah will not be valid. However, if you are unable to stand, it will be permissible for you to offer Salah while sitting. To this effect, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to 'Imran ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with him): “Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.” (Related by Al-Bukhari and others) It is also related by Al-Nasa'y through a trustworthy Isnad (chain of narrators) with the addition: “...and if you cannot, then lying on your back.” If you can sometimes stand, you will then have to do so, because Allah (Glorified be He) says: “So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can” In the same regard, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: “When I command you to do something, do of it as much as you can .” (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah [may Allah be pleased with him])

Q 1: My father became unable to perform Salah (Prayer) in the perfect manner as he had rheumatic pains in view of his old age. I then provided him with a chair to offer Salah while sitting on and placed it in the first row bearing in mind that my father comes to the Masjid (mosque) early. However, some Muslim brothers took the chair back to the second or third row on the pretext that it is impermissible to place a chair in the first row and thus he has to go back.

Anyway, controversy arose on the issue. Please, inform me about the truth of the matter.

A: a patient should offer Salah according to their ability whether standing, sitting, lying on their side or lying on their back while their feet are directed to the Qiblah (direction of Salah). In such cases, they have to move their heads down signaling Ruku' (bowing) and lower signaling Sujud (prostration). It is also unobjectionable to offer Salah while sitting on a chair if it is difficult to sit on the ground. It is also unobjectionable to place such a chair in the first row which causes no break in the row. Moreover, Muslim brothers have to deal kindly with such a person and give him a suitable vacancy in the row. However, if it is infeasible, the chair should be placed at the edge of the row so as to avert dispute.

Q 2: I suffer from kidney failure, I go to the hospital three times a week to undergo renal dialysis that takes about three hours. This process occurs by discharging the blood from the body through one of the veins, then passing it by a purifying device, then entering it once more to the body through another vein.

My question to your Eminence is:

- 1- Does the discharge and entrance of the blood to the body nullify Wudu' (ablution)?
- 2- Is it permissible for me to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers if I am certain that 'Asr Prayer will become due while I am undergoing this process?
- 3- Is it permissible for me to offer Salah (Prayer) during the washing process under such devices?
- 4-Is it permissible for me to offer Zhuhr Prayer before its due time? Is the due time denoted by the Adhan (call to prayer), Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) or according to the chronological table?
- 5- Sometimes, the nurse might miss in inserting the injection resulting in the discharge of some blood over my clothes, does such blood nullify my Wudu'? Should I wash my clothes from its traces?

Please answer me, may Allah reward you well!

A: It is permissible to combine 'Asr and Zhuhr Prayers at the time of Zhuhr for whoever is unable to offer 'Asr Prayer on time due to the extension of the renal dialysis process until sunset, but it is impermissible to offer it or any other prayer before its due time. However, the time of Zhuhr starts post meridiem, and you can identify the time either by using the chronological table or by hearing the Adhan.

furthermore, the discharge of a small amount of blood does not nullify Wudu', but the blood itself is Najis (impure); therefore, you should wash whatever is stained of your clothes or body from it, whereas the discharge of a large amount of blood nullifies Wudu', whether it occurs as a result of renal dialysis or for any other reason, for this is considered a discharge of a large amount of Najasah (ritual impurity) from the body.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: What is the ruling on those who miss the due time of Salah (Prayer) due to their submission to kidney dialysis? For example, they may visit the hospital before Zhuhr (Noon) or 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and finish the dialysis an hour after 'Asr or Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, and so miss the Zhuhr or 'Asr Prayer.

A: If the reality is as the questioner has mentioned that the kidney dialysis begins before the time of Zhuhr, the sick may delay Zhuhr and combine it with 'Asr at the time of the latter.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 370)

Like all sick people, he is allowed to combine two Salahs. however, if the kidney dialysis begins after the coming of the due time of Zhuhr and ends after the prescribed time of 'Asr, it is permissible for the sick to combine Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers at the time of the earlier one. The same is true with Maghrib and 'Isha' Prayers. If the kidney dialysis begins before the time of Maghrib begins, he may delay it and combine it with 'Isha' at the time of the later one. If it begins after the beginning of the due time of Maghrib and ends after the time of 'Isha' begins, combining the two Salahs is not necessary, as 'Isha' has an extended time. However, there is nothing wrong with combining them at the time of Maghrib, as is permissible for all other patients who need this. May Allah cure all sick people!

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20093

Q: What is the ruling on a Muslim who cannot make Wudu' (ablution) because their hands are amputated? Is it obligatory upon them to perform Salah (prayer)?

A: Salah is obligatory upon every Muslim as long as they are sane, mature and of sound mind, as these constitute the locus of Taklif (meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for actions). The obligation to perform Salah is not removed due to amputation of an organ or a disease or any similar contingencies. General proofs from the Qur'an, the Sunnah and consensus of scholars support this ruling.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 371)

However, if a Muslim suffers a wound in their body that prevents them from performing all the obligations and pillars of Salah, they should perform it according to their own capacity. Similarly, if a Muslim whose hands are amputated is able to make Wudu' by themselves or by the help of another person, they should do so; otherwise, Wudu' is no longer obligatory on them and they should perform Salah in their current state according to their own capacity. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ He (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allāh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾

The first question of Fatwa no. 17795

Q 1: I had special circumstances that prevented me from purifying myself fully for Salah (Prayer). I cannot purify my clothes when touched by impurity and in some cases I cannot direct myself to the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) to offer Salah; what is the ruling on the Salah which I offered in these circumstances? It is worth mentioning that this failure in duty on my part was out of my control.

A: It is obligatory for a Muslim to perform Salah according to their ability, because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾

(Part No. 6; Page No. 372)

If people can purify themselves fully from Hadath (major and minor ritual impurities) and Najasah (filth such as urine, blood etc), they must do so, because Taharah (ritual purification) is a prerequisite of the validity of Salah and they must face the Qiblah. If they cannot fulfill any of the mentioned conditions or even some of them, they can offer Salah in the way they can. If in the state you mentioned you could not use water for purification or Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth) and you could not wash off the impurity from your body or clothes and so you offered Salah according to your ability, your Salah will be valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Once you are able to remove the impurity it is obligatory that you should wash it off your clothes and your body. Also, when you are able you must perform Ghusl (ritual bath) following Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge), if you had a wet dream during the period you mentioned, for future Salahs.

Fatwa no. 19564

Q 1: Should a bedridden patient who is suffering from two fractured legs and a fracture in his left hand and is staying in a hospital for treatment, offer Salah while he is lying opposite to the direction of Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah)? Note that the position of the bed cannot be changed because of the medical equipment above the patient's head.

A: It is permissible for him to do so, if he cannot change the position of the bed or face the Qiblah by himself, because

(Part No. 6; Page No. 373)

Allah (Glorified be He) says, «So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can».

Q 2: Is it permissible for this patient to combine and shorten Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers together and Maghrib and 'Isha' Prayers together. He lives in Al-Khobar and is now receiving treatment in Riyadh. Is it permissible for him to only perform Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth), for it is difficult for him to perform Wudu'?

A: It is permissible for him to combine and shorten Salah, for he takes the ruling applied to travelers if his stay is for treatment and he does not intend to stay for more than four days. However, if he intends to stay for more than four days in Riyadh, he should offer the four-unit Salahs in full. It is permissible for him to combine Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers together at the time of either of them, and Maghrib and 'Isha' together at the time of either of them. It is also permissible for him to perform Tayammum, if he is unable to use water and there is no one to help him perform Wudu'. He should perform Istijmar (cleansing the private parts with a hard material after urination or defecation) three times or more using hard tissue paper until the place becomes purified before performing Wudu' or Tayammum.

Q: I am a thirty-eight year old man.

I suffer from rheumatism since 1962 A.D when I was ten. I received treatment but I was never cured. On the contrary, the disease develops and transfers from one organ to another. In 1971, I stopped receiving treatment because of my harsh and difficult conditions in addition to other conditions that are out of my hands. I am bedridden since 1980 and until now. I can not serve myself, move my hands to the right or the left, or even raise them. I cannot eat or drink by myself. I would like you to read my letter and answer my questions which are related to Salah in detail.

1- Undergoing this condition, I cannot perform Wudu' or Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth). I heard that a person is never exempted from offering Salah under any circumstance, is this true? If this is true, how should I offer Salah while I am in this case? I am very afraid if I do not offer Salah, it would be a debt on me.

2- I heard another opinion that it is permissible for a person who is unable to perform Wudu' or Tayammum to offer Salah without Taharah (ritual purification).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 375)

It is also said that such a patient is exempted from Salah, is this true? Note that I offer Salah without Taharah, acting on this opinion, is my Salah valid? Please, advise. May Allah be merciful to you, for I am worried and do not know what to do concerning Salah.

It is also worth mentioning that I am not married, thus I cannot depend on anyone to purify me. Please, answer me respected shaykhs in detail and in written form. Please, make things easy for me and do not make them difficult. May Allah reward you the best.

As-salamu 'alaykum wa rahmatullah wa barakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: salah is obligatory upon Muslims and they are not exempted from it as long as they are sane. If a person is unable to use water or clean earth, Taharah (ritual purification) is no longer obligatory on them, but it remains their duty to offer Salah at its due time according to their ability. May Allah grant you a speedy recovery.

Fatwa no. 18397

I am the director of the Social Care House in Holy Makkah. Such a House is supervised by the under-Secretary of Social Affairs at the Ministry of Labor. The House is to take care of elders who have no breadwinners.

In the two sections of the concerned Social Care House there are about one hundred and fifty males and females. As they are of different conditions, sometimes we get confused regarding some of the matters relating to them and thus we need your guidance.

Please, tell us how can such old people perform Salah (Prayer) bearing in mind that some of them have psychological illnesses, some are not in their full mental capacity because of their old age, and some are sick and cannot move. Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

After the Committee studied the question, it answered as follows:

Whoever amongst the old people mentioned in the question is in their full mental capacity has to offer Salah in the way that they are able to do so. They have to perform Salah standing, sitting in case of their inability to stand up, lying down on their side in case of their inability to sit, or lying down on their back in case of their inability to lie down on their side, while making gestures for Ruku` (bowing) and Sujud (prostration) together with Niyah (intention). The foregoing is based on a Hadith which is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the authority of `Imran ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with them both).

Fatwa no. 19821

Q: An old man was infected with a disease resembling paralysis that he cannot get up or walk without help and articulates very heavily. Now, he combines two Salahs (Prayers) at the time of one of them as it is difficult for him to perform Wudu' (ablution) for every Salah. Moreover, he cannot utter some Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and invocations while offering Salah.

The question is: Is doing so valid? What is obligatory on him regarding reciting the Qur'an and Adhkar (invocations) whether during Salah or thereafter? What should he do regarding the fact that he cannot utter some of the former? How should disabled people pray? Give us a Fatwa (legal opinion), may Allah reward you!

A: It is obligatory on such a person to offer Salah in accordance with his ability. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) Thus, if he can use water for Taharah (ritual purification) even through the help of others, he will have to do so. Otherwise, he should perform Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth). If he can offer Salah while standing, he will have to do so. Otherwise, he should move his head down signaling Ruku' (bowing) and move it lower signaling Sujud (prostration). Moreover, he should recite the Qur'an in accordance with his ability. It is obligatory only to recite Surah Al-Fatihah, whereas reciting other parts of the Qur'an in the first and second Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) of all Salahs is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 378)

Furthermore, if he can offer every Salah at its due time without great difficulty, he will have to do so. Otherwise, it will be permissible for him to combine Zuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Salahs when the time of any of them is due and Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Salahs when the time of any of them is due.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 15268

Q: I am an elderly woman who cannot move from the bed I have lain in for ten years. I would like to ask for a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) about my Salah (Prayer) and Sawm (Fast) for three months; one month during which I performed no Salah or Sawm and two months during which I performed Sawm on two days in each month. I have asked about the Sawm and was told that I should not perform it in my condition.

A: First: you have to perform Salah according to your ability; pray standing, and if you cannot, then sitting down, and if you cannot, then lying on your side, and if you cannot, then lying on your back with your legs towards the Qiblah (direction of Salah). Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) The Prophet (peace be upon him), when asked by a sick person on the same issue, replied, \(“Perform Salah standing, and if you cannot, then sitting, and if you cannot, then lying on your side.”\) However, if you perform Salah lying on your side, you should do so on your right side with your face towards the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 379)

Second: As for the month during which you did not perform Salah, if that was done due to unconsciousness, you need do nothing. If it was done due to ignorance or sickness, you have to make up for the Salah you missed at any time as soon as possible.

Third: You have to perform Wudu' (ablution) using water if you can, even if it is with the help of one of your children, any of your Mahrams (non-marriageable male relatives), or other women. Moreover, you also have to perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) or Istijmar (cleansing the private parts with a hard material after urination or defecation) three or more times using stones or tissue paper. This will suffice instead of water if it cleanses you. If you cannot perform Wudu', you have to perform Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth). This is done by hitting your hands against earth and then wiping your face and palms with them. You should ask those around you to put some earth near your bed, so you can use it when you need to. You can also combine the Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of either the earlier or the later one and combine Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of either the earlier or the later one as other ill people do.

Fourth: You have to make up for the days of Ramadan that you missed if you can do so and you should also feed a needy person for each day of Ramadan of the years preceding 1412 A.H. that you delayed making up for, if you can do so. However, if you cannot feed any needy people due to being too poor to do so, it will be sufficient for you to make up for the days of Sawm that you missed; all praise be to Allah. If you cannot perform Sawm due to being old, you will have to feed a needy person for every missed day by giving them half a Sa' (1 Sa' = 2.172 kg) of wheat, rice, or any other local staple food. It is also sufficient to give it all to one poor person. If you are unable to feed anyone, you will be exempted based on the evidence we quoted above. However, you should perform Sawm in the future and if you cannot do so due to old age, you must feed a needy person for each missed day. It is also sufficient to give that food to one person or more, whether at the beginning, at the middle, or at the end of the month.

We ask Allah to help you and us and give us success.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 17898

Q: My father died from a chronic illness. During his illness, which did not last long, he did not perform Salah (Prayer). He was not able to do so, and, although he was not unconscious, he could not perform Wudu' (ablution), get up or walk. Before his death, in fact during his life, my father would only perform Salah at home and would only perform the two 'Eid (festival of sacrifice and that of breaking fast) Prayers and Jum'ah (Friday) Prayers in congregation at the Masjid (mosque). He would also perform his Salah so quickly that he would not perform the Sujud (prostration) or Ruku' (bowing) properly.

The question is: Can we supplicate to Allah for him, to ask forgiveness for him, give in charity, and perform Hajj on his behalf?

A: It is obligatory on someone who is ill to perform Salah according to their ability, as long as they are conscious.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 381)

We hope that Allah will forgive your father for abandoning Salah during his illness out of ignorance. Many people commit this mistake, hoping to perform Salah in a more purified state after their recovery and abstain from Salah without Taharah (ritual purification) or while ritually impure. We also hope that Allah forgives your father for being negligent in offering Salah in congregation and other deeds. So, supplicate to Allah for your father, ask for forgiveness for him, give in charity, and perform Hajj on his behalf, hoping that Allah will pardon him.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 16168

Q: My father passed away after suffering for a long time from a serious disease. He (may Allah be merciful to him) continued performing Salah (Prayer) regularly during his lifetime with the exception of the last month he lived as he could not stand, sit, move, or even control discharges of the urethra and anus because of the number of chronic illnesses that he had during that period. It may be worth mentioning that I have only one brother who lives with me along with my mother who is sixty years old. I told my deceased father that he had to perform Salah even while lying down on the bed, but he replied that he could not do the Taharah (ritual purification). He asked me to inquire about this matter for him. I complied with his request and asked about this embarrassing matter. The answer was that I myself had to help my father perform Taharah. Unfortunately, I did not do so as I am so bashful, to the furthest limits, and I cannot do so. My father thus did not pray for the last month before his death. Moreover, it was the Will of Allah (Exalted be He) that I witnessed my father's last breath but I did not do Talqin (encouraging someone dying to say: "La ilaha illa Allah") for him as I did not know that he was dying because this was the first time for me to come across such a situation. The point is that now I strongly feel that I am guilty. I would like to inquire about the sin that my father committed when he did not perform Salah for one full month before he died; is there any Kaffarah (expiation) for it? It may be worth mentioning that I am a dutiful son to my father and I always make Du'a' (Supplication) to Allah to give me and my family all the best. What should I do?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 382)

A: A sick person has to offer salah according to their condition. They have thus to perform Salah standing, sitting in case of their inability to stand up, lying down on their sides in case of their inability to sit, or lying down on their back in case of their inability to lie down on their sides, while making gestures for Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud (prostration). The foregoing is based on a Hadith which is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the authority of 'Imran ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with them both). Regarding Taharah, they have to make 'Wudu' (ablution) if they are able to do so either by themselves or through the help of somebody else. Otherwise, they have to make Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth). On the other hand, you do not have to make any Kaffarah for the fact that your father did not pray during the last month of his life. Hopefully he may be excused because he was ignorant of the foregoing ruling, besides, Talqin is not Wajib (obligatory) and thus missing it is not a sin. And Allah knows best.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 383)

Third question of Fatwa no. 20768

Q 3: While receiving medical treatment at a hospital, I did not perform Salah (Prayer) for two weeks. This was because I thought that Salah of those who cannot control their excretory functions is invalid. However, while I was still in the hospital, I prayed for two and a half months without even performing Tayammum (dry ablution). Afterwards, I made up for these Salahs (Prayers) by praying one extra obligatory Salah at each prayer time. What is the ruling on this? May Allah reward you with the best.

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on sick persons to offer Salah according to their condition. They must not abandon Salah as long as they have full mental capacity. A proof for this is Allah's statement: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) You have thus to make up for the Salahs that you missed provided that you follow the right order of Salahs. It must be made up for at one and the same time and it is impermissible that you make up for one obligatory Salah with a current obligatory one. Nevertheless, the Salahs that you have already made up for are valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). On the other hand, people who are ill must be in a state of Taharah (ceremonial purification) as much as possible. Accordingly, if you can perform ablution using water; you have to do so. Otherwise, you may perform Tayammum using dust. Finally, if you are unable to purify yourself with water or dust, you are to pray without performing 'Wudu' (ablution) or Tayammum.

Q 5: After undergoing an operation, a woman became unable to make Wudu' (ablution) or Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth) due to her severe illness and that her clothes were not clean. She did not perform the obligatory Salah (Prayer) for three days. Should she make up for the Salah she missed one month ago? Has she committed a sin by doing that? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: In principle, the obligation of Salah is not removed from Muslims as long as they are sane. The woman in question had to perform Salah according to her own condition, even if she could not make Wudu' due to her illness, or could not do Taymmum, or if there was impurity on her body or clothes that she could not remove or wash. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ He also says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ In such a case, she should perform Salah while she is standing if she is able to; otherwise, she should perform it while she is sitting. If she is unable to, she should perform it while lying on her side or while she is sleeping on her back if she cannot lean on her side.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 385)

Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ He also says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ Also, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to a sick person: ﴿Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.﴾ According to another narration, he (peace be upon him) added: ﴿...and if you cannot, then lying on your back.﴾ Thus, it is obligatory on that woman to make up for the Salah she missed in order, i.e. she should begin with the obligatory Salah she missed on the first day and so on until she completes them.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 18860

Q 3: According to the medical diagnosis, my 27-year-old sister is suffering from mental retardation affecting her brain. However, it is evident from her behavior that she is possessed, for she laughs for no reason and eats in a disgusting way. Nevertheless, she can distinguish right from wrong. Thus, she regularly observes the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, but she recites Al-Fatihah only. She speaks with difficulty and forgets a lot. Is there any sin on her if, while in Salah, she forgets to recite Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) or some Qur'anic Ayahs (verses)

(Part No. 6; Page No. 386)

after Al-Fatihah?

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned, your sister is not to blame if she recites Al-Fatihah only and forgets to recite the other invocations of salah. She does what is within her capacity and is not to be blamed for what is beyond her capacity to do or memorize. She is excused for her mentioned illness, as Allah (Exalted be He) says, «Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.» Allah also says, «So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can» However, you should strive to teach her the first and second Tashahhud and the formulae prescribed for Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud (prostration).

by forming a separate row and following the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). This perhaps may be better than offering Salah at home due to my health condition, thereby obtaining the reward of offering the congregational Salah Insha'a Allah (if Allah wills)?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, that you suffer from such a condition and that there is no air-condition-free Masjid nearby, then it is permissible for you to offer Salah at the place where there is no air-conditioning inside the mentioned Masjid, but you should have someone join you in the row to avoid praying on your own, as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾.

Salah of a traveler

Fatwa no. 16906

Q 1: at what distance from residing city is it permissible for a traveler to shorten Salah (Prayers)?

Q 2: Is it permissible for me to combine and shorten Salah when I am traveling from Jeddah to Al-Ta'if?

Q 3: If I hear the Adhan (call to Prayer) while I am traveling and I am at the outskirts of the city, is it permissible for me to combine and shorten the Zhuhr (Noon) and the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers or should I offer a full Zhuhr Prayer? If I am traveling from Al-Ta'if to Jeddah and the time of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer started while I am still in Al-Ta'if, if I perform that Salah in congregation in the Masjid (mosque), is it permissible for me to combine the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer with it as I am a traveler? Is it permissible for me to combine and shorten Salah when traveling for the purpose of an outing or picnic? If I travel to Jeddah and I live in Al-Ta'if to make a transaction there, and I perform the Zhuhr Prayer behind the Imam (the one who leads the congregational Prayer), is it permissible for me to combine and shorten the 'Asr Prayer with it, as I do not have the intention of staying in Jeddah ?

A: It is permissible to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) when traveling a distance of about 80 kilometers, which is a two-day journey by camel. Anyone who travels from Jeddah to Al-Ta'if can shorten Salah, as the condition for the stated distance is met, unless they intend to stay for more than four days, in which case they should perform the full Salah as they are not considered to be travelers. When they leave, heading to their own homeland, they can shorten Salah on the journey. The rulings on shortening and combining Salah during travel are applicable as soon as a traveler leaves the inhabited area of the city where they live, even if they can hear the Adhan when they are outside the city. If you are a traveler and you offer the Maghrib or the Zhuhr Prayer with residents, you may combine the 'Isha' and the 'Asr Prayer with them respectively. It is also permissible to shorten Salah when traveling even for the purpose of an outing or picnic, as the Rukhsah (concession) is general.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17264

Q 2: What is the criterion of travel and the distance that gives a traveler the right to shorten and combine Salahs (Prayers)? I travel 80 kilometers every day and some of the passengers combine 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer under the pretext that such a distance is deemed travel. Is it permissible for us to combine the Salahs over such a distance?

A: The 80 kilometers distance that you travel every day is considered travel, which allows you to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salahs (Prayer consisting of four units).

Also, it is permissible for you to combine two Salahs while traveling on the way.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Fatwa no. 17936

Q: We heard that you issued a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) whereby a person living in Riyadh and heading for Al-Kharj may combine and shorten Salah. Is this Fatwa true? Is it applied to the present day where the buildings of the two cities draw them closer to each other? Is it permissible to combine the two Salahs when there is no difficulty in travel during this distance? Supposing that combining and shortening Salahs are impermissible, should a person, who did so before knowing this Fatwa, repeat his Salah? Where do the boundaries of Riyadh end? Please, advise. May Allah reward you!

A: The distance that permits a person to shorten Salah is the distance covered by a mount during two days. Approximately, it is eighty kilometers. The beginning and the end of every town is determined by the end of the inhabitable proximate buildings of that town. If the distance between the buildings of Riyadh and that of Al-Kharj now is 80 km, combining and shortening Salah are permissible. If the distance is less than this distance, combining and shortening Salah are impermissible. As for a person who combined and shortened Salah while moving between the two cities and did not notice the short distance between their two boundaries due to his lack of awareness, we are of the opinion that he does not have to repeat Salah, due to his ignorance of the ruling. However, he should not do so again in the future.

Fatwa no. 21086

Q: Please, be informed that I live in the city of Riyadh and work in the city of Al-Kharj where I go everyday, is it permissible for me to shorten and combine the Salah (Prayers) or not? It should be mentioned that I have measured the distance between the borders of the two cities (that is to say the inhabited area in both cities) and found that the distance from the last district of Al-Kharj towards Riyadh which is "Al-Bida' District" until the buildings of the national guards through Al-Kahrj road (the last area inhabited towards Al-Kharj) is only fifty seven kilometers. However, if we add the utilities of the two cities of factories, workshops and others, the distance will be much less than that. In this case, is it permissible for employees, workers and others who move between these two cities to shorten and combine Salah?

A: the distance at which a traveler is given travel concessions according to the opinion of the Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) is a two-day journey by camel which is nearly estimated by eighty kilometers. Therefore, whoever travels for this distance or more is to be given the concessions of travel such as shortening of the quatrain Salah to two Rak'ahs (units of prayers), combining Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, as well as Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) either at the time of the earlier or the later ones, in addition to not fasting in case of Sawm (Fast), and wiping over the Khuffs (leather socks) for three days and their nights. Whereas the distance mentioned in the question is not a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah nor eligible for travel concessions.

Q: I work in Prince Sultan Air Base located at Al Kharj and live in Riyadh. The distance between the Base and Riyadh is 130 to 150 kilometers which I travel every day. Is it permissible for me to apply the rulings of travel in terms of combining and shortening Salahs (Prayers) every day, even if my work will remain for five or seven years? Please, advise.

A: It is permissible for you to shorten and combine two Salahs together during your travel between Riyadh and the Base. Also, you are permitted to combine and shorten Salahs in the Base on the condition that you do not intend to stay in the Base for more than four days, because you are considered a traveler. The exception is that when you join a congregation that performs Salah in full, then you should perform the same number of Rak'ahs with them.

Q 3: a man works in a company, which is 360 or 480 km away from home; is it permissible for him to shorten Salah (Prayer)? It should be noted that his stay in the company varies from 45 days to 2 months.

A: It is obligatory on a Muslim who travels and intends to stay for more than four days to perform Salah in its full Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) during his stay. That is because the rulings of travel are no longer applied to him.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20866

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last Messenger.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the question that was sent to His Eminence the Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) by the Head of the Department of Religious Affairs at the Borders Guard in the Eastern Region the Lieutenant: 'Adel ibn Muhammad

Al-Bidiwy. The concerned letter was transferred to the Committee by the secretariat-general for the Council of Senior Scholars under the number 469 and dated 18/01/1420 A. H. The questioner asked different questions. Following is his second question:

Q 2: Some patrols move from headquarters or sectors under them and travel for long distances that sometimes extend to four hundred kilometers. Some of these patrols may then have a short stay of three to ten days at some specific places. It may be worth mentioning that going on such patrols is the main work of one department in Borders Guard where officers always travel from one place to another just as people working on trucks and lorries do as this is the nature of their work. We hope thus that your Eminence clarify the ruling on shortening and combining Salah (Prayer) if a person is on their way or if they stay in a specific place after arrival for carrying out a certain task. Besides, what is the ruling on breaking Sawm (Fast) due to being in a patrol that goes for long distances or stays in a specific place for finishing some work? It may be worth mentioning that the duration of accomplishing a task may range to ten days. Besides, is there a minimum travel distance for combining and shortening Salah? May Allah reward you with the best for supporting us and Muslims.

A: officers who go on patrols for eighty kilometers or more from the place of their residence are to shorten their Salah during the patrol.

However, officers in patrols that go for less than the foregoing distance or who do not know whether they will go to a far or short distance have to perform the Salah in full and not shorten it. Regarding the case of the officers staying in a specific place after arrival, if they intend to stay for four days or less or if they do not know the duration of their stay; they are to shorten Salah provided that the distance of their travel is eighty kilometers or more. If they intend to stay for more than four days; they have to complete their Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 15453

Q: We are soldiers in a remote area which is 40 km away from the city of Rafha' where we are assigned a mission for three months. Should we perform Salah (Prayer) in full and the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer? What about the supererogatory Salah, knowing that there is a permanent Masjid (mosque) where we perform the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers? Is it permissible for us to combine 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer at the time of the thick dust? Is it permissible for us to wipe over the Khuffs (leather socks) as residents or travelers?

A: the traveling that requires shortening Salah should be a distance of eighty kilometers or more, which is equal to a two-day travel by a camel. Thus, it is not permissible for you to shorten the Salah because the place you travel to does not meet the distance set by the Shari'ah (Islamic law). Also, it is not permissible for you to combine the two Salahs and you have to perform every Salah fully at its due time. However, you are permitted to wipe over the Khuffs as residents for only one day and one night. It is not permissible for you to perform Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer; instead, you should offer it as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer unless there is a nearby town where Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer is offered. In the latter case, you should join them. Moreover, you are permitted to perform Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory prayers that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet), Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) and the like.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: We work at a military base, and live in the city of Riyadh. Our work place is a hundred and sixty (160) kilometers away from home, we head to it daily, our work hours end right after Zhuhr Prayer, where we offer Zhuhr inside the base, then return to Riyadh where we arrive at our houses a while before 'Asr prayer, our question is:

1- Is it permissible for us to shorten the Salah (Prayer) inside the Masjid (mosque) of the base in the mentioned case?

2- Is it permissible to combine Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers, as we return to our houses very tired to the extent that makes us sleep until the due time of 'Asr has expired?

3-If combining Salah is permissible for us, is it permissible if we return to our houses before 'Asr prayer and sleep resulting in missing the prayer at the Masjid?

A: Since the mentioned distance exceeds the distance at which shortening Salah is permissible, and you do not plan to stay at your workplace except for the daily work hours, it is permissible for you to use the travel concessions such as combining and shortening Salah. Accordingly, it is permissible for you to combine and shorten Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers at the mentioned workplace. However, if you reach Riyadh where you reside and find that people have not offered 'Asr Prayer yet at the Masjid, it is not obligatory for you to repeat it again.

Fatwa no. 18189

Q: Eight months ago, the leadership commanded our military unit (the soldiers) to move from Khamis Mishit region to Jizan in the front lines. We were near the urbanized villages, living in tents and did not lead a stable life. Near us are villages and deserted grounds. We do not know when we will return home. Since then until now, we shorten Salah.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 398)

First question: Is shortening the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) in this case permissible? Please, advise.

Second question: Are we required to offer Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer?

Third question: Is a person who brings his family and lives in the nearby villages required to shorten or offer Salah in full?

A: It is well-known that the basic principle in Shari'ah (Islamic law) is that the non-traveler must offer the Salah in full, each Salah at its due time. Likewise, the basic principle concerning the traveler is to shorten the Salah. It is also permissible for the traveler to combine two Salah, offering them at the time of the earlier or the later one. For example, combining Zuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, and offering them at the time of either one of them; also combining Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' Prayers, and offering them at the time of either one of them, whether at the beginning, middle, or end of the due time of Salah, according to what is most convenient for the traveler.

Likewise, if the traveler intends to stay for four days or less or stays temporarily in a place and does not know when they will finish their task and leave or how long they will stay, they, like a traveler, may avail of the Rukhsahs (concessions) of traveling, such as shortening the Salah and others.

As for the traveler who intends to stay for more than four days, their case is like that of the resident; they should not avail themselves of any of the Rukhsahs of traveling, like shortening Salah and others, according to the most correct opinion of scholars, following the basic ruling concerning the Salah of the non-traveler, which is to offer Salah in full, and that to be on the safe side.

As for Jumu'ah Prayer, since you mentioned that you are not a resident of this place - and since residency is a condition - you are not required to offer it. So, you should offer Zhuhr Prayer (four-Rak'ah Salah) instead. However, if any of you enters a Masjid (mosque) where the Jumu'ah Prayer is offered, he should offer it and it will suffice instead of Zhuhr.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 15242

All Praise is due to Allah Alone, and peace be upon the Last of the Prophets. To commence:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has studied the submitted question to His Eminence, the General President by the General Manager of the Religious Affairs of the Armed forces which is referred to the Committee from the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars No.1474 on 1 Rabia Thany, 1413 A.H., in which the questioner asks about the following:

We had a question from those who work in Al-Salil base which reads as follows: They live in a school in Al-Dawasir Valley which is about 120 km away from their base headquarters. Their shift ends at 11: 30 A.M.

and then they go home to offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer at one o'clock. They ask about the ruling on shortening and combining Salah because the case is as mentioned. Should they offer Salah in congregation when they reach their residence and find that the people are performing Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer? Can they shorten and combine Salah if they missed the congregation and were tired from the travel? It is worth mentioning that the matter is being repeated daily when they go to work and come home? We hope that Your Eminence could give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard. May Allah reward you.

After the Committee had studied the question, it answered with the permissibility of shortening and combining Salah on their way before they reach their headquarters. If they do not perform Salah on their way, it is not permissible for them to shorten or combine Salah and they have to offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in complete form when they reach their homes. If they arrive when their people have not yet performed Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, they have to offer Salah with them. As for 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, if they do not combine it with Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer on their way, they must delay Salah to perform it with the people at its due time.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: I am employed in a military position in the region of Thawl, which is 150 km from Makkah, and I travel back and forth to work everyday. My question is: Is it permissible for me to combine and shorten the Zhuhr (Noon) and the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, as I leave work at 12:00 midday, before Zhuhr, and I reach my home in Makkah at 1:45 pm, after Zhuhr? I hope that you will reply to me concerning this matter in writing, in order to settle a dispute among the employees about it. May Allah reward you well.

A: The distance you mentioned between Makkah and Thawr constitutes a traveling distance that allows you to combine and shorten Salah (Prayer) until you return to Makkah, even if this happens everyday.

Fatwa no. 14616

All praise be to Allah alone, and may peace and blessings be upon the one after whom there will be no Prophet!

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' read the letter that was sent to His Eminence the General President by the Religious Administrative Affairs Manager of the Navy, which was referred to the committee by the General Secretariat of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 4194, dated 17/10/1418 A.H. His Eminence asked a question that was mentioned in the letter of the Religious Administrative Affairs Manager from the King Faysal Naval Base, which stated the following:

Many questions have been submitted to us concerning the ruling on performing the Jumu'ah (Friday) prayer and Tarawih (special supererogatory night prayer in Ramadan) on board ship or when in dock, as there is a lot of discussion about this. They have asked me to send a request for a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) to the Council of Senior Scholars with a clarification to the position of the ships' crews, so everyone can abide by the Fatwa and the disputes will be settled.

We would like to describe the ships and their crews before asking the questions:

First: There are different sizes of naval ships; some of them are small which makes it difficult to offer the congregational Salah (Prayer) on them, some are medium sized, and others are large ships with crews of more than 150. The last two types of ships have large decks, where the crew can offer the Jumu'ah and the congregational Salah without any problems or experiencing any shaking, because those big ships are not affected by the waves.

Second: These ships have different situations; usually they are docked in the port and sometimes they are out at sea, far from the port at a distance that allows the shortening of Salah or more. They are then not stationary in one place, but are on patrol. Sometimes they are in the middle of the sea at a distance less than that which permits the shortening of Salah. Sometimes the anchor is lowered and a ship remains in one place and other times it is taken to the mainland and into dry dock for repairs, which might take a month or more. In this case, it is more like a multi-storey building, not a ship.

Third: The ship's crew do not live inside the ship; they live at the naval base and only come on board during their working hours, for a whole day for the shift workers, more than that when the ship is out at sea, or even more if they are guarding the borders. However, the first case is the most common.

Having clarified the situation of the ships, we would like to ask some questions:

First: What is the ruling on offering Jumu'ah Prayer on board medium and large ships, where there is a place to offer congregational Salah in the following situations:

- a. If the ship is in port and not moving at all.
- b. If the ship is out at sea and far from the naval base, at a distance that permits the shortening of Salah or more, but it is not stationary in one place, it is on patrol.

- c. If the ship is out at sea and far from the naval base, at a distance that does not permit the shortening of Salah, and it is not stationary, it is on patrol.
- d. In the situations described in b. and c., but stationary with the anchor dropped.
- e. If the ship is out of the sea in dry dock, supported on iron bases, to be repaired.

Second: What is the ruling on offering Tarawih in the situations mentioned in the first question?

Third: What is the ruling on offering congregational Salah on board small ships, where there is not enough room for a congregation or if there is, the congregation cannot stand in rows? Please advise on what should be done if the ship is out at sea or tied to the quay.

Fourth: Please clarify, if, in the situations mentioned in the first question it is not obligatory on the crew to offer the Jumu'ah Prayer, but they have done so, will it suffice them or do they also have to repeat it again as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer?

Fifth: If the ship tied to the quay, should the crew offer Jumu'ah Prayer on the quay or are they exempted from it? Although they are not traveling, and there is a nearby Masjid (mosque) where the Jumu'ah Prayer is offered, the crew cannot all leave the ship and go to the Masjid together. If they offer the Salah on the quay, they can all offer it together.

Sixth: If the ship is out at open sea at a distance that permits the shortening of Salah, and the crew shortens and combines Zhuhr and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of the earlier, is it permissible for some of them to perform a supererogatory Salah after it if they want to, since the time for the 'Asr Prayer has not arrived or is it not permissible because they have already performed the 'Asr Prayer? The same applies to the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers. If the crew combines and shortens them during the time of the earlier one, can they offer Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units) or Tarawih immediately after it, or should they wait until the red twilight disappears and the time for 'Isha' arrives?

Seventh: If the ship is out at open sea at a distance that permits the shortening of Salah or more and the crew combines and shortens the Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers during the time of the earlier one, and then the ship enters the port and drops anchor before the time for the 'Asr Prayer or during its time, do they have to repeat the 'Asr Prayer because they have reached land in time or is their first performance of it suffice? The same applies to Maghrib and 'Isha' Prayers.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 406)

We hope that you will send this Fatwa request to the Council of Senior Scholars for us to have the required Fatwa that we can generally apply in the naval force ships as soon as possible. As-salamu 'alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: First: A naval ship's crew does not have to offer the Jumu'ah Prayer on board in any of the situations, as they are not residents, apart from those who live at the port, as they do not take the same rulings on travelers; they should offer the Jumu'ah Prayer in the Masjid. As for Tarawih, there is no harm in offering it during travel.

Second: Those among the ship members who combine the Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers, for coming under the ruling of travelers, cannot perform supererogatory Salah after the 'Asr Prayer, even if they combine them in the time of the earlier, in compliance with the Hadith that generally prohibit any Salah after the 'Asr Prayer, which include travelers and any others.

As for combining Maghrib with 'Isha', there is no prohibition against performing supererogatory Salah after them, even if they are combined in the time of the earlier Salah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, and his family and Companions!

Q: We would like to inform Your Eminence that the Joint Command in Kuwait and their army men perform Salah in complete form as well as Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer. This is only out of their speculations because they live in buildings. We do not know when we shall receive the orders to go to our country or any other place, so we hope you will give us a Shar'y (Islamic law-based) Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding whether should we offer the Five Obligatory Daily Salah (Prayers) in complete form or not? Are we required to perform Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer?

A: It is obligatory upon them to complete Salah because of their determination to stay more than four days.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 408)

As for Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, they should not offer it on their own but they should offer it with other people in the nearby Masjids (mosques) where Jumu'ah Prayer is held, which makes it incumbent upon them as other inhabitants, based on the general evidence.

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon His last Messenger.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter that was sent to His Eminence the Mufty by His Excellency the Ambassador in Britain of The Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques. The concerned letter was transferred to the Committee by the secretariat-general of the Council of Senior Scholars under the number 2280 and dated 04/06/1415 A. H. The question read as follows:

I would like to inform Your Eminence that hundreds of Sa`udis live temporarily in Britain for academic reasons such as students or for political reasons such as diplomats etc. Such people live in Britain for different periods mostly between one and five years. The point is that many inquiries have been raised as to whether rulings of travel i.e. combining and shortening Salah (Prayer), and breaking the Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan apply to the people concerned. People here disagree on this issue. Could you please clarify the Shar`y (Islamic legal) ruling on this matter? May Allah grant you success and help you to support truth and its people.

After the Committee had studied the question, it answered as follows:

officers and students who are sent outside their countries to accomplish certain goals and they intend to stay for the period which is mentioned in the question or for any other period that is more than four days, they are not entitled to follow any of the Rukhsahs (concessions) of travel i.e. shortening or combining the Salah (Prayer) or breaking the Sawm. Rather, it is Wajib (obligatory) on them to perform the complete Salah on time with the congregation and without combining two Salahs (Prayers) together. Similarly, they have to observe Sawm in its due time with other Muslims as they are regarded as being resident in Britain.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: We work for the Civil Defense and are charged every year with serving the pilgrims. We offer the obligatory congregational Salahs (Prayers) at different Masjids (mosques) whether inside places of performing the rites or outside them. We do not shorten the Salah (Prayer) as we begin staying in the same place early before the start of the Hajj season. Nevertheless, on the day of Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah), some of us shortened and combined Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers to imitate the pilgrims. Some others shortened the two Salahs without combining them while others prayed each one of the two Salahs at their due times and with the full number of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer). Everyone acted according to their own discretion and the same happens regarding the Salahs of Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) in Muzdalifah. Please clarify this matter for us and tell us whether the Salah that we performed is permissible? How do our colleagues who stay in `Arafah have to pray? How do this small group of us who are not pilgrims but who move with the pilgrims to all the places of performing rites have to pray? Provide us with your beneficial answer please. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: If you are not pilgrims and you intend to stay for more than four days, you must perform the full number of Rak`ahs for your Salah at its time. However, those who have already shortened or combined their Salahs do not have to make up for them as this was a doubtful matter for them.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 17854

Q 1, 2: What should a traveler do when he reaches his destination; should he combine or shorten Salah (Prayer)? What is the duration permissible for combining and shortening Salah for a traveler? Should a traveler, who resides near a Masjid (mosque) and stays for only three days, offer Salah in the Masjid (mosque) or in his residence? What is the ruling if the duration is more than three days?

A: if a traveler arrives at his destination and does not intend to stay for a specified period or intends to stay no more than four days, it is preferable for him to offer Salah in its time shortening the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) without combining prayers. Yet, if he offers Salah after a resident Imam (leader in congregational Salah) who does not shorten Salah, he must offer complete Salah following his Imam. In this case, he is not permitted to abandon the congregational Salah and prays alone for shortening Salah, if he is an individual.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 412)

Shortening Salah is only Rukhsah (concession) while the congregational Salah is obligatory. However, if the traveler intends to stay more than four days, he must offer the Salah in full, according to the opinion of the majority of scholars, which is the correct opinion. The basic rule states that a resident has to offer complete Salah unless his stay is for four days or less. During the Farewell Hajj, the Prophet (peace be upon him) intended to stay for four days, so he shortened Salah during these days before going to Mina.

The tenth question of Fatwa no. 19773

Q 10: is it permissible to shorten the Salah (Prayers) when serving the pilgrims on Hajj? It should be mentioned that the mission has a fixed duration.

A: If the residence period of participants in serving the pilgrims performing Hajj exceeds four days, provided they are aware of this, it is impermissible for them to shorten the Salah, for in this case they do not fall under the rulings of travel.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18356

Q 1: May Allah bless you and benefit Muslims by you. Here in our country, young men are used to going on desert camps during the weekends, they may cover a distance that exceeds or is less than fifty kilometers outside the city to the rugged desert landscape.

Your Eminence, my questions are: First: Is it permissible to shorten and combine the Salah in this case? Does their departure drop the obligation of attending Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer, since they might have failed to attend one or more Jumu'ah Prayers for that reason?

A: If the distance they cover is less than eighty kilometers, it is impermissible for them to shorten Salah, for this will not be considered travel for which Rukhsah (concession) prescribed by Islam becomes permissible. However, attending Jumu'ah Prayers will not be obligatory for them since they are away from their city, unless they are located at a place which is near a town where Jumu'ah Prayer is being established and the Adhan (call to Prayer) is heard, in this case it is obligatory for them to attend it.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 18425

Q 4: (A): When I travel from Riyadh to Al-Ta'if to visit one of my relatives, I stay there for two or more days. Is it permissible for me to shorten and combine Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer together at the time of the earlier one? Note that the time of 'Asr Prayer becomes due while I am still at my relative's place.

(B): Is it permissible for me to combine Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers at the time of the earlier one, offering each of them as a four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) i.e. without shortening them? Please, explain the issue in detail, for I want to circulate it for the benefit of the common people who are unaware of the ruling and may not accept my mere advice. May Allah make it useful!

A: It is permissible for you to shorten Salah, if you are staying for four days or less and do not intend to stay for a fixed time. However, it is better to offer each Salah at its due time without combining prayers. If you are praying behind an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who offers Salah in full, you should follow him in prayer. If you are alone, you should offer Salah with the congregation, not individually, and you should offer Salah in full. Indeed, Congregational Salah is Wajib (obligatory) but shortening salah for a traveler is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). Evidently, the obligatory acts are given priority over acts of Sunnah.

Q: There are, in our district, many military posts for the army and the border guards. The distances between these posts and Sharurah governorate are somewhat different; some are 80 km away from Sharurah like Akhashim post, some are 250 km like Umm Gharib post, and still some are 500 km away like Al-Kharkhir. The soldiers working in these posts are alone without their families for different periods of time. Some of them may stay for six months or a year while others may stay for an unfixed period. Large numbers, which may reach hundreds of Bedouins living around these posts.

My question is: Is it permissible for the said soldiers and Bedouins to shorten Salah or should they offer it in full? Is it permissible for them to offer the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer? Please, advise us, as we are confused and ask frequently about this matter.

A: The soldiers who do not know how long they may stay in the place they garrison which is more than 80 kilometers away from their original residence are allowed to shorten Salah, because the travel rulings are applied to them. The soldiers who know that they will stay for more than four days in this place must offer Salah in full, because the travel rulings in this case are not applicable to them. With regard to the Bedouins living around these stations, it is impermissible for them to shorten Salah, as they are not considered travelers when moving for shepherding without having a specific homeland.

Furthermore, the Prophet (peace be upon him), during his lifetime, did not order the nomadic Bedouins to shorten Salah. As for offering the Jumu'ah Prayer, it will not be valid unless there are permanent residents in this place. In this case, the non-resident soldiers and Bedouins should offer it with and according to those people.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 18800

Q 2: I went with my family on a trip 95 km away from our city. When the time of Al-Zuhr (Noon) Prayer became due, I combined both Al-Zuhr and Al-'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of Al-Zuhr, and Al-Maghrib (Sunset) and Al-'Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of Al-Maghrib on the basis that the distance necessary for shortening Salah (Prayer) is 85 km. My father and brother disagreed with me regarding combining prayers claiming that our journey was for mere entertainment, so we are not regarded as travelers.

In light of this, what is the ruling on what I did concerning combining prayers? Am I right?

A: If a person travels to a place 80 km or more away from their home,

(Part No. 6; Page No. 417)

it is recommended for them to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salahs (Prayer consisting of four units) to two Rak'ahs. They are also permitted to combine the Salahs, if there is a need for this, such as when in a hurry on a journey. However, if they reside, they should offer every Salah in its due time, shortening the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) without combining prayers, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did in Makkah and Mina during the Farwell Hajj. But, if the traveler intends to stay more than four days, they should offer complete Salah.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16657

Q 2: We are employed in a governmental department in the city of Al-Bahah. For work purposes, some may make a round with the manager for a distance covering about 300 km; this round takes about a week to cover all the centers in the area. My question is: Is it permissible or not to shorten and combine the Salah (Prayer) in this case? It should be mentioned that during this round, we may pass by the city of one of the members participating in this round.

A: If you leave your workplace intending to travel to a distance that is eighty kilometers or more, it is permissible for you to shorten Salah for this is a distance at which travel concessions are valid, whereas whoever amongst you passes by his city where his family lives, will not be entitled to shorten Salah during his passage by this city. However, if his family does not live in this city but are accompanying him at his workplace, it is permissible for him to shorten Salah on passing by his city, because he has already departed from it.

Is it permissible for me to shorten Salah during my stay in Al-Kharmah or not? If this is permissible, should I offer the Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) or not?

A: You must offer Salah in full during your stay in your working place, because you intend to stay more than four days whether you are staying alone or with your family. Therefore, the rulings of a traveler are not applied to you or your teaching colleagues. It is Mustahab (desirable) for you to offer the Sunnah Ratibah.

Is it considered combining two Salahs (Prayers) at the time of the later one?

The first question of Fatwa no. 16189

Q 1: i traveled with my family from Saudi Arabia to another Arab country where we stayed for more than 20 days combining and shortening the quatrains Salahs (Prayers), by offering two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) for Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, and two Rak'ahs for 'Isha' (Night) together with Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer which I prayed three Rak'ahs as it is.

However, I combined the Salah either at the time of the earlier or later prayer according to the circumstances, thus, I hope that you would provide me whether offering the Salah the way I have previously mentioned is valid or not? If it is not, what should I do?

A: If you had not intended to stay for a definite time, it is permissible for you to exercise shortening, for in this case the rulings of travel are still applicable to you. But, if you had intended to stay for a specific period that exceeds four days then it is impermissible for you to exercise shortening, for the rulings of travel will not be applicable to you in this case, therefore, you should complete your Salah. However, you should not repeat what you have offered, for you were not aware of the ruling, yet, you should not repeat this in the future for this is impermissible as we have already mentioned. As for combining the Salah, it is permissible for a traveler to exercise it on their way when going fast on the journey. Yet, it is more appropriate for the sojourner, even for a brief period, to offer each Salah on time, for this was the conduct of the Prophet (peace be upon him) during the Farewell Hajj, so what you did of combining the two Salahs while you were temporarily residing was inconsistent with the more appropriate conduct.

Fahd ibn 'Abdul-'Aziz Al Saud. We found the people of the KSA generous and hospitable to Arabs and Muslims in terms of comfort, safety, medical care and Islamic education through the local radio for the International Islamic Relief Organization where it broadcasts the recitation of the Glorious Qur'an and Hadith, in addition to the continuous follow up by the people in charge to all the needs. Anyway, we are grateful to the KSA as well as its respectable Arab people. O Shaykh, I have some questions for which I would like some answers, should we shorten our Salah because we are on a journey or complete it because we are non-travelers?

A: It is obligatory for a non-traveler (sojourner) who intends to stay more than four days to perform Salah in complete form because the rulings of travel have ceased to be applicable because of changing your intention to stay. If a person intends to stay for four days or less, or does not know the duration for which they will stay, they may offer the Salah shortened, according to which the Four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) is shortened to two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) because the rulings of travel still apply to them, except if a person performs Salah (Prayer) with those who should perform the Salah in full, in this case they have to complete their Salah, as does their Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). You belong to the third category who do not know how long they shall stay, so you may shorten the Four-Rak'ah Salah, except when you offer Salah with those who perform four Rak'ahs; in this case you must offer your Salah in complete form as them, as mentioned above, because the authentic Sunnah indicates that.

Q: We are a group of patients and their companions. Being nearly thirty people, the hotel gave us a Musalla (a place for Prayer). Some of us know the duration of their stay, as they have come to visit the doctor, and others do not know, given that we are not disabled, and some of us have been receiving treatment for a year now. Some people told us that we can shorten Salah (Prayer), and others told us that should perform the Salah in full. We are now confused whether we can shorten Salah or not and which is better. May Allah reward you.

Please reply via fax as soon as possible. We offer the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers congregationally. Please advise, may Allah reward you and grant you a long life to spend in His Obedience.

A: If a person travels a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah (Prayers) and stays in a city for more than four days, they are not considered travelers and should not avail themselves of the Rukhsahs (concessions) of traveling. Accordingly, the people mentioned in the question must not shorten or combine Salah, or break their Sawm (Fasting) in Ramadan. They should offer Salah fully, each at its prescribed time, and observe Sawm in Ramadan.

Q 1: We are a group of people working in a place 130 km away from Riyadh where we stay for 24 hours and then come back to Riyadh. We do this regularly for two weeks. How should we offer Salah during the period when we are in this place? Should we offer Salah in full or shorten and combine it? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, you are allowed to combine and shorten Salah.

Q 2: We are a group of soldiers who work mainly in Jeddah during the season of Hajj. How should we offer Salah during this period; should we offer it in full or shorten it? May we combine it only or is it permissible to shorten and combine it? May we shorten it only without combining? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: When you know that you will stay in Mina for more than four days, you have to offer Salah in full. If you do not know how long you will stay, you are allowed to shorten Salah offering each one at its time. Furthermore, there is nothing wrong with combining the two Salahs

Q: I work as an agricultural supervisor at some farms about 130 km away from my home. I travel to these farms every day. Sometimes, I stay there for two or three consecutive days. What is the ruling on shortening Salah (Prayer) for me? Some brothers from my city may also come and stay with me for a day or two on the farms and we shorten Salah. The same applies to your visitors who do not intend to stay more than four days. However, if you intend to stay more than four days, you are not permitted to shorten Salah. Q: On my way back home from travel, the time of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer was due when I was 20 Km away from my house. So, I stopped and offered Maghrib Prayer. Is it permissible for me to combine Maghrib and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of Maghrib in such a case? Note that I will reach my house before the time of 'Isha' Prayer is due, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). If this is not permissible, what is required of me regarding what I did?

A: It is permissible for a person who travels a distance more than 80 km to combine and shorten two Salahs during their journey at the time of the earlier or the later Salah according to what is most convenient for them until they reach their homeland. However, if the remaining distance before arrival is very short, it is better for them to offer the presently due Salah at its prescribed time and to offer the next Salah in full when they arrive at their homeland with the congregation in the Masjid (mosque). We usually go after the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, or sometimes before it, and return to 'Unayzah after the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, or sometimes before it. Do the rulings of traveling apply to us, in regard to shortening the four-Rak'ah Salahs (Prayers consisting of four units) and combining the Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, and the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers, as we do the return journey in one day? I hope that you will clarify this for us in detail, due to the great importance of this matter to me and many of the brothers.

A: If a Muslim travels a distance of 80 km or more, the rulings related to traveling apply to them and they can take the Rukhsah (concession) of shortening and combining two Salahs, as this distance takes a two-day journey by camel.

Q 1: I traveled from Makkah to Jeddah with two of my virtuous colleagues. Those two colleagues of mine as well as myself are not versed in rulings of travel such as shortening and combining the Salah (Prayer) etc. However, at an earlier time I had accompanied some scholars in the same travel and I saw them shortening the four-Rak'ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) and combining two Salahs (Prayers) at the time of the earlier or the later one. I tried to do the same during my travel with my two colleagues referred to above but they refused. I was thus obliged to oppose them and I offered alone Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers combining them at the time of Maghrib Prayer and shortening the latter. To come to the point, my two colleagues believe that the distance between Makkah and Jeddah is not a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah (Prayers), for in their opinion it is less than eighty kilometers. Conversely, the distance between the Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) and the airport according to experts is one hundred kilometers, and from Al-'Aziziyyah in Makkah from where we started our travel to the university region in Jeddah is about ninety kilometers. What is your opinion regarding this matter?

A: the minimum distance for which shortening Salah is permitted is that covered in a two-day journey by camel, which is about eighty kilometers. Such a distance is to be measured starting from the end of the populated area of the place from which a person is traveling to the start of the populated area of their destination. Consequently, going from Makkah to Jeddah and vice versa is no longer considered in our time as a travel, because the inhabited areas of the two towns are close to each other and thus cutting the distance between them is far less than the distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah (Prayers), for it is only about sixty kilometers. Accordingly, Rukhsahs (concessions) of traveling, like shortening the Salah and others, are not applicable to traveling between Makkah and Jeddah.

Q 2: does a traveler have to stop at the time of Salah to offer it or can they continue their journey even if it is of a distance like that between Makkah and Jeddah then they shorten the Salahs and combine them at the time of the later one?

A: When it is time for Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, a person who is on a travel is allowed to combine it with 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer at the time of the latter. The same is permissible with regard to Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers. However, if the concerned person reaches their town before performing shortened Salah, it will be obligatory on them to offer the complete number of Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) and it is not permissible to shorten the Salah, as they are now considered residents.

A: If the situation is as you mentioned, that you travel from the place of your residence to the place where you work with the intention of staying there from Saturday morning to Wednesday afternoon, you cannot make use of the Rukhsah of traveling as your stay lasts for more than four days and you are therefore considered residents.

A: A traveler who intends to stay in a place for more than 4 days has to perform Salah in full, because the rulings of travel stop being applicable to them, according to the Jumah (dominant majority of scholars). Is it permissible, if we finish before the Zhuhr Prayer, for us to shorten and combine it with the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer on the journey home? It is worth mentioning that we reach home before the 'Asr Prayer.

Also, is it permissible, if we finish work after the Zhuhr Prayer, for us to combine and shorten the Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers in our place of work? It must be noted that there are some places to stop and rest areas on the road home where we can offer Salah.

A: It is permissible, if the training center is at least 80 km from your hometown, for you to shorten and combine the two Salahs (Prayers) on your journey and in the workplace. This is so, unless you intend to stay at your workplace, or any other place, for more than four days, in this case, you have to perform Salah in full during your stay. However, when you are on your journey, you may shorten and combine the two Salahs, even if you reach home at the time of the second Salah, but it is better to offer the first Salah on the way and delay the second one and perform it after reaching your hometown.

Q: Every week, we travel as a group to a farm that lies past Darma', which is 80 km away. We leave on Wednesday morning and stay until Friday evening. We combine and shorten the Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers and perform them in congregation and all the other Salah (Prayers) until Friday. On Friday, we perform the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer in congregation and afterwards, perform a shortened 'Asr Prayer. Please give us a Fatwa (legal opinion by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this, bearing in mind that I perform the Salahs with the congregation, but I do not combine or shorten them. I offer them in full. I hope that you will advise as to whether I am correct in what I am doing.

A: If the situation is as you mentioned, the ruling of travelers not residents applies to you if you have intended to stay in that place for four days or less. Accordingly, it is permissible for you to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salahs (Prayers consisting of four units) to two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) and to combine the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in the time of either of them and likewise the Maghrib (Sunset) and the 'Isha' (Night) Prayers. It is not obligatory for you to perform the Jumu'ah Prayer in congregation; you can perform in its place the Zhuhr Prayer as on other days, offering a two-Rak'ah shortened Zhuhr Prayer, intending it to be a Zhuhr Prayer, with the recitation being subvocal. It is better for you and all those like you to perform Salah with other people if you can hear the Adhan (call to prayer) and to perform a complete Salah, because if a traveler performs a Salah with someone who is performing a complete Salah, they must also perform a complete Salah. Also, it is preferable for you not to combine your Salahs if you are performing them alone. If you want to perform the Jumu'ah Prayer, it is not permissible to perform it alone; you must perform it with a congregation.

Q: During the weekends and holidays, some people travel to their villages, farms and lands, which are more than 80 km away from their regular residences. when they go to their villages or farms they have places to stay that are reserved for them. Your Eminence, do these people come under the ruling of travelers and is it permissible for them to apply the ruling of combining and shortening their Salahs (Prayers)? Is it permissible for them to perform Salah in their houses and farms, even though the Masjids (Mosques) are close to them and they can hear the Adhan (Call to Prayer), under the pretext that they are travelers?

A: If the matter is as you have described, Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer is not obligatory upon them, because they do not come under the rulings for residents who live there permanently; rather the rulings for travelers apply to them. It is, therefore, legislated for them to shorten the Salahs and permissible for them to combine them. It is also permissible for them to perform them in their houses or on their farms if they are a congregation. However, it is better for them to pray with the people if they can hear the Adhan and to offer the Salah in full and not to combine Salahs. It is also better for them to not to combine Salahs if they are performing them in their places. It is Wajib (obligatory) for anyone who is staying on his own to perform Salah in a nearby Masjid if he can hear the Adhan, to earn the merits of performing Salah in congregation and because it is obligatory upon him to do so. He should also perform Salah in full and not shorten it and perform the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer with the congregation. Anyone who intends to stay somewhere for more than four days should offer Salah in full and with the congregation in the Masjid.

Q: The Director of the Department of Religious Affairs under the Land Forces of the eastern region has sent a telegram regarding soldiers of the military units that set up their tents and camped there since the current events started. The question is how these soldiers should offer Salah (Prayer) and whether it is Wajib (obligatory) on them to perform Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer at their current location? Peace be upon you.

A: According to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), soldiers who are stationed on borders have to perform Salah in the same manner of Salat-ul-Musafir (Prayer of a Traveler), and not Salat-ul-Khawf (Prayer in times of fear). They have to offer every Salah at its due time, but they have a Rukhsah (concession) to combine two Salahs (Prayers) at the time of the earlier or the later one. The rulings of travelers apply to them, because, as mentioned, they do not know the duration of their stay. However, it is better for them not to combine two Salahs together.

Q 4: If we live in a town and we left it on a Friday to a distance of about one hundred and twenty kilometers away; and we are about five men, do we have to pray Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer as four or two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer)?

A: If the reality is as mentioned, you should offer the four-Rak'ahs of Zhuhr (Noon) Salah shortened to two Rak'ahs, with the intention of praying Zhuhr. You are not required to perform Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer as long as you fall under the ruling of travelers.

Q 1: If I am travelling and I am about to offer 'Isha' (Night) Prayer shortened to two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) when I find a group of people offering Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer; do I have to join them directly from the first Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), then after the first Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) when the Imam stands up to offer the third Rak'ah I should offer Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer)?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 435)

Or do I have to wait until the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offers Taslim so that I offer it with him? Or do I have to join the congregation in the second and third Rak'ahs then make Taslim with the Imam? Which option is correct?

A: It is permissible for you to offer 'Isha' Prayer alone as two Rak'ahs as long as you are travelling. However, if you are resident, you may join the congregational Maghrib Prayer with the intention of praying 'Isha' and complete the number of Rak'ahs of 'Isha' (perform the fourth Rak'ah) once the Imam makes Taslim.

A: If the case is as you have mentioned above, it is permissible for you to shorten Salah during your travel between these two places. However, when you arrive at that village, it is obligatory on you to join the congregation of Muslims in the Masjid, since performing Salah in congregation is obligatory. Thus, you should perform with them Salah in its full Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) without shortening it.

Q: when traveling by public transport buses, some drivers do not stop when the time comes for the obligatory Salah (Prayer) so it can be performed, unless it is their wish to do so.

Even if the passengers ask them to stop, they will not do so, so we miss being able to perform the Salah in its due time. Are we considered sinners for this or not? Please enlighten us, may Allah enlighten you.

A: If the Salah whose time comes while you are on the bus is valid for you to combine with the one after it, during the time of the later of the two Salahs, such as combining the Maghrib (Sunset) prayer with the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer or the Zhuhr (Noon) prayer with the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, you can set your intention to combine them in the time of the later one. When you get off the bus, you can perform both Salahs at the time of the later of the two. However, if the Salah cannot be combined with another one, such as the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or the time of the later Salah is approaching its end, you must stop to perform the Salah in its prescribed time. It is obligatory on the officials responsible for the public transportation to pay attention to this point, so that they do not lead the Muslims to do wrong.

Q: We traveled from Ha'il to Makkah. During our journey, we saw a group of people who were performing the 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. We had not yet performed the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, because we were combining prayers. One of us joined this congregation and another performed the Zhuhr Prayer alone and then joined the congregation for the 'Asr Prayer. The one who joined the 'Asr Prayer with the congregation completed it with them, and after it performed the Zhuhr Prayer. We hope that you will explain to us what is correct.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 438)

A: First: If anyone is a traveler and is delaying the Zhuhr Prayer to the time of 'Asr, it is obligatory on them to perform the Salah in order. They should perform the Zhuhr Prayer first and then the 'Asr Prayer. If they come across people who are performing the 'Asr Prayer in congregation in a Masjid (mosque), they should join them intending to perform the Zhuhr Prayer. After finishing the Salah, they should perform the 'Asr Prayer, even if they do so alone. As for those who performed the 'Asr Prayer and then the Zhuhr Prayer, they have to perform the 'Asr Prayer again.

Second: If a traveler performs a Salah behind someone who is performing a complete Salah, it is obligatory on them to perform the Salah in full, because that is what is prescribed in this case.

The ninth and the tenth questions of Fatwa no. 19479

Q 9: Is it permissible to combine Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer especially when it is difficult to find a place for offering Salah (Prayer) outside the house, such as when we go shopping where it is difficult to find a Musalla (a place for Prayer) in such places?

A: It is obligatory to perform every Salah at its prescribed time because Allah says: \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) and because of the Sahih (authentic) Hadith of Gabriel (peace be upon him) regarding the prescribed times of Salah when he led the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the beginning and the end time of every Salah (on two consecutive days).

(Part No. 6; Page No. 439)

Gabriel said: \("The time \(of performing prayer\) is anywhere between these two times."\) (Related by Ahmad, Al-Nasa'y and others) Al-Bukhari said: (It is the soundest Hadith concerning the prescribed times of Salah). It is not permissible to combine between Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and 'Asr (Afternoon) Salah or Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer except for a Shar'y (Islamic legal) reason such as travel, sickness and suchlike. As for shopping and the pretext that there is no place for Salah, it is not a legal excuse to delay Salah or to combine it with another one. It is obligatory upon Muslims to keep to Salah, give it much care and perform it at its due times.

Q 10: is it permissible to combine Salah in the hall of the airport before we leave our city, especially when it is difficult to find a Musalla on the plane?

A: If the airport is outside the city, you may combine and shorten Salah because the legality of your applying the Rukhsahs (concessions) of travel have just begun. If the airport is inside the city, it is not permissible to apply the Rukhsahs of travel until the plane takes off and leaves populated areas.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17530

Q 3: Someone travels the distance beyond which it is permissible to shorten Salah, and wants to combine

(Part No. 6; Page No. 440)

Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with `Isha' (Night) Prayer. He delays them until after 12 pm. Must he offer `Isha' first then Maghrib, or make up for them? When he combines two Salahs at the time of the earlier one and reaches his country at the time of the second Salah, must he repeat the second Salah or not?

A: The basic principle is that a traveler is allowed to combine two Prayers at the time of the earlier or the latter. The Prophet (peace be upon him), while traveling before the time of Salah was due, used to postpone the first Salah and combine it with the second one at the time of the latter. When he traveled after the start of the time of the first Salah, he (peace be upon him) used to combine the second Salah with the first one at the time of the first Salah. Consequently, it is permissible for you to combine `Isha' with Maghrib Prayer at the time of the latter. In this case, you should offer Maghrib Prayer first and then `Isha' Prayer. However, it is impermissible for you to delay the two combined Salahs until the time of the second is over. If you reach your country at the time of the second Salah, which you combined with the first Salah at the time of the earlier one; this is enough and you do not need to repeat it, because you have already combined and performed the two Salahs.

Q 1: What is the ruling on a traveler who combined the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'isha' (Night) Prayers after the end of the prescribed time for the Maghrib Prayer and before the start of the time for the 'isha' Prayer?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 441)

What should be done in this case?

A: The time for the Maghrib Prayer ends with the disappearance of the red twilight and the time for the 'Isha' Prayer starts immediately after, without any time interval between the two Salahs (Prayers). So if a traveler performs the Maghrib Prayer after the disappearance of the red twilight, intending to combine it with 'Isha' at the time of the later Salah, they have acted correctly and all praise is to Allah Alone. It is also permissible for a traveler to combine the 'Isha' Prayer with the Maghrib Prayer before the disappearance of the red twilight, as this is combining the Salah in the time of the earlier Salah.

The first question of Fatwa no. 16657

Q 1: Here in Al-Bahah, it sometimes rains a lot in spring and sometimes little. Sometimes it rains in the time of the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer while we are at work. the places where the workers actually work vary in distance from the workplace from one worker to another, up to around 50 km. Some of the workers want to perform the Salah (Prayers) in the workplace Masjid (mosque), combining the Zhuhr and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers. My question is: Is this permissible for us to combine Salahs under these conditions or not? Some of the workers are far from the city, as I mentioned, and if they come from their work and the time for the 'Asr Prayer comes, it might be raining. Please advise us on this matter.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 442)

A: It is not permissible for you to combine the Salahs under these circumstances, because there is no good reason. It is Wajib (obligatory) upon you to perform the Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers in their respective prescribed times. The first question of Fatwa no. 18912

Q 1: I often travel to Khamis Mushait which is 350 km away from my home in Bishah. I have the following questions:

1- What is the ruling of shortening Salah (Prayer) in this case?

2- Sometimes when I intend to shorten the Salah because I will return to Bishah within four days, I decide to stay for more than four days, so I perform my Salah in its full Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). What is the ruling on the Salah that I shorten before deciding to stay for more than four days?

3- I travel from Khamis to Bishah where I live, and shorten and combine Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer on my way home.

When I arrive at Bishah sometimes people are performing 'Isha' (Night) Prayer or its Adhan (call to Prayer) is being announced. Is it obligatory on me to perform 'Isha' (Night) Prayer again?

A: It is permissible for you to shorten Salah during your travel from Bishah to Khamis Mushait. Also, you are permitted to combine between Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer or Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer at the time of the earlier or the later ones according to what is most convenient for you, particularly if you speed the travel. It is permissible for you to shorten the four-Rak'ah Salahs (Prayers consisting of four units) and perform them as only two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) in the place where you intend to stay for four days or less. If you are accompanied by a group of passengers you are to offer the Salah with them shortened; but if you travel alone, you should join the congregation (in the Masjid). Shortening the Salah is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), whereas performing Salah in congregation is Wajib (obligatory). A Muslim should not leave an obligatory act for the sake of another that is Sunnah. The Salah you shortened before you decide to stay for more than four days is valid. Actually, it is not obligatory on you to repeat the 'Isha' (Night) Prayer that you performed at the time of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer on your journey back home, thus combining the two at the time of the earlier prayer, then your arrival at the time of Adhan for 'Isha', because you applied a Rukhsah (concession) granted to you by the Shari'ah (Islamic law). Additionally, you performed both the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer at the times prescribed by the Shari'ah for your case.

Q 1: What is the ruling on combining two Salahs (Prayers) for a traveler who stops over at a town intending to stay there for a while to be able to catch the time of the next Salah?

A: It is preferable for whoever stops over at a town for a period in which shortening is permissible to offer every Salah on time shortened without combining two of them together, because when the Prophet (peace be upon him) stayed at Mina during the Farewell Hajj, he (peace be upon him) offered every Salah on time shortened to two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) without combining the Salah.

Whereas whoever travels fast without stopping should shorten and combine Salah, for this will be easier for him. However, if the traveler is alone and there is a residing congregation, he should offer the Salah with them in full number of Rak'ahs, for offering the Salah in congregation is Wajib (obligatory), while shortening it is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), and Wajib should not be left for Sunnah.

The third and sixth questions of Fatwa no. 17164

Q 3: What is the correct description of the Prayer of a traveler? What should a traveler, who did not offer Zhuhr (noon) Prayer, do when he finds the congregational praying the `Asr (afternoon) Prayer?

A 3: The prayer of a traveler is the same as that of a resident, except for that the traveler is allowed to shorten the four-Rak`ah Prayer to a two-Rak`ah one. Furthermore, he is allowed to combine two Prayers and perform them at the time of either one, if necessary during his journey. As for the traveler who did not offer Zhuhr Prayer and finds the congregational `Asr Prayer, he, according to the preponderant view, must join the Imam with the intention of offering Zhuhr Prayer. There is no harm regarding the diversity of types of Salah you both offer.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 445)

When he finishes Zhuhr Prayer, he may offer `Asr in congregation if possible; otherwise, he may offer it individually.

Q 6: is it impermissible for a traveler to shorten Salah if he is only one person? If yes, please provide evidence.

A 6: A traveler, alone or in a group, is allowed to avail himself of the traveling Rukhsahs (concessions) because of the general meaning of the evidence regarding this. However, if he finds a group of residents, he may join them in the congregational Salah and offer it in full. He may not offer Salah individually in this case.

and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, others combine both Salah (Prayers) and do not shorten them, and a third group performs the Zhuhr Prayer only? What is the correct option in these circumstances? Please give us Fatwa (legal opinion by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this and may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Those who live on the air bases should perform the Zhuhr Prayer in full, if its prescribed time becomes due before traveling; they should not combine the 'Asr Prayer with the Zhuhr Prayer, as they have not yet commenced their travel. Those who live in cites outside the bases, whose buildings are separated from the air bases, are permitted to combine and shorten the Zhuhr and 'Asr Prayers, if the time for Zhuhr Prayer arrives before traveling, because they will have commenced their travel by then.

Q: if the time of Salah (Prayer) becomes due and one is traveling in a car, while not in a state of Taharah (ceremonial purification), and cannot perform Tayammum (dry ablution), how is one to pray?

A: If the time of Salah is due while a person is traveling in a car, they must stop and make Wudu' (ablution) if water is available. Otherwise, they are to perform Tayammum. It is permissible to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of the earlier or the later one. The same applies to Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers.

Q: if was traveling back home and i intended to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) prayers at the time of the latter on my arrival. Is it permissible for me to shorten the two Salahs (Prayers)?

A: When a traveler reaches their town, it becomes impermissible for them to shorten the Salah (Prayer) for their state of traveling ends once they enter their town. The same applies if the time of Salah starts before a traveler reaches their town. This is because the ruling in question is based on the traveler's condition at the time they are to perform Salah not at the time when Salah is due.

First question of Fatwa no. 17377

Q 1: At the city of Khurfakan in the Emirate of Sharjah, buses come to transport around four hundred female students to the City of Al `Ayn in the Emirate of Abu Dhabi. These buses move at half past two, after Jumu'ah prayer, and the time for the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer expires on the way as these students reach the university after the start of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. The question now is whether these female students have to pray `Asr Prayer while sitting in their buses as they can not pray standing obviously because of the unavailability of space, or must they combine `Asr Prayer with Zhuhr Prayer at the time of the latter? Please provide us with your beneficial answer. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: These female students must perform the `Asr Prayer at its time. They have thus either to delay their journey in order to start it after the time `Asr Prayer is due, or to get off the buses during the journey in a safe place to perform `Asr Prayer. It is impermissible for them to combine `Asr Prayer with Zhuhr Prayer at the time of the latter before travelling. Likewise, it is impermissible for them to delay `Asr Prayer until the time Maghrib Prayer begins, or to pray sitting in their buses.

Q: We are a group of soldiers who are located at the northern border. In the beginning we used to move to a different place every week, so we used to shorten the four-Rak`ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) and combine the Zhuhr (Noon) with the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, and the Maghrib (Sunset) with the `Isha' (Night) Prayers. However, we have now been settled in one place for two months, and we live in tents and houses where we have electric motors and some appliances. We would like to inquire about the ruling on combining and shortening Salah (Prayer), although we are sure that we will be staying in the same place for an extended period, as we are informed by officials a week before moving. Please advise as soon as possible. May Allah reward you. May Allah's Peace be upon Muhammad, his family and Companions!

A: If the situation is as you mentioned, that you stay in the same place for a long time, you should offer Salah normally at its time, not shorten it, as you are in this case not considered travelers.

Q: We live in Makkah Al-Mukarramah and work as teachers in a school located in Al-Layth governorate. We travel daily from Makkah to the school where we catch the Zhuhr Prayer in this governorate. We shorten and combine the Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers. the school is 135 kilometers away from Makkah. We reach Makkah before the time for the `Asr Prayer is due. Is our Salah valid? Please enlighten us, may Allah reward you!

A: The Salah you offer is valid because you travel a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Prayers. Arriving to your residence before the time of `Asr is due has nothing to do with the validity of offering it with Zhuhr. You avail yourselves of the prescribed concessions of traveling and perform your obligations. However, it is better to offer Zhuhr Prayer at its due time before traveling and postpone `Asr Prayer to be offered in full in your country, if you are sure of catching it in congregation.

Q 2: is it permissible for a man who travels to visit his relatives for a period of three days to offer Salah (Prayers) at home and shorten them?

Q: I traveled back from the Philippines after the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and so I combined the Zhuhr and 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the airport. The problem was that the airplane traveled from the East to the West, so it was daylight for a long time. We reached Dhahran airport at 8:00 pm in Saudi Arabia time zone, but that was 4:00 am in the Philippines. So I combined the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers that we had missed, even though the time is different between the two countries, because of time zone differences. The question is: should we perform Maghrib and 'Isha' Prayers according to the time in the Philippines or that of the country we landed in? Please advise me and may Allah reward you with the best!

offering Salah on an airplane or a bus

The third, fourth, fifth and sixth questions of Fatwa no. 15562

Q 3: On our way back to KSA while on an airplane, Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Salahs (Prayers) became due. However, we did not offer them while on the airplane knowing that their time had elapsed and we would pray them when we would reach Saudi Arabia as we know that their time had not yet elapsed in the Kingdom where we would offer them. What is your opinion on this issue?

A: As for Salah whose time becomes due and then elapses while you are on an airplane, if it can be combined with the next-in-time Salah such as Zhuhr (Noon) and 'Asr (Afternoon) Salahs or Maghrib and 'Isha' Salahs, it should be delayed and combined with the following Salah at the time of the latter. This is if the airplane lands before the time of the second Salah elapses. Otherwise, the two Salahs should be offered while on the airplane shortened and combined at the time of any of them. However, if the first Salah is due before taking off, you should offer it combining it with the following Salah at the time of the earlier one before you board the airplane. However, if the Salah whose time becomes due and then elapses while you are on an airplane is Fajr (Dawn) Salah, you have to offer it at its due time while on board and you may not delay it.

Q 4: While traveling, the Zhuhr Salah, for example, became due and I intended to combine it with 'Asr Salah at the time of the latter. I then offered Salah, five minutes, for example, before 'Asr was due. What is the ruling on this? Have I offered the two Salahs before they were due? Or, have I offered them at the time of Zhuhr?

A: If you combine two Salahs before the time of the first Salah elapses, it will be a combination at the time of the earlier Salah, which is permissible if one is traveling for a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah.

Q 5: Suppose we are about to travel outside the KSA and we went to the airport where we combined Zhuhr and 'Asr Salahs at the time of Zhuhr to know that the flight was cancelled after sitting on the plane for a while. If we go home, should we re-offer 'Asr Salah in congregation? Or, have we already offered it?

A: If you go to the airport intending to travel and you combined Zhuhr and 'Asr Salahs at the time of the earlier one to be informed that the flight is cancelled, and so you returned to your homes, your Salah is valid as it meets the conditions, and its validity is not affected by the cancellation of the flight.

Q 6: We live in the city of Jeddah. we offer Salah combining and shortening it when traveling abroad. After months, one scholar told us that we should neither combine nor shorten Salahs at the airport as it is within the boundaries of the built-up areas of the city. What should we do? Should we re-offer the Salahs we had performed before, bearing in mind that no one knows the number of Salahs we had performed. What should we do?

A: If it is certain that the airport is within the boundaries of the built-up areas of the city of which you are inhabitants, it will be impermissible for you to shorten Salah therein as you will not be considered on a journey. Moreover, those of you who had shortened Salahs have to re-perform them, as their Salah will not be valid.

Q 7: is one exempted from observing Sawm (Fast) on the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month) while traveling? Or, is it necessary to observe Sawm on other days of the month in compensation? what is the ruling regarding Salat-ul-Duha (supererogatory Prayer after sunrise)?

A: Performing Salat-ul-Duha as well as observing Sawm on the White Days is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet), which is not obligatory either while traveling or residing. Rather, whoever performs them will receive reward and whoever leaves them will not be sinful whether traveling or resident.

Q: How should airplane passengers offer Salah (Prayer) while on board and on landing at an airport when passengers are banned from leaving the plane? Is it permissible to offer Salah while sitting in the chair in such cases and at such times?

A: Anyone who embarks on traveling by air has to offer the due Salah non-shortened before going on board unless the airport is outside the borders of the country, in which case it will be unobjectionable to shorten Salah.

However, if another Salah is due whose time will not elapse before the flight ends, one should offer it after landing even during the last portion of its prescribed time. If the flight ends after the elapse of the Salah's time, a person should offer it on board according to their ability. To clarify, if the person can stand, bow and prostrate themselves on the airplane's ground, they have to do so. Otherwise, they should offer it while sitting on the chair moving their heads downwards indicating Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud (prostration). In such a case, they have to face the Qiblah (Ka'bah-direction faced for Prayer) whenever possible.

However, if a person is to continue traveling and the first Salah becomes due before going on board, they should combine the two Salahs at the time of the former. Moreover, if the first Salah is due while on board, when the person knows that the airplane will land before the elapse of the second Salah's time, they should delay the first combining it with the second at the time of the latter. If a person knows that the flight will continue until after the elapse of the second Salah's time, they should combine the two Salahs while on board at the time of any of them that is easier while shortening the Salah consisting of four Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) to two Rak'ahs.

Fatwa no. 21805

I have a problem regarding offering Salah (Prayer) on foreign aircrafts while traveling to remote areas, as the journey may last for ten hours, which makes a person unable to delay the Salah till one disembarks from the plane, for it may take off at the time of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and land after Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. How should we offer Salah in this case? Should we offer it on the plane according to ability or inability of standing, and also with respect to facing the Qiblah (direction faced for Prayer towards the Ka'bah) if we are unable to locate its direction or find one who can guide us to it.

We hope that your Eminence would elaborately clarify what we should do regarding offering the Salah on the plane in case the distance is short or long, and whether the due time extends until the plane lands or not, May Allah reward you and guide your steps.

A: If the reality is as mentioned, when the time of Salah becomes due while the plane is still flying and this Salah is one that cannot be combined with the next-in-time Salah such as Fajr (Dawn), 'Asr (Afternoon), or 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, and you are afraid that the time expires if you delay it until the plane lands and you become able to leave it, it is not permissible for you to delay the Salah until its prescribed time expires; rather, you should offer it on time on the plane before the due time expires as much as you can, either by standing, offering Ruku' (bowing) and Sujud (prostration) at your seat or by offering it in any other place on the plane. This is obligatory on you. However, if you cannot stand and it is difficult for you to do so, you may offer the Salah while sitting and make a gesture for Ruku' and Sujud, while making the Sujud lower than Ruku', for Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Also, it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Offer Salah standing and if you cannot, then sitting; and if you cannot, then lying on your side.﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari and Al-Nasa'y) As for facing the Qiblah during the Faridah (obligatory Salah), you should face it in all Salahs as much as you can, such that if the plane for instance deviates away from the Qiblah during the Salah, you should turn towards it whenever it deviates, because facing the Qiblah is a condition for the validity of Salah; but, if you are unable to face the Qiblah, in this case, there is no blame on you, and your Salah will be valid In sha'a-Allah (If Allah wills), for Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And to Allāh belong the east and the west, so wherever you turn \(yourselves or your faces\) there is the Face of Allāh \(and He is High above, over His Throne\).﴾ Moreover, you can identify the Qiblah by asking the pilot or his crew, for they have instruments which clarify this, but if you fail to identify it, you should try hard to detect it and offer your Salah in accordance with your surmise.

The same applies if the Salah can be combined with the next-in-time Salah, but you will not be able to offer it when you leave the plane at the last of the prescribed time of the next Salah, because the journey extends until the time of the next Salah expires, in this case you should offer both Salahs on the plane by shortening them as previously clarified. It is also permissible for you to combine them at the due time of any of them.

However, it is impermissible to delay both Salahs until the time of the next one expires, but if the Salah is combinative with the next one such as Maghrib and 'Isha', or Zhuhr and 'Asr, and can be offered at the last time of the second one after leaving the plane, it is better to delay it until you offer it on the ground, because in this case the time of the second Salah is also valid for the first; this discharges the obligation of offering the Salah according to its perfect description. Furthermore, if the journey is a short one such that you can offer the Salah on time after arriving at your destination, it is better to delay it until the last of its prescribed time in order to offer it on ground. Yet, if you offer the Salah whose time becomes due while you are on board of the plane at the first of its prescribed time, performing it according to ability, this will be permissible and will count as sufficient for you.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 20514

Q 4: is it permissible for a Muslim who travels by plane or bus to offer Salah (Prayer) while sitting in their seat?

A: A Muslim who travels by bus or plane may combine between two Salahs, if the time of the first Salah becomes due before boarding, in case the airport or the bus station is located outside their city - which is an inconsiderable factor if the airport is located in another city because they are already on a travel - or after alight if they land before the time of the second Salah expires.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 461)

However, if flying on the plane will extend for a long time which will make it impossible to perform the two Salahs at the time of the earlier or the latter one on land, it is permitted to perform the Salah on board of the plane, the bus or the train according to ability. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\)

The second and third questions of Fatwa no. 17952

Q 2: His return journey started at five p.m. He is expected to arrive at 12 or 1 am. He asked the driver whether they would stop to offer Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. He told him that they will not stop. When the prescribed time of Maghrib Prayer became due, the man started offering Salah (Prayer) inside the bus, but it stopped so that the passengers could perform Maghrib Prayer. The man became confused whether to complete his Salah or join the congregation which is better and preferable! Then, he decided to stop his Salah and join the congregation. What is the ruling on what he did?

(Part No. 6; Page No. 462)

Is he to blame for that?

A: If a person starts offering Salah (Prayer) alone in a bus while moving and then the bus stops so that the passengers can offer Salah in congregation, they should consider the Salah which they started performing as a Nafilah (supererogatory prayer) and should complete it and then pray with the congregation.

Q 3: Is it permissible for a traveler to combine Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, if the bus will arrive at 11 p.m. or 2 a.m.?

A: If the time of Maghrib Salah is due while traveling, it is permissible for the traveler to delay Maghrib and perform it with 'Isha' Prayer at the time of the latter prayer.

Q: what should a Muslim do when they travel on a long journey and the time of the obligatory Salah (Prayer) becomes due while they are on the bus? Should he perform Salah by making gestures or perform it when they arrive?

A: If the time of the obligatory Salah becomes due while a Muslim is traveling by bus, and this Salah can be combined with the one following it, such as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with 'Asr (Afternoon) Prayer or Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, they should make the intention to combine the two Salahs, and after getting off the bus should perform the Salah with the one following it. If the Salah cannot be combined with the following one, such as Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, or 'Asr and 'Isha' Prayers and the bus will not stop until the prescribed time expires, then they should perform it on board of the bus, according to their ability. A traveler praying behind a resident Imam

Fatwa no. 19408

Q: I was traveling with one of the Muslim brothers and came to a Masjid (mosque) at the time of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and performed Maghrib Prayer in congregation, with the full number of Rak'ahs. Afterwards, we found a group of people offering Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer and joined them with the intention of offering 'Isha' (Night) Prayer in short form. After the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) stood up for the third Rak'ah, we said Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and left. My question is: Is our Salah valid or should we continue the Salah with the Imam until he offers Taslim? If our Salah is invalid, what should we do? Should we repeat Salah? Could you kindly advise? May Allah reward you.

A: Joining a congregation that was offering Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with the intention of praying 'Isha' shortened to two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) is not valid because when a traveler offers Salah behind a non-traveling Imam, he must follow him and complete the Salah; shortening Salah is not permissible for him because of the Hadith reported by Musa ibn Salamah: ﴿"We were with Ibn 'Abbas in Makkah, I said, 'When we are with you, we offer four Rak'ahs and when we go back to our dwellings, we offer two Rak'ahs.' He said, 'This is the Sunnah \(way\) of Abu Al-Qasim \(i.e. Muhammad peace be upon him\).'"﴾ (Related by Ahmad, Muslim and others in similar wordings) Consequently, you have to repeat this Salah offering four Rak'ahs.

Q 2: If I was on a journey and found a group of people offering Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation, is it permissible for me to offer two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) with them only and end my Salah or should I offer Salah individually? I would like Your Eminence to explain the manner of shortening Salah that all Muslims should follow.

A: Applying the Rukhsah (concession) of shortening Salah during travel is only Mustahab (recommended), not Wajib (obligatory). Thus, it is permissible for a traveler to offer Salah in full. However, it is only permissible, not Mustahab, to combine Salah when necessary unless a traveler is riding as a passenger. If a traveler offers Salah behind a non-traveling Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who is offering Salah in full, the traveler must follow the Imam, i.e. offer complete number of Rak'ahs (units of Prayer). In this case it is not permissible for the traveler to shorten Salah, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \("The Imam is appointed to be followed, so do not differ from him."\) It is not permissible for you to offer Salah alone as long as you find a group of people offering Congregational Salah. Observing Congregational Salah is Wajib, so pray with the congregation and offer Salah in full if the congregation does so.

people for a distance of 150 kilometers. During the journey, we passed by a group of people at the time of `Isha' (Night) Prayer. As we began to offer the Salah, one of the group reminded me to shorten the Salah as we were travelers. Another one led us in the Salah. When he completed two Rak`ahs and recited Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/last unit of Prayer), he rose to complete the other two Rak`ahs. However, I remained sitting until the Imam completed the Salah and recited Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and I recited Taslim after him. Is my Salah valid in this case? If not, what should I do? What should those whom I was traveling with and offered Salah do? I appreciate your guidance, may Allah bless you!

A: It is an act of Sunnah for a traveler not to shorten a prayer if his Imam completes a four-Rak`ah Prayer. He should follow the Imam because shortening Salah is a concession not an obligation. You have to repeat the Salah in full.

The third question of Fatwa no. 13840

Q 3: Some people combine and shorten Salah (Prayer) after arriving at the destination country on the grounds that their journey is for a week. Once, I saw a person in the Masjid (mosque) offering two Rak'ahs (units of Prayer) alone and then he offered two Rak'ahs with the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). When I asked him why he did not complete his Salah he told me that he is a traveler, so he is allowed to shorten and combine prayers. Is this permissible?

A: First: It is not permissible for a traveler to combine or shorten Salah after arriving at a place where they will stay for more than four days.

(Part No. 6; Page No. 467)

Second: If a traveler offers Salah behind a resident Imam, the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to complete the Salah with the Imam and it is not permitted for them to shorten it. However, if the traveler does so, they are required to offer it again.

A: It is permissible for you to lead them in Salah, but you have to inform them that you are going to shorten Salah (Prayer) in order that they complete their Salah after you finish your Salah just as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did with the people of Makkah on the Conquest of Makkah; and if you complete the Salah you are leading them in, there is nothing wrong in this.

Excuses for abandoning Jumu`ah and congregational Salah

The second question of Fatwa no. 15562

Q 2: While staying in some Muslim countries, we prefer not to go to the Masjid (mosque) after hearing the Adhan (call to Prayer) for fear that we will see semi-naked woman and be exposed to Fitnah (temptation). Also, they practice some Bid`ahs (innovations in Islam) during their Salah (Prayer). Therefore, we offer Salah in congregation in one of our hotel rooms after pronouncing the Adhan and the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer). What is your opinion on this?

A: It is better for you to go to the Masjid upon hearing the Adhan. However, you can avoid any temptations by lowering your gaze or taking an alternate way. As for Bid`ahs committed in some Masjids, this can be dealt with by going to a Masjid in which no Bid`ahs are committed if possible. If this is not possible, it is by no means permissible to offer Salah being led by an Imam who commits Bid`ah Shirkiiyyah (innovation in Islam tantamount to associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship), such as supplicating to other than Allah or seeking the help of other than Allah. As for Bid`ahs that cannot be described as Shirkiiyyah, such as reciting Du`a' (supplication) in congregation along with raising hands after obligatory Salah, they do not affect the validity of offering Salah in the Masjid although you should advise those who do so.

Q: As soldiers, our job necessitates us to patrol districts and markets. Sometimes, we go on patrols when Salah (Prayer) is due and the Adhan (call to Prayer) is proclaimed. What is your opinion; should we offer Salah in congregation or wait until those offering Salah leave the Masjid (mosque) and then offer Salah after they go back to their markets and work? Actually, we fear that thieves, subversives or the like, practice their activities during Salah time.

A: You should offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in the nearest Masjid after the last Adhan marking the entrance of the Khatib (preacher) is proclaimed. If there is a danger that might negatively affect the task you are entrusted with, i.e. maintaining order, there will be nothing wrong with not offering the Jumu`ah Prayer and the congregational Salah. Instead, you may offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in place of Jumu`ah and together offer Salah in congregation after people finish the first congregation. Actually, this is meant to protect public interest and to ward off public danger.

Q 1: Is it permissible for me to obey my father's order not to offer Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque), bearing in mind that going to the Masjid

A: Offering Salah in the Masjid is obligatory for men, unless there is a Shar`i (Islamic legal) excuse. Accordingly, you may abandon offering Salah in congregation and offer Salah at home if going to the Masjid endangers your life.

Q 1: Does an ordinary disease constitute an excuse for not offering Salah (Prayer) in congregation?

A: A disease that constitutes an excuse for not offering Salah in congregation is the sort of disease that may make it difficult and inconvenient for one who is ill to go to the Masjid (mosque). Evidence can be found in the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him) that reads: \(Whoever hears the Adhan \(call to Prayer\) and is not prevented by some excuse to respond to it, his Salah \(at home\) will not be accepted.\) People asked Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) about what a valid excuse is and he said: "Fear or illness." Related by Ibn Majah, Al-Daraqutny, Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim through an authentic Isnad (chain of narrators). The Prophet (peace be upon him) \(became sick and when his disease became aggravated, he said: "Tell Abu Bakr to lead the Salah."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Q: I suffer from permanent flatulence and excessive gases in the stomach and bowels. Their sounds embarrass me because they are heard even by those nearby. This also affects my Khushu` (the heart being submissively attuned to the act of worship) and concentration during Salah (Prayer). In fact, I become so distracted that I am unaware of what the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) says or the number of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) I have performed. Thus embarrassed, I refrain from going to the Masjid (mosque). Moreover, all doctors I have seen say that the disease I suffer from is irritable bowel syndrome (IBS or spastic colon) and it is an incurable disease. Am I sinful for not going to the Masjid and not offering Salah in congregation?

A: The disease mentioned above is not a valid excuse for not going to the Masjid to offer Salah in congregation. You should seek Allah's help, put these evil whisperings aside and ask Allah to cure you (we ask Allah to help you).

Q 2: If dinner was served before the present Salah (Prayer) was due, but the Adhan (call to Prayer) was proclaimed while we were eating, should we stop eating and resume our meal after offering Salah? Or, should we first have our meal and then go to offer Salah?

A: If Salah becomes due while a group of people are having their dinner, they should first complete their meal and then offer Salah after finishing with it. This is supported by the Hadith that reads: \(If dinner is served and Salah becomes due, one should start with dinner.\)

Fatwa no. (20744)

Q: We, the teaching personnel of `Abdul-Rahman Al-Ghafiyy Secondary School in Jeddah, offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation along with our students, thanks to Allah. However, supervising the great number of students is a problem. In fact, we sometimes miss some Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) and sometimes do not perform the supervision duty properly as we try not to miss congregational Salah (Prayer). Moreover, some students remain at the classrooms and thus miss congregational Salah. Your Eminence Shaykh, we suggested that two congregations should be made; one to be offered by some teachers before the students offer it so that they may later supervise students while offering Salah. However, we do not know whether doing so is in line with Shari`ah (Islamic law) rulings and whether we are rewarded for doing so. To feel assured, we sent this letter to Your Eminence so that you might instruct us. Actually, we hope that Your Eminence will send us your answer in a written form, along with some advice to your sons, so that our brothers can read it.

May Allah safeguard you and make you beneficial for Muslims.

A: There is nothing wrong with appointing supervisors for students while offering congregational Salah so that discipline may be maintained in this regard even if it leads to missing the first congregational Salah. Actually, they are performing the task of propagation of virtue and prevention of vice, which is an indispensable task. In this regard, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: I have considered ordering the Iqamah \(call to start the Prayer\) to be proclaimed, then ask someone to lead the people in Salah, and then go to those

I suffer from nervous disorder, anger and worry. My heart starts beating strongly and epilepsy and weakness take over me. Am I excused for not attending Jum`ah Prayer in this case and am I blameless for offering it at home?

A: If the case is as you mentioned, you are excused from the obligation of offering Jum`ah Prayer and should offer four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer at home. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ And: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ We hope that Allah will give you the reward of attending congregational Salah as long as you are keen to attend it but you are prevented by an excuse.

Q: Some commercial stores and individual properties are exposed to the danger of being burglarized by unscrupulous people.

Thieves seize the time when security patrol officers stop to perform Salah (Prayer) in congregation in the Masjid (mosque). Respected Shaykh, you know that we are charged with the duty of safeguarding the property of citizens and residents and the country security. Therefore, we ask Your Eminence: Is it permissible for officers entrusted with patrolling squares to delay the performance of Salah till those praying come out of the Masjid (immediately without any significant delay)? What is the opinion of Your Eminence on this issue? May Allah safeguard you and help you to serve Islam and Muslims!

A: The basic rule in this regard is that Salah in congregation in the Masjids is obligatory for adult males and may not be delayed except for a Shar`y (Islamic legal) excuse. Therefore, the status of officers whose work is to patrol squares to maintain order and to protect people's properties against any outrage is a valid excuse to not attend Salah in congregation. Thus stated, they may offer Salah at their posts so long as this excuse exists, bearing in mind that necessity is assessed according to its extent. However, I would like to praise your concern in this respect. I ask Allah to make you keener to comprehend the religion and safeguard Muslim interests.

Q 3: My apartment is on the fifth floor and I suffer from a chronic heart condition.

I have been subject to medical treatment for seven years now. Sometimes, I hear the Adhan (call to Prayer) and I feel able to descend the stairs and pray in the Masjid (mosque). Other times, going up and down the stairs wears my heart out and affects my health, in general. Is performing Salah (Prayer) at home whenever I find myself unable to perform it in the Masjid permissible or not?

I ask you this, knowing that the Messenger of Allah, (peace be upon him) did not give a Rukhsah (concession) to a blind man, who lived beside the Masjid, to perform Salah at home. Thus, I ask, if I am seriously ill, am I permitted to perform Salah at home or must I go up and down the five floors at the time of every Salah? Kindly note that, while I am here, I never miss any Salah in the Masjid, as I live in a one-floor-apartment, near the Masjid. Answer me, may Allah benefit you as you benefit others and guide them to the right path!

A: If, as you mentioned, you live on the fifth floor and suffer from a heart condition, and going up and down the stairs negatively affects your health, then you may perform Salah at home whenever you feel unable to descend the stairs to perform it in the Masjid.

Q 4: Is it permissible to perform Salah (Prayer) at home, especially the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, on account of fear or due to a parental order to do so? Can this be done temporarily or permanently, bearing in mind that the causes of fear are endless?

A: The principal ruling is that it is Wajib (obligatory) upon the male Muslim to perform congregational Salah (Prayer) in the Masjid (mosque). However, if a Muslim who is legally bound to perform Salah in the Masjid fears that he may be harmed if he goes out to the Masjid, he may perform Salah at home; for the Prophet, (peace be upon him) set it as a general rule by saying: \(There should be neither harming nor reciprocating harm.\) It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who hears the Nida' \(i.e. Adhan; call to Prayer\) and he does not come to it \(the Masjid\), then there is no prayer \(counted\) for him except if he has a valid excuse.\) It was said to Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both): "What is the excuse?", he answered: "Fear or illness."

Combining two Salahs

The first question of Fatwa no. 20771

Q 1: Our Society of the Muslim Youth Union of Kirwan inquires about the issue of combining the Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Evening) Prayers; the controversy is about the manner of combining between the two Salahs (Prayers); the first group argues that there should be no Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) between the two Salahs. They derive proof for that from the Hadith reported on the authority of `Abdullah in the Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) of Al-Bukhari: (Whenever the Prophet (peace be upon him) was in a hurry, he used to delay the Maghrib Prayer and then offer three Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) (of the Maghrib) and perform Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), and after waiting for a short while, Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) used to be pronounced for the 'Isha' Prayer when he would offer two Rak`ahs...) etc.

The second group argues that there should be Dhikr between the two Salahs, and they derive proof for that from the Hadith reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih as: (The people of affluence have taken over the highest ranks (in Paradise)...) until the Prophet's (peace be upon him) words (Say "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]", "Alhamdu lillah [All praise is due to Allah]" and "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" thirty-three times each after every (obligatory) Prayer.)

Which of the two arguments is right?

A: If a Muslim needs to combine the two Salahs for an excuse that is Shar`y (Islamically lawful) that allows such combining, then they should not separate between the two combined Salahs except by a short period of time, following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

(Part No. 7; Page No. 18)

There is no contradiction between the two Hadiths; as the first Hadith specifies the second one.

Q 3: It rarely happens that I combine two obligatory Salahs (Prayers) while traveling or because I have forgotten. How can I avoid this? I was once told that it is permissible to combine two Salahs at the time of either one of them.

A: Each Salah must be offered at its respective time. However, it is permissible while traveling to combine Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer at the time of either of them or Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with `Isha' (Night) Prayer at the time of either of them. The same applies to the case of an illness which might cause difficulty when Salahs are not combined.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 20619

Q 9: Some people combine Salahs (Prayers) without a Shar`i (Islamic legal) valid excuse. They justify doing so by claiming that combining two Salahs such as Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers or Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers at the time of the former or the latter is permissible, because they are farmers and shepherds. They consider this a reason for the permissibility of combining Salahs.

A: A Muslim has to offer each Salah at its respective time as prescribed by Allah and stated by His Messenger (peace be upon him). Allah (Exalted be He) stated:

﴿Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ Moreover, it is impermissible to combine two Salahs without a Shar`i valid excuse such as traveling or illness.

Fatwa no. 17127

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence the Grand Mufti by His Eminence Minister of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Da`wah and Guidance referring to the Fatwa request submitted by His Eminence the Director of the General Administration of Endowment and Mosques in Al-Ta'if. The request was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 2128, dated 26/5/1415 A.H. Following is a statement of the question of His Eminence:

We received inquiries about the issue of some Imams combining Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of the earlier, while others did not make use of this Rukhsah (concession). According to inquirers, rainfall was not heavy enough to cause a substantial reduction in the movement of pedestrians, closing stores or hindering any vital public service. Were those who made use of the Rukhsah negligent? Or, are there certain conditions for making use of it and this is why some Imams did not do so?

Having examined the Fatwa request, the Committee gives the following answer:

It is permissible to combine Maghrib and `Isha' proclaiming one Adhan (call to Prayer) and one Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) for both of them because of rainfall that may wet clothes and make it difficult to return once again to the Masjid (mosque) to offer `Isha' Prayer, according to the stronger of the two opinions maintained by scholars.

Similarly, both Salahs can be combined at the time of the earlier in the case of heavy mud, according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars so as to avoid difficulty and hardship. Allah (Exalted be He) says: (and has not laid upon you in religion any hardship) He (Exalted be He) also says: (Allāh burdens not a person beyond his scope.)

In addition, Aban ibn `Uthman (may Allah be pleased with them both) combined Maghrib and `Isha' on a rainy night while leading an eminent group of Tabi`un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet) scholars, an act which was not known to be contradicted by anyone and thus constitutes Ijma` (consensus of scholars). This was stated by Ibn Qudamah in his book Al-Mughny.

Focusing on the case in question, it is unfeasible to apply one ruling regarding combining Maghrib and `Isha' to all Masjids especially in large cities, for heaviness and effect of rain are different from one area to another. However, people should be enlightened and taught the practices and concessions of the Prophet (peace be upon him) that have been authentically reported.

The fourteenth question of Fatwa no. 17883

Q 14: It is related by Muslim that (the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) combined Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, and Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers, in Madinah under no circumstances of fear or rain.) When asked about it, ibn `Abbas said: "He (the Prophet) wanted to remove hardship and troubles off his Ummah." How do you judge the authenticity of this Hadith? In case the Hadith is authentic, is it permissible for us to permanently combine Salahs (Prayers) following the practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him)? How can this Hadith be reconciled with the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that reads: (Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.) ?

A: This Hadith is not evidence for the permissibility of combining Salahs as this does not go in line with the practical Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) regarding Salah. It also runs counter to other Hadiths defining fixed times for each Salah. Moreover, scholars are unanimous that this Hadith may not be acted upon. Imam Al-Tirmidhy argued: "It is likely that the Prophet (peace be upon him) did so under adverse circumstances other than fear, rain, or travel."

The first question of Fatwa no. 18800

Q 1: I went with my family to a farm about ten kilometers outside our city. As it was raining heavily at the time of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer one of my brothers led us in Salah (Prayer) combining the Maghrib and `Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of the earlier one on the pretext that there would be a hardship in offering the `Isha' Prayer at its due time. It should be noted that there was not a Masjid (mosque) on the farm: the Musalla (place for Prayer) was a part of the house.

What is the ruling on combining the Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers in this case? And what is the ruling on not combining them and offering each one separately at its due time?

A: It is permissible to combine the Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers during rainfall, which can wet the clothes if one must go out to the Masjid or create mud that may prevent people from going out to the Masjid for fear of getting stuck in it. As you offered Salah at home because there were no neighbors to join you in offering Salah outside home, it would have been better not to combine both Salahs, as there was no difficulty involved and to be on the safe side. However, you do not have to make up for the Salahs you offered, for some scholars maintain that it is permissible to combine Salahs if there is a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse that permits such act for those who should offer Salah at the Masjid.

Fatwa no. 18081

Ruling on combining Salahs under circumstances of rainfall or mud

A Muslim has to offer each of the Five Obligatory Daily Salahs (Prayers) at its respective due time as prescribed by Allah and verbally and practically defined by His Messenger (peace be upon him). In this regard, Allah (exalted be He) says:

﴿Verily, As-Salât (the prayer) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: ﴿Offer Salah (Prayer) at its prescribed time.﴾ Thus, it is not permissible to offer Salah either before or after its due time. An exception of this is a person who is permitted to combine two Salahs for a Shar`y (Islamic legal) excuse, such as traveling for a distance over which it is permissible to shorten Salah and illness that might make it difficult for a patient not to combine Salahs. Another excuse is rainfall and mud. Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful to him) said: "Time is the most important fundamental of Salah; therefore, offering it at its due time is as obligatory as observing Sawm (Fasting) at its due time during Ramadan, which may not be delayed to another time. However, it is permissible to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers while standing on `Arafah (during Hajj) and to combine the Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers while in Muzdalifah as unanimously agreed upon by all Muslims. Likewise, it is permissible to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers or Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers, according to many scholars, under the circumstances of traveling, illness and suchlike excuses. But it is impermissible to delay the Salahs that must be offered during daytime till nighttime or those that must be offered during nighttime till daytime under the circumstances of illness, traveling, a certain occupation or profession or whatever excuse, according to the unanimous agreement of scholars. Furthermore, `Umar ibn Al-Khattab (may Allah be pleased with him) considered combining two Salahs without a valid excuse, a major sin." (Majmu` Al-Fatawa 22/30-31).

Accordingly, those who hasten and combine Salahs when it is only cloudy or when there is a little rain causing no hardship, or even when there is heavy rain that does not cause the road to be muddy, commit a grave mistake. Moreover, Salahs combined as such are invalid as they are combined without a valid excuse and because the Salah is offered before its time is due. Also, it is impermissible to combine Jumu`ah (Friday) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, for neither the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor his Sahabah (Companions, may Allah be pleased with them all) are reported to have done so. Furthermore, Jumu`ah is structurally different from `Asr. Therefore, those who combine Jumu`ah and `Asr Prayers have to re-perform `Asr as they, in such a case, offered it before its due time without a Shar`y excuse.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20094

Q 1: We live in a region that is very cold and foggy, particularly in winter.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 26)

Is it permissible in this case to combine the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer as well as the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with the `Isha' (Night) Prayer, or is this permissible only during rainfall? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is permissible to combine the Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers when there is rain that wets one's garment, or mud that makes it difficult for people to reach the Masjid (mosque), so as to ward off hardship. However, fog is not an excuse to combine Salahs (Prayers).

Q: Living in Al-Bahah recently, heavy fog, sometimes obstructing vision, is always there plus rain that falls every now and then accompanied by severe cold. Actually, we do not know whether it is permissible for us to combine Salahs (Prayers) under such circumstances. Please be informed that some of us who go to the village that is 10 km or more away from the workplace arrive there after the Salah time has elapsed. We hope that Your Eminence will instruct us in this regard. May Allah safeguard and protect you!

A: It is permissible to combine Maghrib (Sunset) and 'Isha' (Night) Prayers if there is rainfall that might have the effect of wetting people's clothes or causing the road to be muddy making it difficult to go to the Masjid (mosque). This is meant to avert hardship from the praying people. However, fog is not a valid excuse for combining Salahs. As for those whose location is so far away from the Masjid that they cannot hear Adhan (call to Prayer), they may offer Salah (Prayer) in congregation at their place.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: One rainy night, we offered Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer only uncombined with `Isha' (Night) Prayer. However, I heard people in a nearby Masjid (mosque) combining Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers. Therefore, I went to that Masjid and offered `Isha' with them. What is the ruling on this action of mine?

A: You should re-perform the `Isha' Prayer which you offered in a Masjid other than the one in which you offered Maghrib Prayer. In such a case, combining the two Salahs (Prayers) was not materialized due to the long interval that separated them. Actually, close sequence without interruption is a condition for the validity of combining two Salahs at the time of the earlier.

Q: What is the Shar`y (Islamic legal) ruling on delaying the performance of `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer until shortly before the time of Maghrib (Sunset) on account of being occupied dealing with some patients? Actually, the faculty does not permit us to go unless permission is given by the consultant after having finished treating a patient.

A: A surgeon has to take into account performing surgeries at times that will not cause missing the due time of Salah (Prayer). However, it is permissible in the case of necessity to combine two Salahs, such as Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers or Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers, at the time of the earlier or the later in proportion with the degree of necessity. As for Salahs that cannot be combined with the one after it, such as `Asr and Fajr (Dawn) Prayers, it will be good if they can be performed at their due time even if through shifts. If this option is unfeasible, there will be nothing wrong with delaying Salah until the surgery is finished due to necessity which should be assessed according to its extent.

Q: I work as a nurse in the intensive care department.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 29)

The nature of work under this department requires treating people who are very seriously ill or badly injured. In some cases, patients suffer from cardiac arrest which entails necessary medical aid including artificial respiration, and thus requires me to carefully monitor the case and not to leave the intensive care unit. Actually, taking care of a patient might take many long hours, consequently I cannot perform Salah (Prayer), sometimes three obligatory Salahs, during this period.

In fact, there is lack of female workers in this department, thus, there is no substitute for me so that I can perform Salah on time. Furthermore, I might be required to sometimes take care of two or more cases simultaneously.

I would like to inform Your Eminence that I need to work to make a living. In fact, most cases treated in the department pass away after receiving necessary aid except for a very few number whose heart resumes activity and who leave the department while in good health. Actually, we fulfill our duties toward patients who pass away and their death is predestined by Allah and not caused by negligence on our part.

Having presented my case, I hope that Your Eminence will tell me what I should do regarding accumulated obligatory Salahs which I delay until the elapse of their due time having explained the reason for the delay.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 30)

A: If you can perform each Salah at its respective due time in the workplace, you have to do so once it is possible. If this is unfeasible, you should combine Zhuhr (Noon) with `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and Maghrib (Sunset) with `Isha' (Night) Prayer at the time of the earlier, before work begins, or at the time of the later, after work time. As for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, it should be performed uncombined at its due time. It is invalid to combine Salahs in a manner different from those previously mentioned.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18074

Q 1: Studying medicine is such a hard task, as known to everyone. Under very tight time, we sometimes have to combine two Prayers, such as Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers, at the time of `Asr or even Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer due to the unavailability of time or a proper place for Salah (Prayer).

A: You should offer each Salah at its respective due time and may not delay it or combine it with an earlier or later Salah. Applied to your case is the ruling pertaining to residents not travelers. In fact, the circumstances you referred to above do not constitute valid excuses for delaying the performance of Salah after the lapse of its time. A Muslim has to perform Salah at its due time as long as they are sane. However, a traveler is entitled to the Rukhsah (concession) of combining Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers or Maghrib and `Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of the earlier or the later, whichever is easier. In this regard, Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ According to the Ayah (Qur'anic verse), each Salah is obligatory at a certain defined respective time. The Prophet (peace be upon him) defined the time of each Salah and warned against delaying Salah until after the elapse of its time. Furthermore, he (peace be upon him) was punctual in performing each Salah at its due respective time even under the severest and most difficult circumstances, such as Jihad (striving/fighting) in the Cause of Allah in compliance with the Ayah that reads: [﴿Guard strictly \(five obligatory\) As-Salawât \(the prayers\) especially the middle Salât \(i.e. the best prayer - 'Asr \). And stand before Allâh with obedience \[and do not speak to others during the Salât \(prayers\)\].﴾](#) ﴿And if you fear \(an enemy\), perform Salât \(pray\) on foot or riding. And when you are in safety, offer the Salât \(prayer\) in the manner He has taught you, which you knew not \(before\).﴾ Therefore, you should repent to Allah of the sin you committed, i.e. delaying the performance of Salah until after the elapse of its time under no Shar`y (Islamic legal) excuse. You should also be keen in the future to perform Salah at its due time as defined by the Prophet (peace be upon him). Undoubtedly, Salah is the most important pillar of Islam following in rank only the Two Shahadahs (Testimonies of Faith). Furthermore, you should be meticulous to have a deeper understanding of the religion and ask reliable scholars to clarify your uncertainties.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19773

Q 2: In some accidents, we keep working for a long time; what is the ruling on shortening and combining Salah (Prayer) in this case?

A: If you cannot offer Salah at its due time, due to being occupied in averting a serious danger, you should form the intention to combine it with the Salah that follows, if they can be combined; such as the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer with the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer and the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer with the `Isha' (Night) Prayer. If it cannot be combined with another Salah such as the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, you can offer it directly after you finish with your work at the accident site.

of an apparatus that limits my movement. I leave school at the end of the academic day after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer. After I go home, I offer Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers consecutively. Is it permissible to do so?

A: You must offer Zhuhr Prayer at its due time if at all possible. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) He (Exalted be He) also says: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) However, if you cannot offer Salah at your workplace and cannot leave until after `Asr Prayer is due, you should intend to combine Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers at the time of the later after you leave.

The fifth Question of Fatwa no. 18452

Q 5: If one is traveling somewhere which requires taking three consecutive means of transportation, thus causing them to miss more than three Obligatory Salahs (Prayers). What should one do in such a case?

A: A Muslim who is Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) and of sound mind must offer Salah at its due time in any possible manner. Definitely, performing Salah is a duty that can never be waived. Moreover, Salah may not be delayed till its time elapses except in the case of traveling, severe illness or rainfall causing the road to be muddy which creates a hardship for people. Under the circumstances of traveling or illness, however, one may combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers either at the time of the latter or the former whichever is easier. Therefore, a person under such circumstances may offer `Asr Prayer at the time of Zhuhr Prayer if they please, or delay the performance of Zhuhr Prayer till the time of `Asr Prayer. The same applies to Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers, which can be combined under the circumstances of traveling, illness, or rainfall. However, in the case of rainfall Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers should be combined at the time of the former.

Regarding such circumstances, it is out of place to say that performance of Salah is delayed, because this extension of time is prescribed by Allah (Exalted be He). Therefore, it is always appropriate to say it is absolutely impermissible to delay performing Salah beyond its due time.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 19479

Q 9: Is it permissible to combine between Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer given that it is too difficult to find a place to pray outside home, especially when going out shopping where it becomes too difficult to find a place to pray?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 35)

A: You should perform each Salah (Prayer) in its due time, because Allah says: \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) Also, for the authentic Hadith of Gabriel on the times of Salah when he led the Prophet (peace be upon him) at the starting and ending time of each Salah, and said: \(The time \(of performing prayer\) is anywhere between these two times.\)

It is further not permissible to combine Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers or Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers except for a Shar`y (legal) reason such as traveling, illness, and the like. As for failing to find a place to pray because of shopping, this is not a legal excuse to delay offering Salah from its appointed time or to combine it with another. A Muslim should be keen to offer Salah in its due time wherever he/she is.

Fatwa no. 19763

Q: Because I work in shifts, the night shift makes it very difficult for me to wake up to perform Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer. I work as an airport technician at Riyadh airport all night long, which is quite exhausting. The shift ends at 7am and I go to bed at 8.30, as my home is half an hour away from my workplace. Although I set the alarm clock at the time of Zhuhr Prayer, I suffer too much daily trying for an hour and half to get up. I do this so long as I am on the night shift which is forty five days. I sleep very deeply and have tried to convince officials to change my working hours to conform to Salah (Prayer) time, but they refused claiming that these work times are needed to serve scheduled flights.

I also suffer the same problem while on the day shift, as I sleep only two or three hours before Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and can only get up after sunrise. Is it permissible to combine Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers while on the night shift? Please, advise! May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You have to offer Salah in congregation with fellow Muslim brothers. In this regard, you should fear Allah and strive to reach this goal. No doubt, you have to be keen to offer Salah in congregation based on the general purport of the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that reads: \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) This means that Salah is to be offered at its times as defined by Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him). In fact, being on the night or the day shift is not a Shar`i (Islamic legal) valid excuse for combining Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers, or delaying the performance of Salah till after its time elapses. As a solution, you can delay going to bed a little till you offer Salah if its time is near. Otherwise, you should sleep before the Salah time is due and do your best seeking all possible means that may help you get up at Salah time, such as setting your alarm clock at Salah's time or telling your family members or neighbors to awaken you, which is a possible matter.

The second question of Fatwa no. 15065

Q 2: What is the ruling on a person who prays the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers at one time due to being very busy? Is such a Salah (Prayer) valid?

A: In order to have one's deeds accepted, they must meet the following essential conditions: They have to be purely dedicated to Allah, and to be consonant with the Prophetic Sunnah. The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) has given a description of the the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers and their times in the Hadith narrated on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Amr (may Allah be pleased with them both) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(The time of the Zhuhr \(Noon\) Prayer is when the sun passes the meridian and a man's shadow is the same \(length\) as his height, \(and it lasts\) as long as the time for `Asr \(Afternoon\) Prayer has not come; the time for the `Asr Prayer is as long as the sun has not become pale; the time of the Maghrib \(Sunset\) Prayer is as long as the twilight has not ended; the time of the `Isha' \(Night\) Prayer is up to the middle of the average night; and the time of the Fajr \(Dawn\) Prayer is from the appearance of dawn, as long as the sun has not risen; but when the sun rises, refrain from Salah for it rises between the horns of the devil.\)

This Hadith is related by Muslim. So the Prophet (peace be upon him) has set a fixed time for each Salah to be performed within, and delaying it until the due time is over is not permissible except for one permitted to combine Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers and the Maghrib and the Isha' Prayers, like the traveler and the patient. Allah (Exalted be He) said: \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) So each Salah has to be offered in its due time.

Q: I would like to inform Your Eminence that I am a Saudi citizen who has been working for the Embassy of the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques in the Republic of Philippines for two years. I would also like to describe in brief the nature of work, which is very burdensome and requires me to stay at the office for a long period. During this period, I edit and type very urgent tasks, answer the phone and receive foreign visitors. This is in addition to many occasions which my job requires me to attend at different times. All these tasks cause me, sometimes, to miss performing some obligatory Salahs at their due time, especially Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer.

I also sometimes miss `Asr (Afternoon), Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers. In light of Islamic tolerance and ease, I hope that Your Eminence will instruct me on the easiest manner to offer Obligatory Prayers while in such awkward situations. Please, tell me whether it is permissible to combine Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers and Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers as I am mostly busy during their due times? Please be informed that I live in the Philippines where my work is located. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is impermissible to combine two Salahs except for a Shar`i (Islamic legal) valid excuse, such as traveling or illness. As for work, it is not a valid excuse for combining Salahs as it is within your capacity to offer each Salah at its due time in the workplace. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.﴾ This means that Salah must be performed at certain times and may not be delayed thereafter.

Q: The Christian regular private schools in Ethiopia have a policy of preventing Muslim children from performing Salah (Prayer) inside the schools, which prompted some Muslim students to leave their school and some others to delay the Salah, given that there are regular government schools which allow Muslim students to perform Salah. The problem lies in the lack of discipline in the government schools and in the teachers themselves who are unqualified and further do not observe their regular working hours, which has an extremely negative influence on the students' levels. In contrast, the Christian private schools are totally different from the government schools in terms of order and teachers' discipline and competence.

Is it permissible for Muslim students to combine the Maghrib (Sunset) and `Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of the later one, so as to continue their classes in the Christian regular private schools, or do they have to leave these schools and join the government schools despite their defects?

A: Muslims are duty bound to perform Salah in their due times, and leave schools that do not allow them to do so, in order to preserve their religion. This is actually based on the fact that Salah is the essential pillar of Islam, and anything that leads to neglecting it is not sanctioned.

Combining `Asr Prayer and Jumu`ah Prayer

Fatwa no. 19887

Q: I put before you an incident of an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of a Masjid (mosque) in our district. He combined between the Jumu`ah (Friday) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer in the time of the earlier one as there was rain at the time of the Jumu'ah Prayer. Many of the attendees questioned the validity of their Salah and whether they should repeat offering `Asr Prayer. Do Your Eminence see that the congregation should be informed during the next Jumu`ah Prayer that they should repeat offering `Asr Prayer on grounds that the one they offered was invalid? I hope that Your Eminence will consider this issue and provide us with your Fatwa in this regard. May Allah grant you good health, double your reward, and help us and all Muslims benefit from your knowledge! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!).

A: The way the Imam has acted, combining the `Asr Prayer with Jumu`ah Prayer due to rain is an incorrect Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings) which has no origin in Shari`ah. But may Allah reward him! Basically, it is impermissible to combine between the Jumu`ah and `Asr Prayers as nothing has been reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) or his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) in this regard, and each of Jumu`ah Prayer and `Asr Prayer are a different sort. Accordingly, both the Imam and Ma`mums (persons led by an Imam in prayer) have to repeat offering `Asr Prayer as they offered it before its time and without any Shar`y (Islamic legal) excuse.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 45)

They should further be informed of this ruling, and all Imams of other Masjids should likewise be informed of the impermissibility of this action, lest this incorrect Ijtihad be exercised again and cause confusion to the Ma`mums and harm them in their religion by offering Salah before its time which results in repeating it beyond its due time. It is worth mentioning that rain fell in the lifetime of the Prophet (peace be upon him) while he was leading Muslims for Jumu`ah Prayer and he (peace be upon him) did not combine it with `Asr Prayer.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18586

Q 1: Allah has favored me with performing `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) and all praise and favor is due to Him. However, when we wanted to leave the Sacred City, those responsible for the journey asked us to combine the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer with `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, but people split into two groups; one regarding this combining as forbidden and the other deeming it permissible, so what is the soundest opinion? May Allah grant you success!

A: It is impermissible to combine `Asr Prayer with Jumu`ah Prayer as they are not the same sort. Shaykh Muhammad ibn Ibrahim (may Allah be merciful with him) said in his Fatwa no. 3272, as he was answering a question: "So you are bound to make up each `Asr Prayer you have combined with the Jumu`ah Prayer, for such a combining is by all means invalid."

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 21545

Q 7: A- If Friday coincides with the time when the workers are scheduled to move to another location and they have already performed Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer with the congregation in the Masjid (mosque) of the city, is it permissible for them to combine and shorten the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer with Jumu`ah Prayer when they have decided to move to another location right after finishing Jumu`ah Prayer, given that the destination may not be far from the the first location, yet the moving itself causes hardship?

B- If the workers intend to stay at that location for more than four days, should they shorten the Salah (Prayer) or offer it in complete during their stay in that location? If they are permitted to shorten, are they permitted to combine Salahs in case of hardship caused by coldness, shortage of water, incessant work and the like?

A 7: A- It is not permissible to combine `Asr Prayer with the Jumu`ah as they are not of one sort.

B- If workers decide to stay in a location for more than four days, they shall be bound to offer a complete Salah as the rulings of travel will not be applied to them then, and in such a case they are not permitted to combine either, due to the reasons mentioned above.

May Allah grant us all success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 20019

Q 1: Sometimes we travel on Friday morning, is it permissible to perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer and combine it with `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 48)

A 1: If one travels on Friday before noon, he can perform Jumu`ah Prayer as Zhuhr and can combine it with `Asr Prayers together either at the time of the earlier or the latter according to what is easier for him, and he can also shorten each Salah to two Rak`ahs. However, it is preferable to join the Jumu`ah Prayer if there is a Masjid establishing it on the way; but he cannot then combine `Asr with it and should wait until the time of `Asr starts to perform it. If it is afternoon and one has not yet started the travel, he must perform Jumu`ah Prayer before traveling.

Jumu`ah Prayer

Q: We are a group consisting of forty-two families, each has some men. We have been living in the same region for one third or half of the year, for the purposes of farming. Is it obligatory upon us to offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer during our stay in this region? You should bear in mind that we do not live in one area as a village; rather, we live in dispersed camps, where we can see each other at times when plants and herbs grow less. Can the report that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered the Jum`ah Prayer under a tree on his way of Hijrah (the Prophet's migration to Madinah) lend support to this? We are confused, so guide us with a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, you do not have to offer the Jum`ah Prayer, for you fall under the ruling of nomadic Bedouins, rather than the people of villages and territories. As for the report you mentioned that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered the Jum`ah Prayer on his way to Hijrah under a tree, this is utterly baseless.

May Allah grant us all success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: There is a group of employees working in the field of oil in the Arab Gulf, about 110 away from the mainland and they live in fixed posts made of iron in the form of three-floor houses, that contain rooms, kitchens, laundries and a Masjid (mosque) that accommodates about twenty-five people. They move by helicopters or boats. There are similar posts that lie nearby. Their work demands their stay in the site for fourteen days uninterrupted. They spend two Fridays; they work from 5:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on the first Friday and from 5:00 p.m. to 5:00 a.m. on the second. They are confused whether they should offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer or not. Kindly, give them a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Permanent settling in houses built with the materials customarily used in building is a condition for the Jum`ah Prayer to be obligatory and valid. The case in the question does not meet this condition, so it is not permissible for them to offer the Jum`ah Prayer and they have to offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead. And Allah knows best.

Q 1: Our Masjid (mosque) at the student hostel is located far away from the university. Are we allowed to offer the Jum`ah (Friday) Prayer at one of the university chambers, given the fact that it is almost difficult to offer it at the Masjid of the student hostel?

A: You must offer the Jum`ah Prayer at Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jum`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) if it is located near to you. You are not allowed to hold Jum`ah Prayer at the university. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe (Muslims)! When the call is proclaimed for the Salat (prayer) on the day of Friday (Jumu'ah prayer), come to the remembrance of Allah [Jumu'ah religious talk (Khutbah) and Salat (prayer)]﴾ If you cannot offer it at Al-Masjid Al-Jami`, then you may offer it as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer at the university. This is because you are not permanent residents in that area. Rather, Jum`ah Prayer is rendered obligatory on you when there are permanent residents present (at nearby places) who hold Jum`ah Prayer (in which case you should pray with them).

Q: We live in a desert that includes nine valleys, each is about an hour and a half to three hours away from the other.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 52)

Farming, cattle, and even we depend on rainwater. When the rain falls, the water collects in tanks dug in the ground. Each is five meters long, two meters wide, and four meters deep. Each of these valleys has about five tanks which provide drinking water only for us and our cattle. We do not use this water for Wudu' (ablution); we rather perform Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth), unless a person needs to perform Ghusl (full ritual bath) following major Hadath (ritual impurity that necessitates full bath). When these tanks run out of water, we move to other neighboring valleys. Everyone in the valley does the same. When all the valleys run out of water, we move to neighboring regions where there is river water. It takes about three days on foot and seven hours by jeep to travel to the neighboring regions; however, the jeeps are not available all the time. Besides, in our valleys there are water tanks, a few new houses and Masjids (mosques) built of palm trunks.

My question is: Is it obligatory upon us to offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in our case? We did not use to offer it, considering ourselves Bedouins. A short time ago, some of us traveled and came back telling us that it is obligatory upon us to offer the Jum`ah Prayer. They started doing so and continued to offer it along with some people each Friday in one of these valleys. When these valleys run out of water, people do not offer the Jum`ah Prayer until the rain falls again. Should we offer Jum`ah in our case? My second question is: Should we perform Wudu' using these tanks or can we perform Tayammum to save the tank water? Guide us, may Allah benefit you! Please consider this matter bearing in mind that there is no resident Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). Wa`alaykum as-salam warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you)

A: First, if the case is as you mentioned and you are not settled in a certain place; rather, you move seeking after rain water, you should not offer the Jum`ah Prayer and should offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead.

Second, it is not permissible to perform Tayammum when there is water present and the ability to use it. The Salah (Prayer) of whoever performs Tayammum while water is available is invalid, unless water is barely enough for drinking and cooking; in such case, there is nothing wrong with performing Tayammum.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 19604

Q 1: I am a military officer whose work requires moving from one place to another. I moved with eight persons to an island where there is a Masjid (mosque) without a regular Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer); is it obligatory upon us to offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, bearing in mind that the island is far away from our country and we stay there for about a month?

A: Most scholars hold the view - which is the most preponderant - that the traveler who has the intention to stay in a place for more than four days is not to take advantage of the Rukhsahs (concessions) of travel. Accordingly, your stay for a month in another country does not waive the obligation to attend the Jum`ah Prayer with the other residents, since the obligation on you to perform it is dependent on the presence of permanent residents who hold Jum`ah Prayer, but you should not hold it independently from them.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: Is it permissible to offer the Jum`ah (Friday) Prayer at one of the rest areas, along the suburbs of Riyadh around Al-Janadriyah or Al-Yasmin Quarter, north of Riyadh, if there is a large congregation who gather for a certain occasion? Please bear in mind that these rest areas are about four or five kilometers away from the Masjids (mosques). May Allah safeguard you.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 55)

A: All male Muslims should offer the Jum`ah Prayer in congregation at the Masjids, if they are residents, i.e., non-travelling. They should not overlook the Jum`ah Prayer, and it is not permissible to offer it at rest areas lying along the city suburbs.

Fatwa no. 20548

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, by the Director of the Cooperative Office for Call and Guidance serving minorities in Makkah Al-Mukarramah, no. 693, on Rajab 4, 1419 A.H. The letter was referred to the Permanent Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 4403, on Rajab 15/1419 A.H. It includes a request to continue offering the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer at the Masjid (mosque) within the headquarters of the Dallah Company, Bin Laden Company and Al Hanouf Group. The letter of His Eminence reads as follows:

(Part No. 7; Page No. 56)

Your Eminence, Grand Mufty of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and Chairman of the Council of Senior Scholars, Shaykh `Abdul-`Aziz ibn `Abdullah ibn Baz, may Allah protect you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) To proceed:

I would like to inform Your Eminence that some companies and institutions in Makkah Al-Mukarramah employ a large number of workers who do not speak Arabic and thus, overlook attending the Jum`ah Prayer, or go late to it on the pretext that they do not understand Arabic. They need to be guided, so the Office was asked to send some Du`ah (callers to Islam) to lead these workers in the Jum`ah Prayer at the Masjid of the company. One was sent and led a large number of them in Salah (Prayer) at the Masjid. He delivered the Khutbah (sermon) first in Arabic, and then translated it into their language. They benefited a lot, though many of them do not listen to the Khutbah and attend the Salah only. Accordingly, we hope Your Eminence will guide us as to whether we should continue sending Du`ah or not; bearing in mind that the companies that ask that Jum`ah Prayers be held within its Masjids are three: Dallah Company, Bin Laden Company and Al Hanouf Group. Only the workers of these companies offer Salah in these Masjids. The knowledgeable Du`ah who lead Salah and are sent by the Office are graduates of the Islamic University.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 57)

Kindly, guide us, may Allah guide your steps!

Having reviewed your question, the Committee issued a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) that it is not permissible for these companies to hold Jum`ah Prayers for their workers in the Masjids located within their headquarters, as it is not officially established to hold Jum`ah Prayers in such Masjids, and there are no residents among the workers upon whom the Jumu`ah Prayer is obligatory. The workers in these companies should offer the Jum`ah Prayer at nearby Masjids from where they hear the Adhan (call to Prayer). There is nothing wrong with translating the Khutbah afterwards so they may benefit from it. If the headquarters of the companies are far away from the Masjids where Jum`ah Prayers are held, so that they do not hear the Adhan and there are no residents among the workers upon whom the Jumu`ah Prayer is obligatory; then the Jum`ah Prayer is not obligatory upon the workers and they should offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead - consisting of four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter sent to His Eminence, the Grand Mufti, from the leader of the Specialized Training Center

(Part No. 7; Page No. 58)

in Makkah Al-Mukarramah. The letter was referred to the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 7115, on Dhul-Hijjah 18/1419 A.H. His Eminence asked the question that reads as follows:

In the Specialized Training Center of one of the general security sectors in Makkah Al-Mukarramah, we have a Masjid Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) where the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and Khutbah (sermon) used to be attended by many people and residents. However, after a large number of workers were relocated, the Khutbah was discontinued, as the number of persons who attend the Jum`ah Prayer varies from time to time; sometimes they are only ten persons and other times there are less than this. You should take into consideration that some courses that last for three or six months are held at the center for individuals numbering about forty from other sectors. During the Hajj, the personnel of the center reach about one hundred, in addition to assistants numbering about three hundred from other regions.
After the end of Hajj, the center returns to normal for the rest of the year. Also, there is a number of Masjids surrounding our Masjid, each is about one kilometer away from our Masjid.

We hope Your Eminence will give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) concerning the ruling on offering

(Part No. 7; Page No. 59)

the Jum`ah Prayer and Khutbah in this Masjid, so that we may be enlightened.

Having studied the question, the Committee answered that it is not obligatory upon you to offer the Jum`ah Prayer, and it will not be valid if you perform it independently (from the permanent residents). This is because you are not residents in the place where the courses are held. You have to offer the Jum`ah Prayer with other permanent residents in the nearby places where the Jum`ah Prayer is held, for it becomes binding upon you depending on other permanent residents, based upon the general evidence reported in this respect. If there is no nearby Masjid where the Jum`ah Prayer is held, you must offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 20866

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, from the questioner, Head of Islamic Affairs Department for Border Guard at the north-borders. The question is referred to the Committee by Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, with registration no. 469, dated

18 Muharram, 1420 A.H. After examination, the Committee answered the posed questions; following is the (first) question and its answer:

Q 1: At the north borders we have more than forty border-centers. However, there are no available Masjids (mosque) constructed independent of the buildings of these centers. Therefore, congregational Salahs (Prayers) are offered in one of the rooms used as a Musalla (place for Prayer), or in the hall in which a rug is placed. The Five Obligatory Daily Salahs are offered there. Based on this, controversies have arisen regarding the permissibility of holding Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayers in these centers. Some, based on views of scholars, maintained that holding Jumu`ah Prayers inside these centers is impermissible. So what is the ruling on holding Jumu`ah Prayer at these centers? Are there certain criteria and conditions for this? Please note that the majority of workers there do not stay for a long time; they are transferred from one center to another. Please reply promptly to this urgent question, for its importance, so as not to allow ignorant people to address such issues.

A: It is not permissible for the employees at these centers to hold Jumu`ah Prayers independently (from the permanent residents), because they are not considered residents. One of the conditions for holding Jumu`ah Prayers is permanent residence. Those in question should offer Jumu`ah Prayer in any of the available Masjids at the nearby villages where Jumu`ah Prayers are held. However, if there are no Masjids in neighboring villages in which Jumu`ah Prayers are held by the inhabitants of the village, they should offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead.

Fatwa no. 16569

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the question submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, from the educational manager in the region of Makkah Al-Mukarramah and the Head of Public Service Camps, no. 52/S, on Dhul-Hijjah 3, 1414 A.H.. The manager asked the following question:

We hope Your Eminence will give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding this issue: The Saudi Arabian Scouts Association holds each year, during the period from Dhul-Hijjah 1 to Dhul-Hijjah 3 scout camps in Mina and `Arafat throughout the days of Hajj. The participants in these camps organize programs and activities in service of the pilgrims in Al-Masha`ir (Sacred sites where the rites of Hajj are performed: Mina, `Arafah and Muzdalifah). It is difficult to transport them all to the Masjids (mosques) where the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayers are held, in addition to many other factors that prevent this.

Our question to Your Eminence is: Is it permissible for the student participants to offer the Jumu`ah Prayer inside their camps in Mina and `Arafat, bearing in mind that most of them are from outside Makkah Al-Mukarramah and are from different towns in the Kingdom?

Having studied the question, the Committee answered that it is not obligatory upon them to offer the Jum`ah Prayer, and it will not be valid if they perform it separately. This is because they are not residents in the place where the Jumu`ah Prayer is offered. They are to offer complete Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer without shortening it, unless they are in the state of Hajj but they should not combine the Salahs. This ruling applies unless there is a nearby Masjid in which the Jumu`ah Prayer is being established and they can perform it there. In this case, they are obligated to offer the Jumu`ah Prayer like other permanent residents, based upon the general meaning of the evidence reported in this regard.

May Allah grant you success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: We would like to ask your Excellency a question that occupies our minds. We are a group of clerks working in one of the branches of Sabek factory in the Second Industrial District on Al-Kharj Road, about 50 km from Riyadh. Our work requires that we remain on duty on-site for the entire day, and so we observe the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers in the factory's control room behind monitors, alarm systems and a phone in an area measuring approximately 6m x 3m. We have held the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer twice before in this facility. Our numbers in the Salah does not exceed ten persons. It is noted that there is no Masjid (mosque) nearby us and nor residential buildings. Since we cannot leave the factory due to necessary and overwhelming work commitments, is it permissible to hold Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in this place? As we may miss praying Jumu'ah once or twice every month, do the Jumu`ah Prayers we have previously offered suffice? Please provide us with the correct view, may Allah reward you.

A: If the case is as mentioned in the question, the Jumu`ah Prayer is neither applicable to nor obligatory upon you. This is because one of the conditions for its validity is that you be permanent residents, which you are not. You are only bound to constantly remain in your work place. Based on this, you must repeat the Jumu`ah Prayers you have previously observed and make them up as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayers.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

where only three workers live?

Q: If the case is as mentioned in the question, it is impermissible to hold Jumu`ah Prayer in a unpopulated village wherein no one permanently resides. The Jumu`ah Prayer is not obligatory upon nomadic Bedouins who must pray the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in its stead; that is, they are to offer four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer).

Q: We are a group of individuals from the Borders Guard whose work involves operating machinery in the Empty Quarter, repairing roads. We are always on the move, going from one place to another subject to work demands. We have offered the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer several times during our work, and would like to know whether Jum'ah is obligatory on us in our circumstance? Moreover, what should we do about the Jumu'ah Prayers we have previously offered? Are we to repeat them as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayers? May Allah reward you well, bless your work and benefit Islam and Muslims through you!

A: In the above mentioned case, the Jumu`ah Prayer is invalid because among the conditions of its obligation on Muslims is residence. As you are not settled in the place, the Jumu`ah Prayer is not obligatory upon you nor is it valid except if there is a nearby town in which it is established and you observe it with the congregation. In this case it suffices you to offer Zhuhr Prayer. This is because you will then be following the rules applied to the congregation in the town in this regard. Based on your question, you must pray Zhuhr Prayer for every Jumu`ah Prayer which you have observed in the manner mentioned in your question.

May Allah grant you success and peace blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 17527

Q 1: Once an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) mounted (the pulpit) to deliver a Khutbah (sermon) in one of the Masjids (mosques) of Fayfa and after he said the Salam (Islamic greeting of peace) the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) announced the Adhan (call to Prayer). Then, the Mu'adhin went out to perform Wudu' (ablution). Is this permissible? What is the ruling on him going out after the second Adhan? I should mention that he was not in the Masjid before the Prayer but he came, proclaimed the Adhan and then left to perform Wudu'. What is the ruling on that?

A 1: The best is that a Mu'adhin should purify himself in his house before going to the Masjid. However, if the Mu'adhin leaves the mosque to perform Wudu' after announcing the Adhan, this does not spoil his Adhan or Prayer.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17880

Q 2: The Number of Adhans (call to Prayer) in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer: According to the Maliki Madh-hab (school of jurisprudence), the Adhan is performed three times after the entrance of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). According to the Hanbali Madh-hab, this is a Bid`ah (heresy in religion), and the Jumu`ah Prayer of anyone who does so is null and void. They based their opinion on the fact that the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) gave direction to make the Adhan just once. Thereupon the Hanbalis in our society parted away and pray in separate Masjids (mosques) to keep themselves away from such Bid`ah. The first and second cases have become the main reasons that caused the separation of the Masjids of the two Madh-habs, to the extent that when a Maliki died, Hanbalis did not utter Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) for him because, in their opinion, he died as a Kafir (disbeliever).

A: The basic rule for Jumu`ah Prayer is to proclaim the Adhan only once, after the entrance of the Imam, as was the case during the lifetime of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). Making the Adhan more than once is not permissible and that is proved by the Hadith of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \(Anyone who brings in an act which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\), his act will be rejected.\) Thus, whoever does so is a sinner but his Jumu`ah Prayer is not rendered Batil (null and void). All parties must reach an understanding in matters of religious knowledge by resorting to wisdom and good admonition without violence, rigidity or enmity. May Allah set right the affairs of all people! As for making the first preliminary Adhan in the Jumu`ah Prayer, it was a Sunnah (a commendable act) of the rightly-guided caliphs. It was first introduced during reign of `Uthman ibn `Affan (may Allah be pleased with him) and all the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet Muhammad) unanimously agreed with that act, among them was `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him). Moreover, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(You must follow my Sunnah and the way of the rightly-guided caliphs. Hold on to it and stick fast to it. Avoid novelties, for every novelty is a Bid`ah, and every Bid`ah is an error.\)

Q 1: Does the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer have a specific time other than the the time of Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer?

A 1: The time of offering the Jumu`ah Salah is the same time as that of Zhuhr (Noon) Salah, according to the most authentic of the two opinions of scholars. It begins at noon and ends at the approachment of the time of the `Asr (Afternoon) Salah. This was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) who would offer the Jum`ah Salah at the time of the Zhuhr Salah.

Fatwa no. 19940

Q: We are a group of Muslims here in France. We have a Masjid (mosque) where we offer all the Salahs (prayers) except the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer because of the time. In winter, we have no problem in observing the Jumu'ah Prayer; the Zhuhr (Noon) Salah is due at one o'clock pm when we are at home. However, from the beginning of March, the French government set the clock forward an hour and they call this 'summer time'. The Zhuhr then is at two o'clock in the afternoon when we are at work; hence, we cannot offer the Jumu`ah Salah. Is it permissible for us to offer the Jumu`ah Salah one hour before its due time in Summer; i.e. at one o'clock in the afternoon like in winter? If it is impermissible, then what is the solution to this? Also, is the Jumu`ah Salah valid with a congregation of only four men?

A: First: It is obligatory for you to offer the Jumu`ah Salah in the afternoon. If your work conditions allow you to offer it at the beginning of its time, then this is good, otherwise, you may offer it in the middle or at the end of its time. Nonetheless, delaying it beyond its specified time is impermissible, as Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(Verily, As-Salât \(the prayer\) is enjoined on the believers at fixed hours.\) In addition to other supporting evidence.

Second: According to the authentic opinion held by Muslim scholars, the Jumu`ah Salah can validly be offered by a minimum congregation of three people or greater, for there is no proof to stipulate a specific number beyond the three. Hence, if you are four men, you may offer the Jumu`ah Salah.

Q 1: I go to the Masjid (mosque) early on Friday. However, I carry out some tasks in the courtyard and the store belonging to the Mosque, and I do not assume my place (in the row) except after three or four hours. Does the following Hadith apply to me or not: (Whoever goes in the first hour (i.e. goes early for the prayer), it is as if he has sacrificed a camel (in Allah's cause).) ?

A 1: Your reward depends on the time you spend in the Masjid waiting for the Salah as the Hadith states: (The Muslim is in the state of offering Salah as long as he is waiting for Salah and the angels keep on asking for Allah's Forgiveness for him.) .

Q: Is the Ghusl (full ritual bath) for Jumu`ah (Friday Prayer) obligatory or Mustahab (desirable) that could be replaced by Wudu' (ablution) because it presents a hardship in winter when the weather is too cold? Please advise and may Allah protect us all for He is All-Hearer and Responsive!

A: Friday is the best day of the week when the Muslims gather to offer the Jumu`ah Salah and listen to the Khutbah (sermon). Hence, it is Mustahab for those attending the Jumu`ah to perform Ghusl to be clean and eliminate any foul odors from their bodies and apply perfume. If one only performs Wudu',

this is sufficient as it was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: \(If any one of you performs Wudu' on Friday, that will be all right; and if any of you performs Ghusl, this will be better.\)

Q: A man had intercourse with his wife on Thursday night after the Maghrib (sunset) or the 'Isha' (night) Prayer; i.e. in the first half of the night. Then, he performed Ghushl (ceremonial bath) with a combined intention of purifying himself from Janabah (major ceremonial impurity related to seminal discharge) and of making Ghushl of Jumu'ah (Friday Prayer). Is this valid as a Ghushl for Jumu'ah, knowing that his intention was made to perform Ghushl for Jumu'ah and from Janabah, and that it was before midnight?

A: The Ghushl that you made before the break of dawn does not fulfil the Ghushl for Jumu'ah because it should be made after the break of dawn, which marks the beginning of a new day. It should be known that the Ghushl for Jumu'ah is

Q 7: We offer four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) for the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer as we do in the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers.

A 7: Offering four Rak`ahs for the Jumu`ah contradicts the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet), the acts of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs and the Ijma` (consensus of scholars). There are Hadiths Mutawatir (a Hadith reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon a lie is impossible) reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) indicating that he used to offer two Rak`ahs for the Jumu`ah Prayer preceded by two Khutbahs (sermons). More than one scholar reported the Ijma` that the Jumu`ah Prayer is two Rak`ahs preceded by two Khutbahs. Scholars of every Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence) clarified that the Jumu`ah Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) may be performed behind the upright and the Fasiq (someone flagrantly violating Islamic law) Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer). Being infallible is not a prerequisite for being the Imam in these Salahs (Prayers) for none is infallible but the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and other prophets before him. During the lifetime of the Prophet (peace be upon him), the Jumu`ah Prayer was offered in one of the villages of `Abdul Qays in Bahrain that was called Jawatha. Moreover, it was offered in towns and villages during the era of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs, like `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) and in the era of Ahl-ul-Bayt (members of the Prophet's extended Muslim family) after him like Al-Hasan, Al-Husayn, `Aly ibn Al-Husayn, Muhammad ibn `Aly Al-Baqir, Ja`far ibn Muhammad Al-Sadiq and other Imams from Ahl-ul-Bayt renowned for knowledge and virtue, may Allah be pleased with them all. None of them denied that the Jumu`ah is two Rak`ahs preceded by two Khutbahs. Moreover, they did not state that the Imam should be infallible and just for the Salah to be valid. They prayed behind the Muslim rulers in Makkah, Al-Madinah, Al-Sham (the Levant) and Iraq where some of the Imams were just, whereas others were not. It was not reported from any of them that he repeated the Salah they offered behind their contemporary Muslim Imams, even if they were not known for being just and even if they were known for their Fisq (flagrant violation of Islamic law), like Al-Hajjaj and his likes who lacked the qualities of justice. It becomes clear that the truth which Allah sent with our Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) and was followed and practiced by his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) after him, including `Aly and his sons (may Allah be pleased with them all) is that the Jumu`ah is two Rak`ahs preceded by two Khutbahs and that it should be offered in towns and villages. As for those who live in the desert and women, they are not required to offer the Jumu`ah Prayer. Rather, they should pray the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer as four Rak`ahs unless they are on a journey. In this case, they may offer Zhuhr Prayer as two Rak`ahs (the Salah of the traveler) or offer the Jumu`ah Prayer with people in towns and villages. In addition, it is not obligatory for the traveler to offer Jumu`ah Prayer, however, if he offers it with the residents, it would be sufficient for him and he would not have to offer Zhuhr Prayer.

Fatwa no. 16892

Q: We live in a village most of whose dwellers earn their livelihood through farming and raising cattle. They establish Jumu`ah (Friday) and `Eid (Festival) Prayers in the village but some of them moved to another more populated one in which official services are more available. This new village is five kilometers away from our village. Some other villagers are still living in the same village, their number may sometimes be less than forty to establish Jumu`ah prayer, and in the two `Eid prayers, this number may be forty or more or less depending on the attendance of those who live and work outside as they come to celebrate `Eid with their families.

Is it permissible for them to establish Jumu`ah and the two `Eid Prayers? Are they valid in such cases? Can you clarify the issue to us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Those who stay permanently in the mentioned village must establish Jumu`ah and two `Eid Prayers even if their number is less than forty because there is no Sahih (authentic) Hadith regarding the decisive number obligatory for establishing Jumu`ah Prayer.

Q: I am a Muslim living in a remote village which has only three other Muslim widows, is it permissible for me to establish Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer with them in this village ? I hope you will clarify this issue for me, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is impermissible to establish Jumu`ah Prayer unless there is the minimum number of people by whom congregational Salah (Prayer) is valid, which is two people in addition to the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars. Jumu`ah Prayer cannot be established by women only. Nevertheless, if they pray with men, it will count as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer for them.

Q 2: There is a Masjid (mosque) in our village, those in charge of it do not establish either Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or `Isha' (Night) Prayer on the pretext that it is for security purposes, though reality opposes their claims: everything is safe and as it should be. Is it still valid to establish Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in this Masjid?

A 2: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you to offer congregational Salah in this Masjid as much as you possibly can. As for Jumu`ah Prayer, you have to pray Jumu`ah with other Muslims in any other Masjid which offers it.

Fatwa no. 18546

Q: The population of the city of Guarulhos located near the international airport of (Sao Paulo) in (Brazil), is about (1,500,000). It has about 130 Muslim families. There is a Masjid (mosque) near Al-Jabbanah Al-Islamiyah District which has room for 500 people. We offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in this Masjid. During daily prayers there are about 55 people who perform their regular prayers there. During the two 'Eids (festivals) the number can reach about 200 people. Only about 600 meters away, there is a club where some 15 to 20 people offer Jumu'ah Prayer. In which one of the two is it better to offer Jumu`ah Prayer? Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) which was established twenty years ago and where Jumu`ah is continuously offered, or the club which was only built three years ago?

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you all to congregate for Jumu`ah Prayer in the Masjid and for the five daily prayers whenever possible because the regular congregation of Muslims is desirable and needed. Moreover, it would be better to increase the number of those who are regular in daily prayers in one place. Division among Muslims is impermissible and prayers should be offered in Masjids which are originally built for this purpose.

Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿In houses (mosques) which Allâh has ordered to be raised (to be cleaned, and to be honoured), in them His Name is remembered [i.e. Adhan, Iqamah, Salât (prayers), invocations, recitation of the Qur`ân etc.]. Therein glorify Him (Allah) in the mornings and in the afternoons or the evenings,﴾ ﴿Men whom neither trade nor sale (business) diverts from the Remembrance of Allâh (with heart and tongue), nor from performing As-Salât (Iqâmat-as-Salât), nor from giving the Zakât.﴾ And : ﴿The Mosques of Allâh shall be maintained only by those who believe in Allâh and the Last Day, perform As-Salât (Iqâmat-as-Salât), and give Zakât and fear none but Allâh.﴾

He (Glorified and Exalted be He) also says: ﴿O you who believe (Muslims)! When the call is proclaimed for the Salât (prayer) on Friday (Jumu'ah prayer), come to the remembrance of Allâh [Jumu'ah religious talk (khutbah) and Salât (prayer)] and leave off business (and every other thing). That is better for you if you did but know!﴾ The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said :

﴿Whoever hears the Adhan (call to Prayer) and does not come to it (i.e. Salah), then there is no Salah for him except with an excuse.﴾ Related by Ibn Majah, Al-Daraqutny, Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim. Someone asked Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him) about the excuse, he replied: (fear or illness), there are many Hadiths in this regard. You have to congregate and unite in harmony and beware of disunity and difference.

Q: We are employees in a company and we have a Musalla (place for Prayer) which is about six meters wide and seven meters long. We divide ourselves into two groups to perform congregational Salah (Prayer) because of the circumstances of our work, since it is impossible to leave all the sensitive machines at the same time. Some of us go and perform Salah while the other group stays working. When it is Friday, we do the same in offering Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer; dividing ourselves into two groups, some offer Salah while others work, when they finish Jumu`ah Prayer, the working group go and have their turn for Jumu`ah too.

Is our deed valid or not? We hopefully wish Your Eminence will clarify the issue for us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: There is no blame in your division into two groups for offering your regular daily Salah in your workplace because it is the nature of your work system. But it is invalid to offer Jumu`ah Prayer at your work place because it is Wajib (obligatory) on you to offer it at the nearest Masjid (mosque). However, due to the circumstances of your work which necessitate some of you staying beside the machines, some of you can go and perform Jumu`ah Prayer while some stay at the factory until they finish Jumu`ah Prayer in the Masjid with other Muslims. When they come back those who stayed at the factory can go and offer four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of Zhuhr (noon) Prayer.

Q: We only have two Masjids Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held). The number of worshippers who come for Salah (Prayer) increases notably in Ramadan. Some Muslims rented a hall in one district of the city for Muslims to offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) during Ramadan. Is Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer in this temporarily rented hall valid if they did so, especially during this month; that is to say; offering only four Jumu`ahs during Ramadan?

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned that the number of the worshippers increases in Ramadan to the degree that the two Masjids do not have room for any other praying people, there will be no blame in renting a hall which could help in the congregation of those worshippers. Muslims should always pay great attention to congregational Salah at the Masjid, not to do this only during Ramadan, because congregational Salah in the Masjid is Wajib (obligatory) on men. It has been authentically been proven from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: «Whoever hears the Adhan \(call to Prayer\) and does not come to it \(i.e. Salah\), then there is no Salah for him except with an excuse.»

A: If the reality is as you mentioned that the number of the worshippers increases in Ramadan to the degree that the two Masjids do not have room for any other praying people, there will be no blame in renting a hall which could have room for the rest of the worshippers, you could also offer Jumu`ah Prayer and its Khutbah (sermon) in this rented hall, if there are more than one Jumu`ah congregations in only one town at times of need, there will be nothing wrong with that.

Q:

1- Is it permissible for us to offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) without seeking the permission of relevant authorities? If we did that out of omission to refer to competent authorities, what is the ruling on that?

2- Is it permissible for us to offer Jumu`ah Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid at multiple locations on the pretext of long distances, bearing in mind that we have an abundance of means of transportation, thank Allah? Are we sinful?

3- Do we deserve a reward for doing so, i.e., offering Jumu`ah Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid at multiple locations, out of tribalism? Please, bear in mind that many people are ignorant in this respect.

4- Although we belong to one country, we suffer from the problem that citizens of the villages constituting our country are tribalists. Actually, each group prefers to offer Salah (Prayer) in their respective village's Masjid (mosque) and do not bother to leave the village for Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held), which is only one kilometer away from them.

We hope that Your Eminence, helped by Allah, will give us a conclusive Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah bless your knowledge!

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) that you all offer Jumu`ah Prayer and Salat-ul-`Eid at one place. However, if you need more Masjids and Musallas (places for Prayer) for `Eid, you may refer to the relevant branch of Waqf (endowment) and Masjid authority so that they may consider it in conformity with the applicable system.

Q: Please, give me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the following question submitted by the Islamic Community in New Castle, United Kingdom. They ask whether it is permissible to offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in two groups consecutively as their number is beyond the capacity of the Salah (Prayer) place. Actually, the university that granted them the place restricted their number to 250, while they are now more than 400.

A: It is impermissible to establish Jumu`ah Prayer two or more times in one place. Actually, doing so has no basis in the Qur'an, the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), or the practice of the Salaf (righteous predecessors), or great scholars. However, it is permissible, when needed, to establish Jumu`ah Prayer at another Masjid (mosque) in the country.

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 82)

To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence the Chairman by the Religious Affairs delegate through the Da`wah (calling to Islam) Center in Al-Bahah. The request was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 1796 on 27/4/1411 A.H. Following is a statement of the question:

On visiting the police department of Al-Bahah while traveling for preaching and guidance purposes, I was asked the following question:

Nowadays, we charge soldiers to continually patrol cities, villages and commercial shops in order to safeguard properties and maintain order against the abuse of those perverted. However, soldiers ask how they can offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in such a case. Is it waived in such a case and may they offer it as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer after people leave Masjids (mosques)?

Kindly, submit the question to the Chairman in order to give us the necessary Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) which we will, in turn, convey to our soldiers. May Allah grant you success! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

Having examined the Fatwa request, the Committee gave the answer that they should offer Jumu`ah Prayer in the nearest Masjid after the last Adhan (call to Prayer) that marks the entrance of the Khatib (preacher), is proclaimed. If there is danger that might negatively affect the task they are entrusted with, i.e. maintaining order, there will be nothing wrong with not offering the Jumu`ah Prayer. Instead, they may offer Zhuhr Prayer instead of Jumu`ah Prayer. Actually, this is meant to keep public interest and to ward off public danger.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 14241

Q 2: On Friday, I went to the Masjid (mosque) having performed Wudu' (ablution), dressed well and applied perfume. The Masjid is located in a village where there are no loudspeakers. On my way, I sat for about ten minutes at a grocer's. Thereafter, I went to the Masjid and found that people had finished Salah (Prayer) and left. Am I sinful for doing this?

A: Whoever fails to catch the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer out of no negligence and not being accustomed to doing so, as one who arrives at the Masjid to find that people have finished Salah, we hope that Allah will pardon him. Moreover, one who does so and then repents, Allah, the Oft-Forgiving the Most Merciful, will forgive him as He forgives all who turn to Him in repentance. As a rule, one who does not catch the second Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) of Jumu`ah Prayer is considered to have missed Jumu`ah and should offer it as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, i.e. four Rak`ahs when its time becomes due.

Q 1: While traveling I caught up with a resident Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in the last Tashahhud (testification recited in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer) of Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. Upon his saying Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), I performed two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) to complete my Salah (Prayer). Is what I did correct?

A 1: Whoever joins an Imam in just Tashahhud of Jumu`ah Prayer is considered to have missed performing Jumu`ah Prayer, since the least with which one can join Jumu`ah Prayer is one Rak`ah (with the Imam). Thus, you should make up for the Salah as four Rak`ahs as an ordinary Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer.

to deal with, if any. This may coincide with the time of Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, which means that they miss performing it in congregation. What is the ruling on this regard?

Q: Is it obligatory on me to perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, knowing that I use a wheelchair and that I can go to the Masjid only with the help of someone pushing the wheelchair?

A: If there is anyone who can help you to go to perform Jumu`ah Prayer, it is preferable that you should attend it provided your presence causes no harm for the praying people. If you cannot attend it at the Masjid, you can perform it as ordinary Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, i.e., four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer).

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 19338

Q: My dear Shaykh, I am a believing young man. I perform Salah (Prayer) regularly.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 86)

Yet once I did not perform two consecutive Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayers. We all know that it is obligatory on every male Muslim to perform Jumu`ah Prayer in the Masjid (mosque). Yet I abandoned it unintentionally and there was no compelling reason that prevented me from performing it. Later, I read in some books that whoever abandons Jumu`ah Prayer for two consecutive weeks goes out of the fold of Islam, i.e., becomes Kafir (non-Muslim). Since I trust neither in these books nor in the Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence) of their authoring scholars, I refer to Your Eminence in order that my heart may be at ease. Thus what is the ruling on this?

A: Anyone on whom Jumu`ah Prayer is obligatory, but abandons it deliberately without an excuse, commits a grave major sin and disobeys Allah and His Messenger. Thus it is obligatory on him to hasten to turn to Allah in sincere repentance of this bad deed and not to commit this again. It is reported in the Sahih (authentic) Hadiths that there is severe punishment waiting for anyone who abandons Jumu`ah Prayer without a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse. The Prophet also strongly warned against abandoning it. Of these Hadiths is what was narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas`ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to some people who used to neglect performing Jumu`ah Prayer: \(I was going to order a man to lead the people in prayer, and then burn down, on men who do not attend the Jumu`ah Prayer, their houses.\) (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book] and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad) It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah and Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that they heard the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying on his Minbar (pulpit): \(Let some people desist from neglecting Jumu`ah Prayers, or else Allah will seal their hearts and they will be among the negligent.\) (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book] section 6, page 152) See Sahih Muslim with the Commentary of Al-Nawawyy. The same Hadith was also related by Imams Ahmad and Al-Nasa'y on the authority of Ibn `Umar and Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) It was related on the authority of Abu Al-Ja`d Al-Damry, who was a Companion of the Prophet, that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who neglects three Jumu`ahs, Allah will place a seal on his heart.\) (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith [Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah])

A similar Hadith was also related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad and by Ibn Majah in his Sunan on the authority of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) with this wording: \(Anyone who neglects Jumu`ah Prayer three times without necessity will have a seal placed upon his heart.\) This Hadith was also related by Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah, Ibn Khuzaymah, Al-Hakim and Al-Daraqutny.

As for a person who abandons Jumu`ah Prayer deeming this permissible, he is to be disbelieving in that which was sent down to Muhammad (peace be upon him), for his rejecting the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and Hadiths that clearly state the obligation of Jumu`ah Prayer. Some scholars have opined that the person who abandons Jumu`ah Prayer or any of the other Five Obligatory Daily Prayers out of slackness and negligence is a Kafir (non-Muslim), even if he does not deny its being obligatory. This is based on the purport of the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): ﴿What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning Salah.﴾ (Related by Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book]). It was also narrated on the authority of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿That which differentiates us from the disbelievers and hypocrites is our performance of Salah. Anyone who abandons it, becomes a disbeliever.﴾ (Related by Imam Ahmad and the four compilers of Al-Sunan through authentic Isnad (chain of narrators) on the authority of Buraydah ibn Al-Husayb [may Allah be pleased with him])

Q: What is the ruling on a person who did not perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer? Please substantiate this with evidence from the Noble Qur'an and the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet)?

A: Performing Jumu`ah Prayer is an individual obligation on every Muslim who is male, sane, free and a resident. Whoever abandons it out of negligence is liable to the threat of severe punishment. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Let some people desist from neglecting Jumu`ah Prayers, or else Allah will seal their hearts and they will be among the negligent.﴾ Thus, anyone who does this must repent to Allah and perform Jumu`ah Prayer with Muslims.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18100

Q 3: I, as well as many Muslims in the country of emigration, could not perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer at its due time because of our work that makes us miss performing both Zhuhr (Noon) and `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers. What is the ruling on Jumu`ah Prayer? What is the solution? Is it permissible for me to combine both Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers at the time of either the earlier or the later one?

A: Performing Jumu`ah Prayer is obligatory on every Muslim who is male, Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions), free, and either a resident or staying in a place wherein Jumu`ah Prayer is established, for any length of time which means that he is not permitted to shorten the Salah (Prayer). It is not permissible for a Muslim to abandon it except for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse that prevents one from performing it, such as traveling or a compelling reasons, such as an illness or suchlike. Thus, it is obligatory on you to exert your best effort to perform this great obligation. It is permissible for you not to attend it only if there is a reason that can stand for a Shar`y excuse. Allah (Glorified be He) says: ﴿And whosoever fears Allāh and keeps his duty to Him, He will make a way for him to get out \(from every difficulty\).﴾ ﴿And He will provide him from \(sources\) he never could imagine.﴾ It is also obligatory on you to perform the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers at their due times without delaying a Salah beyond its prescribed time except when there is a Shar`y excuse that permits you to combine two Salahs together, such as traveling or being ill.

A: If your work in the hospital requires your presence there during Jumu`ah Prayer in anticipation of receiving any emergency cases, there is no wrong in your remaining in the hospital. You are excused for not performing Jumu`ah Prayer and are permitted to offer the regular Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer as four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer).

Q 2: There is a man who works as a shepherd for someone in an area near the Masjids (mosques). This employer prevents him from performing Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, claiming he is excused because he is guarding the sheep. What is the Islamic ruling on this matter? Should he continue not attending Jum'ah Prayer, although not obeying him implies the harm of the employee being deprived of his work?

A 2: Whoever is entrusted with a task that if left may result in some loss or theft, such as grazing sheep and guarding funds; they are excused for not attending neither Jumu`ah Prayer or congregational Prayer. If he needs this job and cannot find other work, there is no harm on him to continue in it. However, he should

Q 1: If the `Eid (the Festival) coincides with a Friday, how many Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) should Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer be? How should we perform it?

A 1: If `Eid falls on a Friday, the obligation of attending Jumu`ah Prayer is waived from all those who offer Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) except for the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who is obliged to perform Jumu`ah Prayer leading Muslims who attend. Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) stated: «Two `Eids have coincided on this day. Whoever does not wish to offer the Friday prayer, the `Eid prayer is sufficient for them. But we shall offer the Friday prayer.» (Narrated by Abu Dawud and Ibn Majah).

As for those who, according to this Rukhsah (concession), do not attend Jumu`ah Prayer with the Imam, they should perform Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead.

Fatwa no. 19302

Q: Your Excellency, the Mufty of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. I have been appointed as Khatib (preacher) of the Masjid (mosque) of Mutsamudu with two other Khatibs. We alternate with one another every quarter of the year. I deliver my Khutbahs (sermons) during the following months: Muharram, Jumada Al-Awwal, and Ramadan.

Starting my work in Muharram 1416 AH, I am the newest among my workmates, who preceded me in this job by more than ten years. Ever since I ascended the Minbar (pulpit), a few scholars have been picking on me. Perhaps this is due to their envy or lack of knowledge. Given this circumstance, I feel I need the advice of virtuous scholars like yourself. Those people accuse me of deviating from the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Messenger of Allah, peace be upon him) - Allah forbid. The reason behind this is that when I lead them in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, I do not consistently recite Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-A`la and Surah Al-Ghashiyah. When I recite the Surah of Al-Jumu`ah, I do not recite it in full; I recite only the last three Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) of it. I do the same when I recite the Surah of Al-Munafiqun. Yet, they objected to this and request me either to recite the two Surahs in full or refrain from reciting them in the prayer. The same applies to both the Surahs of Al-A`la and Al-Ghashiyah. As for me, I recite in the first Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) the Ayahs that are more related to the subject of the Khutbah, and then in the second Rak`ah I recite some Ayahs of either the Surah of Al-Jumu`ah, Al-Munafiqun, or Al-A`la. At other times I recite Ayahs other than those mentioned above. Hence, I wish you could guide me to the correct view which I should follow in this regard?

A: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet Muhammad) is that the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) should recite in Jumu`ah Prayer after Surah Al-Fatihah, any of the following combinations: Surah Al-Jumu`ah in the first Rak`ah and Surah Al-Munafiqun in the second Rak`ah; or Surah Al-A`la in the first Rak`ah and Surah Al-Ghashiyah in the second one; Surah Al-Jumu`ah in the first Rak`ah and Surah and Surah Al-Ghashiyah in the second one. This is based on the practice of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in his recitation during Jumu`ah Prayer. It was related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (Authentic collection of Hadith) on the authority of Ibn Abu Rafi` who said: « Marwan, upon setting out for Makkah \(to perform hajj\), appointed Abu Hurayrah as his deputy in Madinah.

Abu Hurayrah led us in Jumu`ah Prayer and recited Surah al-Munafiqun after Surah Al-Jumu`ah in the second Rak`ah, which begins with: « When the hypocrites come to you \(O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) I then met Abu Hurayrah as he was about to leave the Masjid and said to him: You have recited two Surahs which `Aly ibn Abu Talib used to recite during the prayer in Kufah. Upon this Abu Hurayrah replied: I heard the Messenger of Allah \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) reciting these two Surahs in Jumu`ah Prayer.» (Recorded in the book of Sahih Muslim with the commentary of Al-Nawawy, section 6, page 166).

There is another narration by Imam Muslim also, section 6, page 167, on the authority of Al-Nu`man ibn Bashir who said: ﴿The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) used to recite in the Two `Eid Prayers and in the Jumu`ah Prayer the following Surahs: ﴿Glorify the Name of your Lord, the Most High,﴾ and ﴿Has there come to you the narration of the overwhelming (i.e. the Day of Resurrection)?﴾﴾

There is also another narration recorded by Imam Muslim, on the authority of Damrah ibn Sa`id on the authority of `Ubaydullah ibn `Abdullah who said: ﴿Al-Dahhak ibn Qays wrote to Al-Nu`man ibn Bashir asking him what the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) recited on Friday besides Surah Al-Jumu`ah. He replied, "he recited: Has there come to you..." (Al-Ghashiyah)﴾ (Recorded in the book of Sahih Muslim with the commentary of Al-Nawawy, section 6, page 167).

Accordingly, your recitation of three Ayahs of the Surahs mentioned in your question without completing them does not conform to the Sunnah of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the practice of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet Muhammad), and the Salaf (righteous predecessors).

Hence, it is Mustahab (desirable) for you to follow the example of Allah's Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the recorded practice of his Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them) with regard to reciting the mentioned Surahs, i.e., you should recite each Surah in full.

You should accept the truth from those calling you to follow it. You should be a role model for those you lead in Salah, particularly that you are the Khatib of the Masjid, hoping to receive the good reward from Allah for reciting these Surahs in following the Sunnah of Allah's Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the practice of his Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them). You should also be patient regarding whatever may be said to you, believing that this cannot harm you in any way as long as you fear Allah and follow His Book and the Sunnah of His Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and carry out your work sincerely.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and his Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 18488

Q 1: What is the ruling on the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) reciting Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) in Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer? Is reciting Qunut during Jumu`ah Prayer permissible or Makruh (reprehensible), whether in Ramadan or any other month? I have memorized the entire Noble Qur'an as well as many Hadiths, and I find no evidence to either permit or prevent reciting Qunut during Jumu`ah Prayer.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 97)

A: What was authentically reported is that the Prophet (peace be upon him) recited Qunut during Fajr (Dawn) Prayer upon rising from Ruku` (bowing) of the last Rak`ah (unit of Prayer). He invoked Allah's wrath upon the Kafirs (disbelievers) and supplicated for those Muslims who were oppressed in Makkah. This is the basis from which scholars inferred that it is permissible for an Imam to recite Qunut in the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers when calamities occur. As for Jumu`ah Prayer, it is not reported, as far as we know, that the Prophet (peace be upon him) recited Qunut in it. Perhaps the reason behind this is that the Khutbah (sermon) which includes supplicating to Allah for Muslims and against Kafirs is sufficient. Thus, we should abide by the authentically reported Hadiths from him (peace be upon him).

The first question of Fatwa no. 16843

Q 1: We are a group of Arab and Turkish Muslims who built a Masjid (mosque) in France. The Arabs have an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and so do the Turkish, thus the two Imams alternate performing Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. Is it permissible for us to perform Salah (Prayer) behind a non-Arab Imam with the presence of an Arab one?

A: It is permissible to perform Salah behind any Imam who perfects his Salah by performing its Rukns (integral Pillars) and obligations according to the prescribed manner. It makes no difference whether he is an Arab or non-Arab. Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O mankind! We have created you from a male and a female, and made you into nations and tribes, that you may know one another. Verily, the most honourable of you with Allah is that (believer) who has At-Taqwa [i.e. one of the Muttaqun (pious - see V.2:2). Verily, Allah is All-Knowing, All-Aware.﴾

(Part No. 7; Page No. 98)

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 21675

Q 7: Is there a Sunnah Ratibah (supererogatory Prayer performed on a regular basis) for Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer?

A: There is no Sunnah Qabliyyah (supererogatory Prayer performed before an obligatory Prayer) to be performed on a regular basis before Jumu`ah Prayer. Rather, it is prescribed that those entering the Masjid (mosque) before the Khatib (preacher) should busy themselves with whatever brings one nearer to Allah, i.e. to offer Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayers, recite the Noble Qur'an and Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), seek Allah's forgiveness, etc. After Jumu`ah Prayer, it is also Mustahab (desirable) for worshippers either to offer two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) at home, or four or six at the Masjid, as mentioned in the Athars (narrations from the Companions).

The first question of Fatwa no. 18097

Q 1: After performing Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, a worshipper discovered that he discharged Wady (a thick white secretion discharged by some men after urination) during the Prayer. Should he repeat it as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer?

A: If a person discharges anything through either of the front or back passages (urethra and anus), such as urine, wind, Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted due to sexual thoughts or desire), Wady or stool while performing Salah (Prayer); it is obligatory to discontinue it, perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation), Wudu' (ablution) and repeat the Salah. If this occurs during Jumu`ah Prayer, one should repeat it as a four-Rak'ah Zhuhr Prayer. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «When any of you breaks wind during the Salah, they should turn away, perform Wudu' and repeat the Salah.» He (peace be upon him) also stated: «Allah does not accept the Salah of any of you if they invalidate their Wudu' until they performs Wudu' \(anew\).» If this is based on doubt or Waswasah (insinuating thoughts from Satan), one should continue the Salah, seek Allah's refuge from Satan, and should not leave. If after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) one notices that something was discharged during Salah, one should repeat both Wudu' and Salah. When a person manages to catches up just one Rak`ah of Jumu`ah Prayer with the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), he should add to it another Rak`ah, and thus he is regarded as having offered it, as stated in the authentically reported Hadith from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

a non-Muslim country, rather, the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer should be offered as well out of prudence after the Jumu`ah Prayer. Is that true or is it sufficient to offer the Jumu`ah Prayer in congregation?

A: The Jumu`ah Prayer is obligatory for the resident Muslims, whether they live in a Muslim or a non-Muslim countries. Q: I went to the Masjid (mosque) to offer the Jum`ah (Friday) Prayer. I offered as many Sunnah (supererogatory) Salahs as I could. Then I started to recite some of the Qur'an. When I finished the recitation, I thought of offering extra Sunnah Prayers. It was almost twenty minutes before the Khatib (preacher) came in to deliver the Khutbah (sermon) when the man sitting next to me grabbed my garment. I sat down to listen to what he had to say. He said that he heard Shaykh Ibn Baz saying that it is not permissible to offer Sunnah Prayers almost half an hour before the Khatib comes in to deliver the Khutbah. Is that true? I also heard that the fire of Hell abates every Friday. Allah knows best.

A: It is not true that I have made such a statement. The correct view is that there is nothing wrong in offering as many Sunnah Prayers as one may wish before the Khatib ascends the Minbar to deliver the Khutbah. Authentic Hadiths have been narrated in this regard. Nothing has been reported from the Prophet to the effect that offering Sunnah Prayers before noon on Friday is prohibited.

Q: What is the ruling on someone who enters the Masjid (mosque) late and jams himself among the people who are performing Salah (Prayer) in the first row so he can stand right behind the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) despite his late entrance?

A: When a Muslim comes to perform the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, he is not permitted to overstep the people, as it is considered an offense to those who are performing Salah and it may either distract them from concentrating on the Khutbah (sermon) being given or disturb their Salah. It was reported in the Musnad (Hadith compilation) of Imam Ahmad: \(A man came and he was stepping over the people while the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was delivering the Khutbah. He said to him: "Sit down. You have harmed the people and have come late."\) Also, it was mentioned in the Musnad and the Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) of Abu Dawud on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Amr (may Allah be pleased with them both) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(There are three kinds of people who attend the Jumu`ah Prayer: A man who attends it to chat with others, thus, his Salah is void; a man who attends it to perform Du`a' \(supplication\) and Allah \(Exalted be He\) may or may not accept his Du`a'; and a man comes to the Jumu`ah Prayer with tranquility and attentiveness, he neither oversteps any Muslim, nor harms anyone, his Salah becomes a Kaffarah \(expiation\) for him till the next Jumu`ah Prayer and three days more; for Allah \(Exalted be He\) says: \(Whoever brings a good deed \(Islâmic Monotheism and deeds of obedience to Allâh and His Messenger صلى الله عليه وسلم\) shall have ten times the like thereof to his credit\)\)

The first question of Fatwa no. 18501

Q 1: Sometimes I cannot recite Surah Al-Kahf on Friday, can I recite it on Saturday morning?

A 1: Reciting Surah Al-Kahf on Friday is an act of Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet), based on a Hadith reported in this regard. If someone does not recite it on Friday, they should not recite it on Saturday instead, as there is no evidence to that effect.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 18762

Q 9: Some people recite Surah Al-Kahf every Friday. They say to those who do not recite it that they should recite it every Friday, because reciting it is a good act. According to them, those who recite it are better than those who do not recite it even if they recite the whole Qur'an. And if someone does not recite it, their reward decreases even if they recite the whole Qur'an habitually.

A 9: Reciting Surah Al-Kahf on Friday is a Mustahab (desirable) act, based on Hadiths related in this regard. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Whoever recites Surah Al-Kahf on Friday will have light that shines for them from that Friday until the next.\) (Related by Al-Nasa'y and Al-Hakim in his Sahih [authentic book of Hadith] through a good Isnad [chain of narrators]). With regard to what is mentioned in the question that reciting Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) other than Surah Al-Kahf on Friday is insufficient, it is a baseless opinion.

Friday Khutbah

Fatwa no. 14619

Q: Some brothers and I decided to offer our services in one of the Masjids (mosques) where we intended to establish our Prophet's Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). We were offering religious lessons and Friday Khutbahs (sermons) till, one day, a brother came and said that he did not want to offer the Friday Khutbah as he was fed up with the Fitnah (temptation) he saw in the streets where Tabarruj (woman's public display of her adornment or charms) and lack of morality are spread among people who are ignorant of the teachings of their religion. He wondered how he could preach to people when he was facing such Fitnah. However, a dear brother said that this should not interfere with preaching to people and that a person will be greatly rewarded by Allah (Exalted be He) for doing so, if he did it for the sole purpose of pleasing Allah (Exalted be He). Is what he said true? Moreover, the first brother was strongly advocating that we should excuse him from delivering the Khutbah to the extent that other brothers began to follow his example. Out of fear of having to close the Masjid on Fridays, we sought the help of other brothers who had to come from remote places.

A: Offering the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, preceded by the Khutbah, is an Islamic Faridah (obligatory act) upon Muslims in every city and village. It is not to be waived by the injustice or sinful acts of people. On the contrary, gathering together for Friday Khutbah and Salah is a good chance to mend any breach of the Shari`ah (Islamic law) that may emerge in society, where the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) has the chance to reform people, clarify the rulings of Islam, and preach to and guide them; a thing that would benefit people both in the worldly life and in the Hereafter.

Q: We offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in our village. Once the Imam who delivers the Khutbah (sermon) was absent, some people offered four Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) and some offered two Rak`ahs behind someone who recited aloud in the Prayer. Please, give us Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah reward you with the best. We implore Allah to preserve you for Islam and the Muslims.

A: Among the conditions of the validity of Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer is delivering two Khutbahs (sermons) containing praise of Allah, the Two Shahadahs (Testimonies of Faith, i.e. testifying that La ilaha illa Allah [there is no god but Allah] and that Muhammad is His messenger), sending peace and blessings on the Prophet (peace be upon him), recommending people to fear Allah and reciting some of the Qur'an that matches the subject of the Khutbah. If there are not two Khutbahs in the way mentioned above, the Jumu`ah Prayer is invalid and people should offer Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, four Rak`ahs (units of prayer), in place of it.

Accordingly, those who offered two Rak`ahs and did not precede them with two Khutbahs, their Prayer was invalid and they should repeat it as a Zhuhr Prayer, offering four Rak`ahs.

The first question of Fatwa no. 17847

Q 1: Some Imams (those who lead congregational Prayer) who deliver Friday Khutbah (sermon) come to the Masjid (mosque) and offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) in one of the corners of the Masjid. Then, they start reciting the Qur'an and when it is the time of the Khutbah, they ascend the Minbar (pulpit). Is this act compatible with Shari'ah (Islamic law)?

A 1: The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to enter the Masjid for the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer when its time was due and he would ascend the Minbar without offering Tahiyat-ul-Masjid or other Prayers. If an Imam enters the Masjid ahead of the Jumu'ah Prayer time and waits, there is nothing wrong with this. But he should perform Tahiyat-ul-Masjid before sitting down. Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah have mercy upon him) said in the context of the Prophet's manner in going out to people on Friday to deliver the Khutbah and lead the Prayer: "He would await until people assemble. Then, he would come out lonely to them without anyone with him shouting to people. He never wore a pallium, a scarf or black clothing. When he entered the Masjid, he would greet people, and when he ascended the Minbar he would turn to them with his face and salute them..." This is part of what Ibn Al-Qayyim mentioned in his book Zad Al-Ma'ad, vol. 1, p. 429.

Thus, among the characteristics of Friday is that a Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) should occupy himself with Prayer, Dhikr (remembrance of Allah) and reciting the Qur'an till the Imam comes out. One of the opinions regarding the 'hour of answering supplication' (in Friday) is that it starts when the Imam sits down on the Minbar until the Prayer is done.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 109)

This opinion is attributed to Al-Nawawy and other scholars according to an authentic Hadith narrated by Abu Musa Al-Ash'ary (may Allah be pleased with him) in this concern.

The first and fourth question of Fatwa no. 20831

Q1: What should the Khatib (preacher) recite during his brief sitting between the two Khutbahs (sermons)? What should the worshippers recite at that time?

A: It is only Mustahab (desirable) for the Khatib to sit between the two Khutbas. This has been proven to be the regular practice of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). By sitting, the Khatib divides the Khutbah into two separate parts and takes a short rest after delivering the first part. Both the Khatib and the worshippers are recommended to busy themselves with offering Du`a' (supplication). This is because Du`a' is more likely to be answered during the period between the Khatib's ascending the pulpit and his leaving the Masjid (mosque). It may be that a supplicant's Du`a' will be responded to during that time.

Q 4: When the Imam (the one who leads in congregational Prayer) is delivering a sermon, and he is ascending the Minbar (pulpit) and holding a cane in his hands, is this considered a Fard (obligatory act), a Wajib (obligatory) [based on a speculative text, according to the Hanafi School of jurisprudence], a Sunnah (supererogatory act following the example of the Prophet), Mustahab (desirable) or just simply Mubah (permissible)?

A: The Sunnah is that a Khatib (preacher) offers his Khutbah (sermon) while standing on a Minbar, following the example of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him).

He should stand at a conveniently average height so that the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) are able to see and hear him well. It is permitted for the Khatib to hold a cane or any thing that he may lean on while giving the Khutbah, if there is no Minbar, so it may help him to achieve composure and restrain his involuntary movements. However, as long as there is a Minbar, he is not allowed to use a cane or anything similar, as it has not been authentically reported that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), after going to the Minbar to preach, held a sword, a bow or a cane in his hand while standing on it. It is only allowed if the Khatib is old and needs a cane to lean on.

Fatwa no. 15618

Q: What was the regular practices and etiquettes of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) upon delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon)?

A: Upon his ascending the pulpit on Friday, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) would turn towards the congregation and say: "Assalamu alaykum (peace be upon you)." During his deliverance of the Khutbah, his eyes is overwhelmed with tears, his voice would rise, and his fear for people is intensified as if he was warning them of an army that was about to invade them. After praising Allah, he would say: "To proceed, the best of speech is the Word of Allah, and the best of guidance is that of Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), and the most evil of matters are innovations, and each innovation is a Bid'ah (heresy in Islam), and every Bid'ah is Dalalah (deviation from what is right)." He used to start off his Khutbah with celebrating Allah's praises. In most cases he would make extensive use of Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) from the Qur'an. Throughout his Khutbah, he would celebrate Allah's praises, offer thanks for His bounties, ascribe Attributes of perfection to Him, explain the principles of Islam, and remind worshippers about Jannah (Paradise), Hellfire and the Day of Judgment. He would also command Muslims to fear Allah, Exalted be He, and would clarify and warn them of the things that incur His wrath and the things that bring about His Pleasure. He (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) used to keep his Khutbah brief. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) stated: \(Lengthening Salah and shortening the Khutbah \(sermon\) is the sign of a man's deep understanding of Islam. So lengthen Salah and shorten the Khutbah.\) (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic collection of Hadith). Whenever he observed a mistake committed by someone, he would never mention the name of the sinner. He would only use such general expressions as "What is the matter with some people who say such and such?" His Khutbah always suited the various circumstances of the congregation. He would sometimes shorten his Khutbah to meet the convenience of the people. His causal Khutbah used to be lengthier than his regular one. He would sometimes address women separately, encouraging them to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and to invoke Allah much for forgiveness.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 111)

Q: Is it permissible for the Khatib (preacher) to deliver a Khutbah (sermon) about the biography of one of the Sahabah (companions of the Prophet Muhammad) (may Allah be pleased with them), the Tabi'un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet Muhammad) or any others who paid great service to Islam, focusing on the great manners and virtues of the person?

A: The Friday Khutbah should not be restricted to recounting biographies. The Khatib should rather command people to fear Allah, offer gentle preaching and clarify for the congregation all the things they may need with regard to their Din (Islam). There is no harm to relate some events of the biography of a righteous man as a means of encouraging people to take him as a role model. However, the Khutbah should not be exclusively restricted to that purpose.

Q: Is it an act of Sunnah (commendable act) or Bid`ah (heresy in religion) if one raises their hands for making Du`a' (supplication) while the Khatib (preacher) is delivering the second Khutbah on Friday?

A: It is not permissible for a person to raise their hands while reciting the Du`a', while the Friday Khutbah (sermon) is in progression, or during the `Eid (feast) sermon. However, it is permissible to raise one's hands while reciting the Du`a' or the Khutbah of Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain). The Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) is not permitted to raise their hands either during Friday or the Two `Eid Khutbahs. Salat-ul-Istisqa' is an exception where the Imam is permitted to raise his hands while delivering the Friday Khutbah or any other Khutbah. It was authentically reported on the authority of Anas (may Allah be pleased with him): «When the Prophet Muhammad \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) prayed for rain during the Friday Khutbah \(sermon\), he raised his hands and the worshipper with him also raised their hands.» (Recorded by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (authentic collection of Hadith)).

Q: It is related in Sahih (Authentic Collection of Hadith) Al-Bukhari, on the authority of Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: (A Bedouin came in while the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) was delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon) and said, "O Messenger of Allah! Our livelihood is destroyed and the children are stricken with hunger. Supplicate Allah for us (for rain)." He (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) raised his hands and supplicated Allah. Clouds hugely gathered in the sky that they became like mountains. And before he had descended from the Minbar (pulpit), I saw rain trickling down his beard.) Imam Muslim and Ahmad recorded (on the authority of Husayn who said: "I was sitting beside `Umarah ibn Ruaybah (may Allah be pleased with him) when Bishr ibn Marwan was delivering a Khutbah to us. When it was time to make Du`a', he started to raise his hands. `Imarah said: "May Allah be displeased with these two hands, for I have never seen the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) going beyond pointing his finger while making Du`a'.) The first Hadith showed the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) raising his hands upon making Du`a'. However, the second Hadith showed the great Sahabi (Companion of the Prophet Muhammad), `Imarah as disapproving of the conduct of Bishr ibn Marwan. How could you reconcile between these seemingly contradicting Hadiths? Please advise us on this matter. May Allah enlighten you and increase you and us in knowledge.

A: The basic rule is that the Khatib (preacher) raising his hands while on the Minbar (pulpit) is only permitted when making Du`a'-ul-Istisqa' (Supplication for rain). Raising the hands on any other occasion has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law). This is because raising the hands during Du`a' is an act of `Ibadah (worship) which should be based on Tawqif (a religious text and not personal opinion). There exists no report to the effect that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) is known to have raised his hands while delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon). The only exception is that when he was reported to have done this while making Du`a'-ul-Istisqa'. That is why this Sahabi (Companion of the Prophet Muhammad) disapproved of Bishr ibn Marwan raising his hands when making Du`a' upon delivering the Friday Khutbah. This is because the Du`a' he was making was not meant to supplicate Allah (Exalted be He) for rain.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 115)

In this way there is no contradiction between the two Hadiths mentioned above.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

A 2: Among the conditions of the validity of the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer is to be preceded by two Khutbahs. They should be delivered orally and it is insufficient to listen to them from a cassette player. As for the reciter, the Imam is enough if he recites the Qur'an properly in the Prayer.
